NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

Windsor, Ont., Sept. 13 (CP)—Passenger traffic on the Detroit River and Upper Lakes was busier in 1937 than for many years, Canadian Steamships Lines officials said today. Regular summer passenger service ended Friday.

Maidstone, Ont., Sept. 13 (CP) — Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Churchill will celebrate their 58th wedding anniversary Saturday next instead of Sunday, the real date. They plan to advance the celebration one day in order not to interfere with their observance of the Sabbath.

Mr. Churchill is 80, a native of Otterville, Oxford County. Mrs. Churchill, 69, was born near Brantford.

Hamilton, Ont., Sept. 13 (CP) —Board of Health inspectors, armed with John Doe warrants, were ready today to lay a bunch action against ship captains charged for smoke and noise nuisance along the bay front. City Solicitor A. J. Pekon has advised Municipal officials the city has authority over bay waters and could force ship captains to obey injunctions against noise, dust and smoke nuisance.

Toronto, Sept. 13 (CP)—Agnes Rooney of Fort William was adjudged the most desirable of a movie star in a "Movie Double" contest at the Canadian National Exhibition here Saturday night.

Thirteen doubles of six glamor stars were selected, each receiving $100. Miss Rooney, an almost perfect double for dark-haired Kay Francis, received in addition $500.

Montreal, Sept. 13 (CP)—Two Toronto men came back to Canada last night from Spain, where they saw service in the Spanish war.

Singapore, Sept. 13 (CP-Reuters)—Members of Singapore Golf Club were amazed when the Colombo Ceylon Times turned up there for a round of golf armed with a shot-gun in addition to the bag of clubs.

A TOUGH JOB—but HEPBURN DID IT

He Balanced Ontario's Budget and Used $9,000,000 Surplus for Tax Reductions

BEFORE the Hepburn administration came into power the old Henry gang had been piling up deficit after deficit.

For the year 1936-37, the Hepburn Government achieved a surplus of over $9,000,000. That surplus is being passed on to you in the form of reduced taxes IMMEDIATELY.

Another Sunshine Budget

Sound management, hard work and a strict "pay as you go" policy has turned former deficits into that substantial surplus. Furthermore, entire Government departments had to be cleaned out to make possible economy of government. All this Mr. Hepburn promised. All this Mr. Hepburn carried out.

Now he promises more sunshine budgets, more surpluses to be passed on to you in the form of reduced taxes.

Where the Revenue Dollar Goes

In the last year of the discredited Henry gang, 42.62 cents out of every dollar of revenue were used for fixed charges on public debt. That left only 57.38 cents out of every dollar of revenue to meet current expenses—education, road maintenance and other public services. Imagine a wage earner having to take nearly half his daily wage to pay the "interest" on his debts!

Today—under the Hepburn Administration—only 25.5 cents out of every dollar of revenue are required to meet fixed charges, leaving 74.5 cents for your public services.

Mr. Hepburn promised sound business management for the Province; Mr. Hepburn has kept his promise.

Debt Reduced $33,000,000.00

In the year ending March 31, 1937, the Hepburn Government showed a gross debt reduction of $33,098,165.39 — the first gross debt reduction in thirty years.

Taxes Reduced

Hepburn's financial policy made possible:

1. Assumption by the Province of the entire cost of Mothers' Allowances, a saving to the Municipal Taxpayers of $2,100,000.00 per year;
2. Assumption of the Municipalities' share of the Old Age Pensions, a saving to the Taxpayers of over $1,000,000.00 a year;
3. Cancellation of the Amusement Tax at a saving of $3,000,000.00 per year;
4. Abolition of Students' examination fees, $170,000.00 per year;
5. Increase of Township Road subsidy from 40 to 50 per cent., $400,000.00 per year;
6. Payment of entire cost of pensions to the blind, $300,000.00 per year;
7. Cancellation of the 20 per cent. levy formerly made upon the Counties toward the cost of Provincial Highways has resulted in a saving to the Counties of over $2,700,000.00 to date and will save this year (1937-38) a further $2,000,000.00;
8. A subsidy of one mill on the dollar was given to every Municipality in Ontario, relieving the Taxpayers to the extent of $2,933,500.00;
9. Reduction in motor vehicle rates of $5 per car will mean a saving to owners of over $2,500,000.00 a year;
10. The rates for Hydro-Electric Power have also been reduced, resulting in a saving to the people of $4,800,000.00.

Carry On, Hepburn!

CHART SHOWS PROGRESS TO PROSPERITY

Canada's progress towards prosperity has been clearly indicated in a chart prepared by the research department of J. J. Gibbons Limited, advertising agents. The chart shows the distance travelled by each factor from the low of the depression towards a point of average prosperity. The line which represents the low of the depression is determined by the lowest index figure recorded for each factor within the first four months of 1933 (when the depression reached its low) ratioed against the index of average prosperity. Average prosperity is determined by taking an average of monthly indices for each factor for the four years 1926-1929.

In detail the chart shows that exports have passed the average prosperity of the four years above mentioned, and that export trade is now 103.7 per cent of that average. The physical volume of business is 118.2 per cent of the average prosperity figures for the four year period of 1926 to 1929, industrial production is 121.9 per cent, manufacturing production 125 per cent; electric power production 232.9 per cent; newsprint production 310.1, mineral production 305.3 per cent, employment 106 per cent.

Below the peak are exports to Empire countries at 78.9 per cent, imports 61.3 per cent, imports from Empire countries 86.9 per cent; iron and steel production 90.8 per cent; automobile production 85.8 per cent. Others below the boom year average are construction, car loadings, farm products prices, wholesale prices, retail sales, common stock prices, preferred stock prices, bank debts, per capita purchasing power, basic factors combined.

That Canada is on the road to prosperity and has made good strides is revealed in this enlightening chart of developments.

SELLING STEEL HELMETS IN SHANGHAI STORES

Stores in Shanghai may be in an undeclared war zone but they are up to business just the same. In basements bargains of steel helmets may be purchased.

One would think they would have sales in just this thing in a city over which shells are bursting and in which bullets fly and carry death to non-combatants in the twentieth century's latest humane method of settling disputes.

Surely this is not an earnest of the possibility of the near future when the people at large will be thankful of the opporunity to buy such protection.

CLUES FROM THE SUN

Probably there are elements in the earth's surface which have not been discovered. And we have had to go to the sun, that orb of today, ninety three million miles away, to find them or hints of them:

Strange lines are found on spectrophotographic photographs of the 1937 eclipse, which indicate something not known in earth's laboratories. Sixty nine years ago a similar discovery was made in an eclipse, the strange lines then found leading to the discovery of helium on the earth. Helium is named after "helios" the sun.

BEAUTY OF DRESS

A girl beautiful enogh to win award has declined a chance to win fame (or notoriety) which would have meant that she be photographed in a bathing suit. Here is one girl with charm enough to win a prize for beauty and firmness of mind enough to express herself and be independent.

Why most beauty tests run to the form of bathing suits is difficult to discover. Why can not great beauty trials be held in street garb or in dress attire?

One would think that the makers of women's attire would put up a battle for a chance for ordinary dress to be used in such shows.

All in all, no matter what the present trend there is a beauty in dress, just as there is in the human form.

The chief evil of war is more evil. War is the concentration of all human crimes. Here is its distinguishing, accursed brand. Under its standard gather violence, malignity, rage, fraud, perfidy, rapacity and lust. If it only slew man it would do but little. It turns man into a beast of prey.—Channing.

The art of walking is at once suggestive of the dignity of man. Progressive motion alone implies power, but in almost every other instance it seems a power gained at the expense of self-possession.—Tuckerman.

EARLY FALL

Now in the burnished afternoon, the sun
Slants sidewise down the brassy heated sky,
Obliquely spearing through the dusty leaves
That tremble though no wind stirs obviously.

The Fall is soon this year though no eye sees
The hint of red, the frost-curled tips of grass,
The time is premature with Autumn's Not waiting for Summer fully to pass.

I have a secret with the hurrying hours—
He comes when trees are royally arrayed;
I think some angel tiptoed up the sun
And spilled the days in tumbling accolade.

CHANCE REMARKS BY POLITICIANS in the heat of the campaign often prove boomerangs, and explanations fail to convince until too late to undo the damage. One thoughtless remark in a speech is credited as having killed the chances of James G. Blaine, a very able candidate for the presidency of the United States. It was made by a clerical supporter of his and just three little words did tremendous damage — "Rum, Romanism and Rebellion." Thus an over eager supporter trying to coin words which would make snappy headlines, perhaps, and in any event sound sonorous, did more damage in a minute to his own side than the opposition could accomplish in the whole campaign.

CONSIDER THE ANT, advice to the sluggard, is apt in the case of an ant which recently made the Front Page. This Little Red Ant stopped a passenger train and prevented a terrible railway accident in joined connections. The Little Red Ant plied a relay of the electric block signal, and joined connections! The Little Red Ant died in the operation, but the light was changed from green to red and the fast passenger train, Ponce de Leon, stopped just in time to avert a serious accident. Again reminds us on what small things some times great events depend.

GERMANS WHO APPLAUDED such sentiments in Schiller's famous play, "Don Carlos," as embodied in the chief actor's declamation "Grant, I beg you, freedom of thought!" took chances on getting in wrong with the secret police. But Hitler's own newspaper smoothed the incident over by saying that the applause was for the actor not for the sentiment. Even this statement would indicate that freedom of thought is verboten as well as freedom of speech, especially if it does not coincide with the approved sentiments prescribed by the administration.

A SECRET OF THE TRADE

The grocer's son was a bright boy — brighter for his age than anyone in the village—and a prosperous career was predicted for him. Indeed, the examiner at the school found him a singularly apt pupil.

"Where does cutlery come from?" asked the examiner.

"From Sheffield, sir," the boy answered.

"Good—very good; and where does lace come from?"

"Brussels, sir."

"Good again; very good," exclaimed the examiner: "Now, where does coffee come from?"

"Ah! You can't catch me" retorted the boy, shaking his head. "I ain't going to tell you that."

"Why not?" asked the examiner in surprise.

"Why not?" said the boy with a knowing wink, "because it's a secret of the trade."

REVELATION

A rich man, wishing to donate clothing to the poor children of his home town, visited a school to find those in need.

He asked the children whose fathers worked six days a week to put up their hands. A few went up.

He continued—five days, four days, etc. At last he asked if anyone had a father who only worked one day a week, and one hand went up.

"What is your name and address, my boy?" he asked.

"Tommy Jones, The Manse," answered the child.

CANADIAN GOLF TITLE TO COOPER

Harry Cooper Beats Large Field For Canadian Open

By Elmer Dolmage
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, Sept. 13—(CP)—Lighthorse Harry Cooper, golf's leading business man, hustled back to the United States today for more tournament money. He isn't going to be annoyed that a National Championship belongs to him. In fact it's just what he needed to improve business.

The Chicago professional, who lived for a time at Hamilton, Ont., before he started one of the most spectacular golf careers on record, won the Canadian Open Championship Saturday with a 72-hole score of 285, five strokes over par and 7 better than the total of Ralph Guldahl, United States Open titleholder. The 1936 winner, Lawson Little, was far back with 297.

It was good for Lighthorse Harry's business to the extent of $1,000 cash, the Seagram gold trophy and one of the world's 4 major titles open to pros. Cooper hasn't been lucky in the national events, never having won the British Open or the United States Open professional crown.

Paul Runyan of White Plains, N.Y., and Al Watrous of Detroit tied for third with 290; Tony Manero was fifth with 292 and Burke tied at 293 with the brilliant young Ottawa professionals, Stanley Horne and Bobby Alston, who shared $600 prize money as leading Canadians.

PICTON

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Sept. 13 (CP)—Market indices dropped to new lows today after opening with a sizeable rally. MARKET COMMENT

Post-mortems on the steep decline of stock market prices last week are many interesting features. No one doubts the enormous influence of a tense European and Far Eastern situation in precipitating the drop. The debatable point is to what degree certain political situation abroad created the heavy selling on the New York Stock Exchange and Canadian exchanges. In this respect, it is enlightening to note that London has been far less apprehensive than speculators we have been on this side of the water.

We on this continent are inclined to attribute other causes to the jittery and panicky attitude shown of traders. In the United States, the regulation of market has been submitted as a major contributory factor to the slump. This has also been given as a reason in London but the cumulative effect of stringent measures to regulate the market from getting out of hand, is claimed by many to be the cause of distress since Labour Day. The effect of this condition, if the premise is correct, is felt not only in Wall Street, is traditionally bound to be in turn, but becomes alleged reason for the sharp downturn in the investment values of industrial business in the United States.

What To Do Now In The Market

What to do now in the market is the question that is being asked. Financial Service very often these days. There seems to be the answer. At present the market appears not far from a level of stabilization. Although cautious short-term trading policy is essential, we advise maintaining sound long-range holdings and selective purchases in periods of re-action.

Noranda

Insiders are known to be bullish on Noranda at this level. The reason for this is not hard to find as the mines ore position is the copper output at a rate of between 6,500,000 and 7,000,000 lbs. per month. Added to this is an output of over 25,000 ounces of gold monthly. Noranda is therefore setting high standards in production, with a gross at present of over $1,000,000 being turned over every 30 days. The value of output is almost equally divided between gold and copper.

Noranda has ore reserves containing gross value of over $40,000,000 at current quotations for metals. Ore recently developed has tended from 3000 feet to 4100 feet in depth and the indications are favorable for the coming year in point of further addition to the ore reserves.

CHINA IS AWAKE IS REORGANIZING SAYS DR. QUENTIN

Laymen's Conference is Held at Albert College

CANADIAN WEST

Historic Albert College in the City of Belleville, was the gathering place for more than 200 delegates of the Bay of Quinte Conference of the United Church of Canada, on Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 11th and 12th. Interested audiences of enthusiastic men of the United Church ranging in ages from youth to middle age and beyond, and representing all walks of Canadian life were given a great knowledge of the functioning of various church branches such as Home Missions, Foreign Missions, Mission Education and Publication, Evangelism and Social Service Work, as leaders of each Department, and other prominent men, set forth their aims and objects and the progress made in executing their purpose, according to the Christian Church.

Speakers who addressed the gatherings throughout the two day sessions included Mr. H. Y. Acker of Bay of Quinte Conference Missionary and Maintenance Committee, Rev. D. G. Ridout, P.R.O.S., associate secretary of the Missionary and Maintenance Committee and Editor of "United Church Record and Missionary Review," Rev. Lorne Semple of Belleville, Rev. Roy Rickard, Oshawa, Rev. R. Bell, Rev. H. P. Quentin of West China, Rev. George Cory, D.D., superintendent of Associate Secretary of Home Missions, Rev. J. H. Arnup, M.A., B.D., Secretary of West China, Rev. Wm. Scott of Rev. Arthur Moore of North China.

Rev. Prof. John R. Watts, D.D., of Victoria University, conducted the devotional exercises for the Conference.

Opening Session

The Conference opened at noon on Saturday with a dinner in the dining hall of the College and Mr. H. W. Ackerman, Chairman presided as chairman for the afternoon session, which included the devotional conduction, and the address of welcome. Rev. D. G. Ridout, M.A., B.D., was the main speaker of the afternoon delivered a splendid address on the work of the Church, group of recommendations made at the Conference of Presbytery Chairmen and Presbytery Missionary and Maintenance Conveners held in Toronto, June 4, at Whitby.

The messages given to this Conference by our foreign missionaries were of the kind that inspired devotion under severe circumstances of our men in Saskatchewan as well as those in the foreign mission field. Rev. Dr. Quentin, a missionary of 30 years in China, challenged our hearts and consciences with new courage the call to a world-wide effort to establish the Kingdom of God.

"In face of other claims to the spiritual allegiance of China, Communism, and in the East, Buddhism, Confucianism and Mohammedanism, we must press claim anew our supreme loyalty to Jesus Christ as the world saviour, the only sufficient motive for life and service.

"We again affirm the individual responsibility of the ministers in the Church of God to bring to their people to sense of their high privilege and responsibility in the information, inspiration, and leadership in missionary work of the whole task of the Church be accomplished all charges should be visited during the year. Arrangements for the year 1937—Such increase in the Forward Movement Fund."

Saturday Evening Session

With Mr. Ackerman still presiding as chairman, the Conference resumed on Saturday evening, an address on "China" by Dr. Quentin, which aroused the audience from slumber and a gigantic wave of re-organization of a most comprehensive character in the Sunday Schooling is going forward with the Church of God Missionary Labour in reconstruction work is improving the country with western ideas being readily adopted. He described a twenty-five mile road building programme by government supervision where no less than twenty-seven thousand workers were employed at one time. Doctors are adopting western means and methods and there is a desire to give them the very best we have to offer. Dr. Quentin includes the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

Dr. Geegy Deeply

Having completed a survey of the drought area of Western Canada, Rev. Prof. Geegy Dr. D., Associate Secretary of Home Mission presented a picture of excellent progress in all branch of the work in spite of the adverse conditions which prevailed there. There is a rugged display of grim determination on the part of these stricken people which is truly inspiring. The most tremendous problems to be dealt with by the Church are found in the western provinces, different nationalities different languages. But as the Church people we seem to lack conviction of its worthwhileness.

"I don't know very much about Christianity," he said, "what I know and much of that is very unconvincing to their cause, but they have a tremendous conviction of the thing which is their belief. If we could inject some of the same fire and conviction into the church there would not be the lack of men to fill the posts vacant in the outposts of our fields mission fields", he declared.

The other speaker of the evening session was Mr. Williams, who spoke briefly on the subject of "Temperance Education." The subject for intellect of present day youth makes a new method of "Temperance Education essential to progress in the work he declared. Youth of today are living in an age of transition of true facts is the only convincing material to place before them, they are too clever to be fooled by fearsome stories they must be shown.

Final Session

The final session of this very inspiring conference took the form of a Missionary Rally on Sunday afternoon to which the public was invited extra chairs had to be secured to accommodate the crowd to this interesting meeting at which Rev. Arthur Moore was chairman. The first speaker was Mr. H. W. Edmunds of the Educational branch of the United Church of Canada, whose subject was "Great steps were being made in the Christian Education work in China with many schools under the sponsorship of the United Church Missionary Society, Toronto, he declared.

The Church of Christ was directly responsible for many constructive changes in the lives of this awakening nation. Experimental farms were being established in many provinces where the lives of people were slowly changing. Only 10 per cent of whole-life beneath the power of Queen's University, Kingston, they witness the progress of our agricultural experiments with cattle and poultry and the results obtained. They are good students and are anxious to learn Christian teaching which we present to them, to awaken in them a desire to learning for the Gospel which makes it all possible. But here too the work is difficult, for as one missionary said, "The million people there is only one human being."

Rev. J. M. Menzies

Rev. J. M. Menzies recently returned missionary from North China also gave a brief address. Taking of medicine and the ancient relics of pottery taken from the tombs of ancient cities Mr. Menzies stated that there had existed in the minds of the Chinese people the belief that God a supreme being ruling over all since 1 B.C. Christianity was introduced and the ancient relics he had found from time to time. We give them western medicine and the result is remarkable doctrine arraments to create the best in the people. In reality the peace of the world awaits a world-wide brotherhood of Christ and while and Christianity is the only means by which it can be secured. Let us answer the yearning of these people with a true example of Christian love in our hearts the hatred of war. They want Christ and God has commissioned you to go into all the world and preach the Gospel.

Rev. Wm. Scott

Rev. Wm. Scott of Korea stated that it had been suggested on more than one occasion that it would be well to let the yellow race continue in their sleep. Keep them in ignorance for the sake of gain for commercial purposes. But this is not right in the sight of God. We must point out the Christian Missionary the world's true friend. Mr. Scott told from the western world came the distillery, Tobacco manufacturer, intoxicants and all in the name of trend of progress. The Church of Christ has also greatly assisted to establish a world wide brotherhood of security and peace.

He came from one of the most interesting and educational departments of the whole field. Rev. Scott described a twenty-five mile road building programme by government supervision where no less than twenty-seven thousand workers were employed at one time. Doctors are adopting western means and methods and there is a desire to give them the very best we have to offer. Dr. Quentin includes the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

Charges Canadians 'Fired'

The plan to build a new power dam was "bribed" by cheaper Hydro rates, the Conservative leader said. He charged that Canadians "fired" $50,000 to Stone and Webster "who have had their eye on Hydro since the days of Sir James Whitney and Sir Adam Beck"—and who received $23,000.

The charge regarding the Boston firm and Hydro, he added: "If you can't prove what I say, ask him to page Mr. Hepburn and make him say it." He continued to deny that there are not the men who gave advice to buy the frequency changer at Chats Falls for $1,000,000.

Power at Cost, Tory Attitude

Mr. Rowe, who said this frequency changer was used three times, promised municipal representation on the Hydro Commission would be restored and the principle of public ownership adhered to.

"Where are our Hydro reserves?" he asked. "I charge Mr. Hepburn with not only running Hydro into the ground, but I charge him with selling it into the ground by engineers from other countries while Ontario engineers are standing by for fear of losing their jobs."

The principle of power at cost would be the Conservative policy, he said in ending his Hydro remarks. Mr. Rowe previously in the address announced the Conservative agricultural policy and steps to be taken in helping the farmer.

HEPBURN ASSAILS

Central Board if the Conservatives win the election, Mr. Hepburn said. That was the reason Conservative Earl Rowe rejected Mr. Hepburn's proposal of a non-partisan Liquor Commission.

Assails W. H. Ireland.

There was "no more bitter partisan in Ontario" than Mr. Ireland, said the premier. His appointment would have been "a joke" and "a contempt" with the toil-gate and other abuses.

At all his northern meetings Mr. Hepburn dealt with his labor policy and his opposition to what he termed the invasion of Ontario by the Committee for Industrial Organization. The organization's campaign in Sault Ste. Marie, Kapuskasing, Cochrane, Timmins, Kirkland Lake, Sudbury, Sturgeon Falls, Little Current and Blind River.

Says Policy Leading.

After speaking at Little Current in the afternoon, he journeyed to Blind River where he addressed a Rotary Rowe of having no definite liquor policy. The Conservative leader said "How Dry I Am" in dry areas and "How Wet I Am" in the wet districts.

As long as he was premier "no agricultural scheme in Ontario was dry section and conversely no dry scheme will ever be put over in a wet section". The Liberals would make no sectional appeals but he would continue the same views in all parts of the province.

Published In Weeklies.

Mr. Rowe showed himself a "rank amateur" in his advertisement used in weekly papers attacking the government's bounty on corn by the encourage the industry north of Sault Ste. Marie. A year ago the Conservative leader criticized the government do something to assist the industry, Mr. Rowe said. Mr. Marks speech.

"Mr. Rowe has this ad published in weekly papers to make an appeal to the farmers but he dare not publish it in the daily press. It was published in the Sudbury and Sault Ste. Marie daily paper at my request and I am glad to take advantage of that city what a rank hypocrite Mr. Rowe is."

Shortly before leaving office the former Conservative government voted $37,000,000 worth of bonds at a price below par and with an interest rate of more than 5½ per cent. Mr. Hepburn said the public had no chance to buy the bonds which were sold to a single purchaser. He also appreciated in value and then sold a portion of between $14,000,000 and $15,000,000.

Story Not Confirmed.

There was no confirmation of reports Spanish officials had received from the British admiral of the British ships, with British patrolling the area off Malta and France the coast to the east.

Italy Unlikely to Act.

Italy was reported to hold aloof from the Nyon Conference and there was no indication Mussolini would participate in the relatively minor role that would befall Italy. British and French Press would undoubtedly welcome Italian support as the policeman of Italy's own territorial waters, the function assigned all nations states at the meeting and there were two advantages Italy connected had been won from the conference.

1. The exclusion of Soviet Russia from the patrol of the main sea routes.

2. The exclusion of Spanish warships from the Mediterranean.

Her complexion is the result of much care.

Loud are the wails of the woman with the florid skin. She looks as if she had just finished a hard day at the wash tubs. And when her rosy face Pretty blushes are hardly meant. And when a blush extends from forehead to chin it is a liability.

What must she do? She must cut down on protein foods and eat less meat, fish, eggs and cheese. Crisp green salads should be her daily fare. Asparagus, green beans, onions, tomatoes and spinach are all good for her. She must avoid fatty foods, condiments and highly spiced dishes. Unsweetened lemonade is a help. If she is a Vermont tea or coffee drinker she must cut down on that, too. .

Rowing is a good exercise for irritations. It draws the water and depleting the blips. But what girl has a river and a rowboat? Never mind. Here is an exercise that stimulates the movements and brings the water to the surface.

Sit on the floor, chest up, back straight, knees bent, feet flat and heels pressing on the floor. Pole the arms in the palms of the hands and extend them until your knuckles touch your toes, bending the body as far as possible. Don't be casual about this. Make your muscles work.

Worry, morbidness, self-pity and brooding stamp they ugly shadows on the face. In course of time one is bound to get a "worried" look. After that is acquired, one might as well give up the pastime of chasing beauty laurels.

Mind and body have a close bond. What affects one affects the other. Unpleasant emotions interfere with digestion. On the other hand, quiet mental nervous system and add years to appearance.

What Shall She Do About Her Husband's Cousin?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm a bride of six weeks, and would be very happy if it were not for my husband's unemployed cousin who drops in at all hours. When this young man first began to come to our apartment I felt sorry for him. Knowing he was unemployed and looking for work, often made him a cup of coffee and gave him something to eat before he started out. But now he has become a pest. Not only does he come, but he has begun to make himself at home. I am sure that my fortunate my husband is to have such a lovely and capable wife.

I don't want to tell my husband about this because I know he'd kick him down the stairs. My husband has become a perfect nuisance, and I believe he's of the type that really doesn't want to work. He lives with his sister, who gives him a little money for carfare. How can I get rid of him?

Newlywed.

Nothing easier. Have a chain put on your door, you answer when you see the pestiferous cousin say, "I'm so sorry I can't invite you in but I'm terribly busy and am just going out," or something of that sort. No reason why you should be bothered with a man of this type.

Accuses Old-Fashioned Wife of Having Dates

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My two children and I came to join my husband in this city, where he had come to get employment during the depression. The first two years we were with him our home life was very happy, but since he has been promoted and does very well with his job, he constantly accuses me of being unfriend and having dates with other men. He is rude and belittling to me before company, or else he entirely ignores me, and seems to get real pleasure in hurting my feelings.

I have never had the least interest in the people of my husband and children, being the old-fashioned type of wife and mother. I hardly know how to treat him under these circumstances. We have been married eight years.

Constant Reader

It looks to me as if your husband must be approaching the "changing age", when there is no telling what a man, who has always been safe and sane, will do next. After eight years of marriage, men sometimes have a feeling which is the equivalent of "last call for dinner in the dining car." Hating to think of growing old, they dream dreams of romance and take it out in nagging are behavior toward the wives.

Try to put up with him. Very likely it's a temporary phase, and after a while he'll become normal.

His Dominie Her Parents' Kindness

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Why are her parents so nice to me, if they don't want me to take their daughter off their hands? I'm a great catch, have a salary of only a hundred a month, am not handsome or regarded as a winner. Yet these people, who own a beautiful home and a new car, and have an only child—their daughter are constantly inviting me to go on trips with them.

I should regard this girl as very alarming in the matrimonial scale, if it were not that her parents have made it plain on a number of occasions that they would be glad to welcome me as a son-in-law.

Being naturally suspicious, I'm wondering if there's anything wrong with the girl.

Dominie.

Perhaps this is a case of the well-known inferiority complex, and as the girl's parents think you're a catch for their only daughter, matrimonially speaking, possibly you have attractions of which you are unaware. They may have discovered you do not smoke, drink or philander (though you have not told me whether you possess these virtues) and that's why you rate nice high in the parents' eyes. Or may see in you qualities that promise future success. Many young men would feel themselves lucky to be in your place.

3RD SIDNEY

3rd Line of Sidney.—Mr. and Mrs. George Parry held a reception at their home, third concession of Sidney, for their daughter Stella, and her husband, Mr. Urvan Gerry, Mr. and Mrs. Parry were just returned from an extended honeymoon trip. The house was tastefully decorated for the occasion, and the table was laden with seasonable delicacies. After the supper the evening was spent in amusements and games and later a delightful crowd was heard. They were invited in by the bride, and the groom, and were most generous with dollars to their captain. Among the guests were the bride and groom were silver, linen and a beautiful dining-room suite, also from the groom's parents. Guests at this reception included, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Perry and sons and Mrs. Parry, Sr., of Frankford, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Simpson and son Thos. Simpson, Smithfield, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Clarke, Tryone, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Saylor and Mrs. Palmer, 3rd line.

Toronto, Sept. 13 (CP)—Five-year-old Shirley Mack of Woodstock, Ont., won the Shirley Temple resemblance prize in a "Movie Double" contest at the Canadian National Exhibition here Saturday night. The dimpled, curly-haired tot received the $100 prize from Lionel Conacher, the "Big Train" of Canadian sport.

Puffs Under Eyes Require Drastic Care

Jane Bryan

Healthful living keeps her facial tissues firm.

(By Helen Follett)

Swollen tissues under the eyes make a woman sorry. She loses heart and is ready to give up too fight for good looks. Let her take heart. Unless she suffers from ill health, it is often possible to defiate the ugly balloons of flesh and skin.

She must avoid fatigue. She must get plenty of sleep and outdoor exercise. She should drink quantities of water.

After the face washing at bed time she must give her face a steaming with hot compresses. That treatment will serve several purposes. It will help cleanse the pores of deposits of dust and sebaceous oil. It will set circulation skipping and it will act favorably upon eye pouches. Then on with cold compresses.

There is more to be done. She should have at hand a saucer containing witch hazel and an ice cube, into which she has dipped pads of cotton and place them over her eyes. Repeat a dozen times.

If you are going in for the rolled cotton pads, be sure that they are only cut for it. Half the success of the treatment depends on the trimming. Stick to the same sheaver if you have found a good one. Some operators don't take off enough of the tress ends, others are content now to stop with too clipping. You have to train them to you special needs.

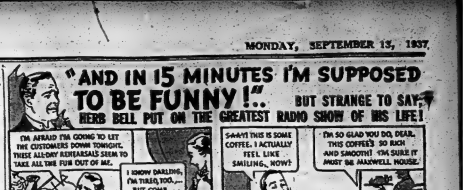
Nothing much can be done when the veins of the eyelids are enlarged. That condition comes to women who do hasty boudoir-her and have their hands in hot water.

Exercise the hands by spreading out the fingers, bringing them into the palms. Before doing that, anoint with cuticle lanoline.

Fashion Flashes

(By Alice Alden)

We rejoice that velvet is so well represented in the smartest new autumn hats. Suny has used black velvet for a charming little hat and has enriched it with a jewel, an ostrich, and altered velvet. Crossed feather whips in black and red accent height.



Always smart is the gown of fine lines, fine fabric and little trimming or detail. So we predict a good time for an evening dress of ripple silver lame done on long, fluid lines. It has a deep decolletage fore and aft and a loosely knotted self-girdle.

A good friend because it will look right in any daytime or informal late afternoon gathering is a surplice dress of black imported silk jersey with a fringe sash of red jersey, the sash loosely knotted so that the long, thick fringe reaches almost to the hemline.

Still they come, those lovely housecoats that have become part of the fabric picture. Any new beauty in black satin is printed in soft rose and green floral design. It has a deep collar of white crystal buttons, and the skirt has self-ruching at each side of the tiers. The hem is very wide, the corsiet waist is very fitted.

Wait until a minute and you'll be charming, for a jigger coat in fur. A useful beauty is made of graduated bands of black Persian lamb, from very narrow to very wide, on black cloth, with the narrowest line of cloth showing between each band.

Matched up again for autumn are hats with bags or gloves. We crave a hat in stitched antelope in a deep fuchsia purple with flowing veil matching velvet to give height. The handbag of matching antelope has pockets of the velvet, also a bow to match.

Train Child to Obey Orders in the Home

Parent Should Refrain From Giving Any He Doesn't Intend to Enforce

(By Lisa Grenelle)

When Mother told the children to rest, the visiting niece started off, but Eunice caught her cousin's arm and whispered something very quietly. Very quietly the two little girls stood behind Eunice's Mother's chair out of sight, making no noise. Mother, engrossed in a discussion with some luncheon guests, did not notice. Only Eunice knew she would.

Eunice knew by experience that if Mother got interested in something else, she forgot about the job she had told to do, and when she remembered, it was too late. Mother had a way of issuing vague orders while in the midst of talk, or when she was about to go off somewhere, and if you just kept quiet and made no objection, she didn't keep after you about it, or see that her order was carried out.

Mother had a lot of things on her mind, which was a great convenience to Eunice, enabling her, with a little tact, to do or leave undone what she pleased. All this she explained to the visiting niece, who soon caught on to the system and tried to introduce it at home, but met with a shocking lack of success.

Different System

The mother of the visiting niece, however, was quiet different from her sister. She kept her mind on one order, and seemed to know without looking whether they were being carried out or not.

"I thought I told you to go up and rest, Eugenie," she would say in a low voice, so as not to interrupt the guests. Eugenie waited, hoping. But Mother, sounding bored from her guests, put Eugenie to rest as they always had to before her that since she was too tired to understand what was said to her, she would have to rest for an hour longer.

The old theory of instant obedience from children has gone out of style, it seems. Methods are more lax now. Aforementioned model children generally are permitted to do as they please, but somewhere before going about doing their father's or mother's business. And that's a good thing, too. It adds understanding, sympathy and tolerance to the relationship.

Should Be Obeyed

Nevertheless, though lenience need not detract from respect, inconsistency does. There is no reason why children should not be trained to obey, but they should be set out on the lawn There were twenty-four people not able to be present.

This re-union marked the occasion of the return of Mr. Fred Woods of Wyoming, N. Y. He was accompanied by his son and daughter Stanley of Leroy, N. Y. Mrs. Woods was formerly Miss Harriet Tuttle, daughter of Rev. Tuttle's former pastor of Cannifton and Sidney. Mr. and Mrs. Woods visited here nine years ago.

Those of the children not present were Harry of Toronto, who has been away over twenty-five years, Mrs. Diamond and Mrs. George Scouten of Belleville. It is interesting to note that Mrs Diamond and Mr. George Scouten with his wife visited here last fall. Mrs. Diamond had been away fifteen years and Mrs. Wood twenty years.

There were seventeen grandchildren and four great grandchildren present at the re-union.

Among the guests present were Mr. and Mrs. Fred Woods, Wyoming, N. Y., Mr. and Mrs. Al Woods and family of Sidney, Mrs. Ted Woods of Sidney, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Woods and family of Sidney, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Woods and family of Sidney, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Mills and Grace of Cannifton, Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Lough and family of Chatterdown, Mr. and Mrs. J. Bell of Belleville, Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Campbell and family of Trenton. (Madoc Review please copy.

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton, M.D.

THE DRY DIET IN EPILEPSY

During the search for the cause of epilepsy research has been going on), one research worker has discovered that during the period of days during which time not one of them had an attack. As soon as the unconsciousness due to having a number of attacks every day, it is thought that the starving of the foods had something to do with causing the attacks of epilepsy.

Other researchers then found that by cutting down on the starchy foods and increasing the fat foods the attacks could be prevented or were less severe.

There is much water in the body, especially in the brain and the starchy food is a factor in causing epileptic attacks. We later demonstrated.

The result today is that in large number of cases a special diet cuts down on the water and starch foods and increases the fat, enables the patient to keep free of attacks. There are, of course, a number more who, in addition to following this special diet must also use a tablet of phenobarbital or luminal daily.

It would seem that just as diabetes is caused by a lack of insulin in the pancreas, so epilepsy is caused by a lack of something from some gland or organ in the body, and just as diabetes can be controlled by the addition of extra insulin, so can an epilepsy be controlled by increasing the fats and cutting down on liquids and starchy foods.

What is called the Dry Diet for Epilepsy is outlined by Dorothy Kay, in the Journal of Mental and Nervous Diseases.

Breakfast: Fresh fruit: dry cereal with measured amount of cream or milk; buttered toast; eggs; coffee—a measured amount.

Dinner: One potato; one other vegetable; serving of meat, fish or cheese; bread and butter; custard or junket.

Supper: Raw vegetable salad; fresh apple salad or celery; choice of unbuttered sliced cucumber, or cookies, custard or junket, jello; tea or coffee—a measured amount.

The total daily amount of fluids (tea a drink or in the food) should not be more than 36 ounces—three glasses or four cups. Although the solid foods in the above diet contain half this amount of water, it would mean that not more than two cups of liquids should be taken daily.

Family Reunion

WOODS FAMILY

Sixty some years ago in the little spot known as the Allen Settlement (now known as Cooper) John Woods and Catherine Long were united in marriage. There were born ten children —two girls Margaret (Mrs. F. Diamond of Salmon Arm, B. C.) and Annie (Mrs. O. Mills, Cannifton, Ont.) and eight boys, Joseph and Beatty who both died in childhood, Frederick, Alfred, William, George, Harry and Frank. The later two being twins.

On Sunday Sept. 5th five of these children with their families gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Woods, 4th of Sidney for a happy reunion. The day was passed in renewing many old and dear ties yet the older generation spent many moments in re-calling days gone by.

Their thoughts also went out to those not present.

Pictures were taken of three generations. At one o'clock thirty-three people sat down to a bountiful dinner, Tables were set out on the lawn

WOMEN WHO HOLD THEIR MEN
NEVER LET THEM KNOW

No matter how much your heart aches and your eyes scream, your husband, because he is only a man, must be kept from what you are suffering. Many women have let her husband drift away by ignorant slips that she is a victim of periodic pain.

If the above condition applies to you you have told another how to go "middle of the road" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorder. Many women must endure in the three periods of life. It helps build up resistance against nervousness. Try it yourself. Don't be a three-quarter woman. Take LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND and see. Adv.

AT THE CAPITOL
Commencing Wednesday "Ever Since Eve"
Somewhere in the cast of nearly every picture filmed there's a comedian. It's a film formula. Here comes and go, but good comedians remain in their popularity year after year, as long as they keep willing and able and work, Hollywood has a place for them.
Prominent among the comedy players who are in constant demand at the studios are Frank McHugh, Allen Jenkins, Hugh Herbert and Patsy Kelly. Each of them has carried the burden of dozens of pictures.
A genius for light comedy characterization, Patsy Kelly is top-ranking stardom, a position which she maintains with ease. And then there's Robert Montgomery, whose flair for comedy has won him an enviable position as a film star whose services are always in demand.
All of these fun-makers — and more—are included in the cast of "Ever Since Eve", which comes to the Capitol Wednesday on one of the most entertaining double features shows ever offered in this theatre. Instead of one comedian, this delightful film has Marion Davies and Robert Montgomery in the starring roles, and Frank McHugh, Louise Fazenda, Patsy Kelly and Allen Jenkins supporting them.
Miss Davies, actress who can play a dramatic role as well as a farcical one—Miss Davies has found the going smooth for her as a comedienne. So, despite the fact that she's never before starred in a comedy, a dramatic role alone sticks to the saucy, light roles which have won her her fame.
Off the screen, Robert Montgomery is a very serious person. For a long time, he has been pretty strongly about some of the ridiculous things he's had to do on the screen. Here are just a few of the things he's been forced to in script requirements to publicly submit to: Getting sprayed by a hose, giving a baby a bottle, making love to a statue, in the finished film. In these things made for laughs, but on a large sound stage, surrounded by dozens of actors and technicians, it's very difficult for the serious gentleman who has to do it all.
Screen veteran Louise Fazenda has been making movie audiences laugh for nearly twenty years. As a young girl, she won her first chance at a movie part by posing on blackface.
Frank McHugh practically never laughs on the screen. He's usually pretty doleful about something. But the audience laughs. Maybe the secret of his success as comedian. He has the rare genius of making his misery comic.
Patsy Kelly's first role in a feature length film was in support of Marion Davies, star of "Ever Since Eve." A natural-born hard- pusher, she mockingly attributes all her success to Irish luck.
As for Allen Jenkins, the "doubting Thomas" of the movies, comedy is second nature for him. "Dumb" roles are his forte, although he is never dumb in real life, But that's his movies!

Meet Nero Wolfe"

Rex Stout's famous sleepy sleuth comes to rib-cracking life on the screen in the grandest mirth-and-murder movie in months! He's the favorite man-hunter of millions... the famous beer-loving, murder-solving amateur detective—Nero Wolfe! Movie audiences will meet him for the first time "Meet Nero Wolfe" which will open at the Capitol Theatre on Wednesday as Hit No. 2 on this smash double bill.
With just a bottle—or two—of beer, Wolfe solves three baffling murders committed with a gold club —a beetle—and a snake! He can make a four-flusher out of Fritz Vance and a stay out of Sherlock Holmes! As the old saying goes it's fun to be fooled by Nero Wolfe!
"Diamond Jim" Steward Arnold exacts the role of Nero Wolfe with Lionel Stander as Archie Goodwin Wolfe's famous stooge. Others in the large cast are Victory Jory, and Joan Perry.

AT THE BELLE
May Francis, Errol Flynn, Ian Hunter in "Another Dawn"
Going far afield for a picturesque setting for a movie, Warner Bros. this time chose Iraq (which used to be Arabia) as a locale. They placed it in British garrison there, had its members surrounded by wild natives and offered the problem of how the soldiers and the officers and wives were to be saved....if saved they might be.
"Another Dawn" is the name of the picture. It is scheduled for presentation at the Belle tomorrow (Tuesday) and Wednesday, matinee daily. Add to that situation the fact that May Francis is the lady most chiefly concerned.... and that the two men who love her are Errol Flynn and Ian Hunter and both of them are in the British garrison.... and you have the ingredients of real drama.
It all makes a very thrilling movie and provides a background that is up to the top of the list among the action and romance pictures of the year.
Errol Flynn is said to surpass his performance in Hal Hisbory-making movie, "The Charge of the Light Brigade" and it is said too, that Hunter (once the kid of all romance girls in London) has the best opportunity that has come to him since the Warners imported him to play the Duke of Albera in "A Midsummer Night's Dream".
There are mountains and deserts and a lot of fighting and some extremely daring action in "Another Dawn", the producers declare. Also a stirring climax when the time comes for one or the other of Miss Francis' adorers to save the garrison.

The man who directed "The Story of Louis Pasteur" and "The Life of Emile Zola".... William Dieterle... guided the making of "Another Dawn". Besides the three stars the cast includes such prominent players as Frieda Inescort, Herbert Mundin, Billy Bevan, Clive Cook, Mary Forbes and G. P. Huntley, Jr.
"Third Zit", a very funny multiple-reel Joe Palooka comedy, and the Vitaphone Varieties and Sid C. Hartine arriving to protect Americans from stupidity and comprehensive of history in the making.
"You Can't Have Everything"
Rhythm, sweet, trembly and lowdown; heavenly song hits by Gordon and Revel; scrumptious girls; parade of personalities headed by Bits and Pieces, Don Ross, Alice Faye, Louise Hovick, Hubbuch and his vocal-ists; Ozzie Nelson, trumpets and honey crooners; dancing lines like rain on the roof; the funniest antics ever seen on the Broadway stage....
20th Century-Fox includes everything for a smash hit in "You Can't Have Everything", stupendous new musical fun show promised at the Belle tonight for the last time with a very thrilling newsreel, and a funny and clever Walt Disney silly Symphony in color "Woodland Cafe."

Giants and Cubs Each Split Over Weekend, But Stage a Torrid Struggle in National

Cubs Still One And One-half Games Astern Giants As Last Dash Sees

FINE HURLING

Despite Hitting Slump Yankees Seem Certain

(By Sid Feder)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

The National League pennant picture, folks, is as clear as a cup of coffee in Hank's Hash House.

One week, the Cubs are going strong and the Giants look no better than place; the next week, the Cubs fall apart and the Giants look like a sure third, straight from the feedbox.

Then both get hot—and now anything can happen.

The Brooklyn races went into their final and deciding three weeks today, and, although the Giants are a game and a half in front, the things is no nearer being decided than it was last April.

Over in the American League, meantime, the Yankees, despite their hitting slump, looked certain. Sporting a 10-game lead, and with no one doing much about overtaking them.

The picture changed little yesterday as the Giants and Cubs each split, although the Yanks took a half game of their lead by gaining only an even break with the Senators, while the Tigers were taking the White Sox apart 4-0 behind Tommy Bridges' three-hit hurling in a single game.

The Giants had the unpleasant prospect of tangling with the Bees' two old "Gas" Brooks sensations, but they got by Lon Petts 8-1 in the opener. Jim Turner then set them down 6-4, handing them their third setback in their last nine starts.

Cubs Split

The comebacking Cubs pitchers turned in a pair of fair-enough jobs in breaking even with the Phillies, though Pirates, Larry French tossed a four-hit shut out for a 5-0 decision in the opener and then Bill Lee dropped a 4-3 affair in the nightcap, although his pitching was good enough to take a lot of ball games.

By far, the best showing of the day was turned loose (believe it or not) at Yankee Stadium. Young Ken Chase, with a seven-hitter, hooked up with Red Ruffing, with a five-hitter, in the contest, and Ken won 3-1. Lefty Gomez fanned eight and allowed just five scratches to take the nightcap 7-1 from Ray Phelps with the help of Joe DiMaggio's 42nd homer.

Bob Weiland's five-hit 3-0 win in the nightcap enabled the Cardinals to break even with Cincinnati after the Reds took the first game 10-7. Then, in the second Cardinal split, Brooklyn taking the second game 8-5 on a homer with the bases loaded by Eddie Wilson, after the Phils outlasted them for a 4-3 tenining with in the opener.

An eight-run ninth inning gave the Red Sox a 13-6 win over the Athletics. The "Always-Good-at-Home" Cleveland Indians showed the home folks how to play ball, performances over the Browns, 6-3, and 5-0, the latter giving Johnny Allen his 11th straight win, with a four-hitter.

OSHAWA PLAYS INSPIRED BALL

Ponies Defeated 6-2, Turney Only Allows Four Hits

Kingston Sept.13—Oshawa today were fast one game from the Central Ontario Baseball League championship by virtue of Turney's 6-2 victory over Kingston Ponies Saturday. They played again this evening in Oshawa. A victory for Kingston will force a deciding game at Kingston Wednesday.

Oshawa unleashed a powerful attack to beat Kingston's ace hurler, Trey Packnowski. They slammed out a dozen hits, collecting a five run by Tom Foley, who collected three hits during the fray. On the other hand Turner, Oshawa pitcher buried his best game of the season when restricting Ponies to four hits, one of them a home run by Bob Elliott and another a triple by Hal Buck.

Rowdon, May and Jubenville had eighteen assists between them with Jubenville handling seven. The Oshawa team rolled up twenty assists while Wallace at first base turned in twelve put-outs.

PT. ANNE WINS BY 18-8 SCORE

Defeat Long Branch; May Meet Orillia Here on Wednesday

Scoring with consistency and in all but three innings, the Point Anne Canoers defeated the Long Branch nine in a third and decisive game of the three game intermediate O.A.S.A. playdowns at Long Branch Hope on Saturday when Clem "Clementman" Weir won by an 18 to 8 score. The Point Anne Club meets Orillia in the second round series which may open in Belleville on Wednesday.

Lorne Bateman was Skipper Sedgely's choice as the "Clementman" moundsman, the former Springbrook fireball hurler literally coasting through easily until the ninth, when the winners eased off slightly, permitting the Long Branch team to score four of their eight runs. Bateman struck out nine and two walked three, whereas Grayer, the Long Branch hurler, walked nine and only struck out five, as the winners wielded potent bats, hitting well in the clutches. Sedgely started a rally for the "Clementmen" in the eighth with a double out, he hit a circuit blow before the dust had settled the "Clementmen" had scored four big runs. They duplicated this feat the very next inning.

Bateman assisted his own cause throughout as he contributed a timely circuit blow in the sixth and added a single that netted him a run in the ninth. Gaulin, clever, white-head and Genereaux led the Clementment at the bat, however, each counting three safe blows.

Dickey had a total of one head blows. Rutledge and Wren were the only Long Branch batters to meet with success while hitting at Bateman's slants. The Long Branch nine, with the Grayer brothers as a battery, were restricted to ten hits, only one of which was for extra base.

The Point Anners cuffed the offerings of Grayer for a total of 16 safeties, however.

The lineups:

Long Branch: Rutledge, Smith, Lawson, Waterson, Williams, Kikeley, Wren, Grayer and Grayer.

Point Anne: Genereaux cf, Dickey lf, Murray lf, Gaulin 2b, Merav 3b, Owen c, Whitehead 2b, Merav 3b, and Bateman p.

PERTH IS OUT OF PLAY-OFFS

Perth-Cornwall Bisons Fall to Defend Can.-American Title

(By The Canadian Press)

It's an all-American playoff in the Canadian-American Baseball League this week with Gloversville of Gloversville defeating Oswego 7-6 on Opdenbergh Cobb's home run in the final playdowns. Oqdenburg Colts are leading two games to one in the semi-final series with Gloversville, Oswego, and the best three out of five series which at the two teams will meet Gloversville.

After dropping a 4-1 decision to Oswego Saturday Perth suffered a 1-0 setback yesterday to fade out of the play-off picture. In Saturday's games Klinkert and Spetrick slammed out homers to give Gloversville a 4-1 decision. In Saturday's game Klinkert, Spetrick and Yesterday Klinkert, Glovers heavy-hitting centrefielder, banged out another homer to break up a tight pitchers' duel between Ferguson on Bisons' mound, and Whitey Tulacz. Both moundsmen were at their best until Klinkert here fanned six and Dickinson three. Ferguson allowed seven.

Oswego nets bowed 7-3 to Ogdensburg Saturday after losing Friday's game 21-3 but retained yesterday with a 5-2 win over Colts. Opdenburg on Saturday's game on ice in the sixth inning when a six-run splurge broke a 2-2 deadlock.

Yesterday Henry Lukas kept Colts' bats in check and gained credit with his own game with a two-run single in the second and then in the seventh Al Clowsen's single sent in two more tallies to give nets a triumph that kept them in the money series for another day at least.

ORIOLES NOSE OUT BISONS FOR PLAY-OFF

Curtain Rung Down on International Four in Playdowns

By The Associated Press

The International League season is a thing of the past for four of the circuit's teams but for Newark, Montreal, Syracuse and Baltimore things are just getting hot.

These four clubs will battle in the annual Governors' Cup series, which opens Tuesday with Newark, champions of the league by 25 1-2 games in the regular season, meeting the third place Syracuse Chiefs and the second place Royals playing Baltimore fourth in the final standings at Montreal. Each series will be played on a four out of seven basis.

The Bears tuned up for the playoffs by downing the Orioles in a double header yesterday 3-4 and 6-5. Jack Wilson limited the Birds to eight hits in the opener and John Whitehead, recently purchased from Kansas City, won the night cap.

Jersey City Giants, a now club in the league this season, ended a disastrous season by losing a double header with Syracuse winning 8-3 and losing 2-1.

Royals trimmed Toronto twice 2-1 and 10-5 and Rochester Red Wings downed Buffalo Bisons, 6-4 and 7-3.

Final standings for the league's 56th season:

THREE RECORDS ARE BROKEN AT HAMILTON

Hilda Ince, Junior, Heralded as Future Champion

Hamilton, Ont., Sept. 13.—(CP)—Paste the name of Hilda Ince in your hat as a sure bet for the Canadian track and field team that will go to Tokio for the 1940 Olympics.

Hilda is a long time until 1940 and Hilda, a comely Toronto blonde, is only a junior in track, but all she has to do to make that team is to run as she is running now.

Miss Ince, a 100-pound bundle of energy, and with no more than 20 seconds with no one to press her, Jeanette Dolson turned in the same time, and didn't look as impressive in winning that event from senior girls.

After the day long meet, in which more than 250 outstanding athletics competed, a committee named the following team for consideration as members of the Canadian team to go to Australia for the Empire games in February:

Girls Springs, Jeanette Dolson, Toronto, and Irene Bleasdell, Montreal; Hurdles, Roxy Atkins, Toronto; running and broad jumps, Isabella Miller, Hamilton. Mrs. Jack Brown, Gordon McHenry and Lacy O'Connor.

BUDGE WINS U. S. TENNIS

Defeats Gorman After Torrid Five Game Match

By GAYLE TALBOT
Associated Press Writer

New York, Sept. 13.—(AP)—The long tennis war has ended; Donald Budge has the United States tennis championship needed in his bursting net, and now there's nothing to do but worry for the next 12 months.

The worrying will be about events by divided between Budge, who is now an austere young man, and officials of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, who put a pile of money in the treasury the last 10 days because Budge was playing in their show.

When Budge won that fifth and final set from Baron Gottfried von Cramm of Germany to take the singles crown, 6-2, 7-5, 6-1, 3-6, 6-1, adding the United States championship to his "world" title won at Wimbledon, he parlayed himself, at no speak, into a large sum of currency.

He could, by turning professional, assure himself something like $100,000, which is more than some of the kids he has been playing with lately can expect to make in a lifetime. Anyway, both Ellsworth Vines and Fred Perry, who preceded Budge into the money ranks, are popularly believed to have salted away that amount in the past year.

The money is there for Budge, but the tennis fathers, faithfully, that he won't touch a cent of it for another year.—al. least.

CALLING 'EM:

Between the Lines

Ken J. Colling

Bill Fry, local O.R.F.U. convener, leads Lou Brooks, Peterborough, who holds a similar office in that district, a sporting proposition from the week end. It seems the Lake Shore O.R.F.U. group only has three clubs as yet functioning, Lindsay, Cobourg and Peterboro. The Lake Shore moguls felt two home games were not sufficient to cover the year's expenses. The game situation looks good in this district however, but the travelling is much shorter, Belleville only having one loop to Kingston and one to the Airport, a much different contrast than when it cost the local pig-skin chasers anywhere up to $500.00 a year for travelling expenses alone.

With a three teamed set-up each club has two idle playing dates available for exhibition games throughout the season's schedule. For instance when the Kingston Garrison and the R.C.A.F. are playing, the Belleville squad or Mr. Brooks' representative at Mr. Brooks was—when Belleville have their idle two days they will play a home and home series with Peterboro, the R.C.A.F. can do likewise with Lindsay and undoubtedly the Kingston Garrison would accept a same proposition with Cobourg. This would give each club three home games before the group winners of each group advanced to the O.R.F.U. finals, a three teamed Convener Fry today. Incidentally since the Lake Shore group affiliated with the O. R. F. U. three years ago Belleville and Peterboro football squads have engaged in four games. Of these each team won two and lost two, or a Peterboro-Belleville series of this nature should prove popular.

In the meantime the Belleville squad is holding nightly workouts under the arcs at the Collegiate campus. It's not too late here for candidates out for practice yet boys. Let you remember when Lawrence Little, 26-year-old San Francisco, blasted Canadian open golf records when he shot 72 holes in 271 strokes at St. Andrews, Toronto, one year ago today. Giving par a beating in every round, the burly shotmaker finished eight strokes up on Jimmy Thomson, Shawnee-on-Delaware ace.

Frank Sedory's Point Anne softballers made no mistake in Fort Hope Saturday, the Consumers springing the wilter with 18 runs to garner to triumph over the Long Branch nine by an 18 - 8 score. The victory elevated the Ox Point nine into the intermediate "Z" final, it is expected the Consumers will next meet the Orillia team here on Wednesday. Lorne Bateman hurled for the winners. Neither Point Anne softball squad to ten scattered hits, as matter of fact the Consumers literally crucified, although the Long Branch squad scored first, but a four run splurge in the second put the men of Sedory well up and there they remained, despite the fact the Orillia waterboys nine staged a four run rally in the ninth. With Long Branch it was a case of win the toss and lose the game.

For those interested in softball however, there is to be a third and deciding O.A.S.A. game played here in Belleville this evening, Napanee Ack Maze meeting Harmon in a third and deciding game in Belleville.

About sundown this evening Oshawa should about have tucked away their second consecutive C. G. B. L. pennant. On Saturday the Motor City nine moved into the Limestone City and gave the homesters a decisive 6-2 trouncing. Johnnie Turner collected the heralded Tony Packowski from the barrier to the wire. Turner only allowed 4 hits, the two Kingston runs being scored on Buck's triple and an error and Elliott's homer. Tommy Foley, fleet-footed Oshawa centre fielder, grabbed off a trio of baggers last time out right out of the park in Kingston, and that's no mean effort.

Fully a month between the right and centre fielders and bounced over the fence for one of the longest drives seen this season in Ida is a good many seasons as a matter of fact. Oshawa's star backstop Harry Turner set off scribes attnitions, as Bill Osborne sewed played steady ball behind Turner.

With their backs to the wall and facing elimination in defeat, Ponies move into Oshawa for the fourth game of the series, Oshawa having two ends. It will undoubtedly be Biddle versus either Williams or Jamieson.

Neither the Giants nor Cubs gained much ground over the week end, the clubs each splitting with their opposition. The Giants still enjoy a one and one-half game lead, however. The Giants had enough schedule for the next three weeks and it should be a very interesting duck down the National League home stretch, that is if neither club cracks.

The curtain was rung down on the 54th season of the International League yesterday, the Eastern being the last minute splurge of the season. Baltimore, who nosed out the Buffalo Bisons for the fourth play-off position.

The Perth-Cornwall Bisons dropped out of the Canadian-American League playoffs, being eliminated by the Gloversville-Oswego nine. Perth won the league title last year.

MISSING GIRL

By Maryse Rutledge

CHAPTER XXVII

JANE LEAVES TONY

Now that she had lost all that meant life to her, nothing could have held Jane to the luxury of the beautiful suite in the Orillon where she had been so madly happy with Tony. Her flight from Tony in his room overlooking Paris was one she had to make. Her arms was too cruel a strain. She felt her strength shrinking with every breath through them. Ugly words that would sear forever.

His dark face changed, his eyes cold as any ice, he said at last: "... each repeatedly pervert you from joining one of the most unscrupulous women in Europe. But if you have any dignity or any sense you'll say here until you have your alimony. The divorce will be very quiet. I'll send my lawyer to you tomorrow. Naturally you will be well provided for." He added spitefully: "I promise you I'll do everything I can to spare Cedric's mother, not because you mean anything to me, but because I'm sure because I'm deeply sorry for her."

Jane listened to him, her eyes on the blue of twilight, with shadows drawn under them. "I don't care who you are, I'm not taking alimony. You've got your earrings back. He took them because Tony wanted him play baccarat with her as Stephen-the-Baine. So he gave a red check there. If his mother ever hears about that or how he died, it will kill her."

"I'll cover the check." Tony curtly promised her. "Anything else you haven't told me?" He had turn ed his long profile toward the window.

"No, except that I am going away tonight—that I have to accept a few thousand francs from you tonight in lieu of notice now—" Her throat closed.

Tony furiously pulled out his wallet, the Duke Kaye temper gathered along his brow. "You insist on dramatics? I insist that I'll have no divorced wife of mine wandering around with no money. That shall be settled later. Here's five thousand for the present." He thrust the notes at her. "I must beg of you while you still carry my name to behave yourself."

In the arrogant carriage of his shoulders, the steely line to his mouth, Jane didn't see how terribly shaken and hurt he was. Perhaps even then, if she had gone back to his arms they would have closed around her. But her sheltering pride sung its equal to him. She held her bright head high as she took the French notes. "I'll consider this a loan I'll pay some day. As for your threat, I'll take my chances for Lorna. I'm Jane Carey from now on." With that she flung her beautiful dreams to the winds.

They started forward. His arms went out as if to crush her to him or to strike her. Then, abruptly, he wheeled and strode to the door. "I'm sorry it must end like this," he said, and was gone.

So at nine o'clock that evening—the hour when the Anthony Kayes were due at Mrs. Forrest's—smart dinner—Jane walked out of the Hotel Orillon with a hastily packed valise, and her heart in dust and ashes. The princess Tcherni was the only woman her desperate bright picture. But at night she lay alone, her hands clenched, the bitter taste of salt and rust in her mouth that only those who have suffered much can know. With closed eyes she thought of Tony standing over her. The cynical little lines around his mouth so fierce in passion, the fine hands so gentle in caress. Her longing was like an open, smarting wound that could her cry out to the darkness. Lorna had his now. Some day he would find out about Lorna, but Jane would be his punishment. Why hadn't she told him that Lorna was is Paula's mistress! No—too late—and too late.

The Princess wasn't pleased with her. "You really must be more gay, my dear. And her big, strong features could grow very hard. You will smile when you wear my gowns. A young smile, not so? For it is known that I dress only very young women. You are for the pure." And then she called another kind of smile.

A few days after that they met Mr. Elmer Dixon. There was that in his kind, plain face that attracted Jane. He was as far away as a man could be from Tony's dark, restless good looks or the Comte la Paule's foreign charm. And he was a widower in his forties.

The Princess spoke to Jane of Mr. Dixon when they were dining alone one evening in the small room she had taken not far from the shop.

"I wish you to be nice to him," she said, in a tone of command veiling her voice. "I am not doing well in business. I have indeed the relentless stamp of fatigue in the harsh lines. I could lighten so wonderfully, she sat bolt upright in the tiny salon that gave no hint of her former luxurious life. "Entertains," she went on, not looking at Jane. "You have not heard from Tony?"

Jane shook her head. "A letter from his lawyer." She stared down at her father's monotonous sting, which now she always wore. "I'm seem terribly selfish," she said impulsively. "I realize I'm an expense to you, and I'll try to do better."

She pushed aside the unpleasant little thought that in the five thousand francs she had handed over to Katia, she had received back only a few hundred as pocket money. Of course there had been the trip and the rent of the villa, and food.

The Princess rose to pat her shoulder. "Do not worry, my cherie. I fear I am growing old from too much living and knowing. Monsieur Dixon is very rich. He may put money in the shop if you will be—friendly." Jane's quick movement didn't escape her. "Oh, I mean, on tout bien, toute honnete—in all good and honor. He is what you call 'stand pat.' It will would perhaps shock him to know rugged, homely features relaxed. "You were being divorced." She glanced at Jane and added slowly: "It is better you never speak of any past—or anything. You will accept my advice." But again it was a command.

Mr. Dixon's manner was reassuring, Jane found indeed with his old indifference. He hovered around Jane, his brown eyes gentle behind their glasses as if he were gazing at some rare flower that needed care.

"I'm not one to talk much, he said to Jane. They stood on the beach watching the brilliant spots of bathers splashing the seas. "I've lived a simple life, but when my wife died, [illegible] it seemed pretty much over. We—never had any children."

"I know what it is to be lonely—to have no one." Jane answered softly.

"I suppose you do." Mr. Dixon gave her rather more of a searching glance than usual. Then his

"Well, I gave up my business," he said, as if however talking to himself, "I've been travelling around the world ever since, learning all I could. This Princess, now, she's a type of woman I've never met before. Good friend of yours, isn't she? I mean she treats you right." And again his eyes were unexpectedly keen behind the glasses that pinched his broad nose.

"Oh, yes, Katia and I get on very well together." Jane assured him a little quickly. And she changed the subject, conscious of a slight discomfort.

For that week she hadn't liked Katia as much. There were things going on in the shop Jane's incrating distrusted. Some of the loveliest women in Biarritz were sometimes closeted in a back room with the Princess, and when they came out they were pale, often on the verge of tears. Jane had heard Katia raised her voice one day: "You can't do that, Katia. My maid stole those letters. I never—" and then the voice had died down under Katia's shrewdly whisper. Jane dared not yet name to herself the other abominable business in which her friend might be engaged in. But when or if she were surprised? And then, came the creeping fear—where could she go, what could she do unless she did accept the small fortune Tony's lawyer had proposed to her? That never.

Even Mr. Dixon was growing more difficult. "Look here, Miss Carey," he said one day, and once more his eyes were surprisingly penetrating for so mild a man of inquisitive, but I'd like you to tell me something about yourself. You're a very handsome young lady," he added, half playfully.

"I am—" And Jane stopped short, the color flooding her lovely face. Only last night Katia had reminded her of her promise to answer no questions concerning Jane's father or mother. It wasn't her affair, Katia had said, but Mr. Dixon's business. "There's nothing to tell," she ended rather lamely.

"That's too bad," he said with unusual truculence. His brooke the amazing silence with: "You know, I'd do a lot for you. You're so sweet. But, well—there are a few things I don't understand. Mind if I look in there?"

"Why should I mind?" Jane had learned to abhor her confidences. But this interview left her thoroughly and puzzled. The next time she saw Mr. Dixon, she decided, to be frank in spite of any promise.

But he vanished unaccountably for a few days, during which the Princess Tcherni's mood was so strange that Jane kept away from her as much as possible. She was sure now that Katia had done something to Mr. Dixon that had put him off both of them. And she was also sure that the shop was rapidly approaching when she and Katia must have a brutal reckoning that would end their relationship. In her unhappy heart Jane knew how much what happened after that.

TARZAN THE MAGNIFICENT

(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

Interlude

By THERESIA M. LIBBY.

McClure Newspaper Syndicate
WNU Service.

She was running away. Running away from everyone she knew and everyone she loved. Her mind went clickety-click. Like a stupid machine turning in its cogs. The lavender dress she would not take. The chiffon dress—no need for that. She did not hesitate—quickly and surely she sorted the needed things on the bed.

A few moments later, in the deserted station, came remorse. "Where be the waters to drown regret" Oh, why had she done this? David hadn't meant to be unkind; he hadn't meant to be unfaithful. Heart pain too deep for tears, and the knowledge that it was too late to turn back. David had said she hadn't any spunk. She wouldn't go back. Perhaps some day—but he wouldn't forgive her, so she couldn't ever go back. The sprite who'd watched her plant the hollyhocks, perhaps he'd miss her. Never to see her beloved little town again. Mot even to walk to the post office to say "hello" to everyone she knew.

So her mind went. The train came and she boarded it automatically. Once in the city she bought a paper and searched the "Rooms for Rent." There were several likely ones. Then to a telephone booth where, for a weary hour, she called one after another to be told, "So sorry, already rented" or that the room was "just out of town." At last one stammery voice informed her that she might come right out and look at the room, and if everything was satisfactory, take it that very evening. She checked her bags and went. It took a distinct effort, when she saw the room, not to scream aloud. It was very clean and very neat, but bare, with one window—and that window forever darkened by the big apartment house that loomed beyond the three-foot alley. There was nothing to do but take it: it would be folly to go to a hotel—why, she didn't even have ten dollars now. The room would be three for a week, and it was clean.

It was a week before Mary found employment. An aching week, weary with hold-back tears. The job was a tiring one for her, being salesgirl in a department store. Long days when the other salesgirls snubbed her, and the head of the department scolded her because her corniers weren't neatly laid. Nights, and the quick rush of clean, fresh air as she stood on the L platform. Grateful for such tiny things. That she could rest! Lie on the bed with her shoes off, feet the burningness of her soles intensified by the sudden relief, and then to sleep—and forget for a little while.

Shoulders that ached and arms mechanically going on. Then wakefulness, the heat and the blackness—she who feared the dark, who flung all the curtains wide at night to flood her world with the scrape of lights that slid in from out of doors. And now this dark room—did the door handle turn?

She lay, holding her breath, afraid, little prickles at the back of her neck; drifting off to sleep again, to dream that the door was opening, that someone was moving the chair before it—softly, stealthily. Awake and trembling! Little strips of dawn show the room dimly, everything's all right. Then the clatter of the milkmen, and David.

Dear Heaven, where are you? Sleep again, sweet and precious—clean sleep—for a little while. Then up and to work again.

Days with pain lurking around the corner now into days a little kinder. The weather was cooler, and she was transferred to another department. Sometimes there were amusing little incidents during the day. But the nights were stenciled alike. Longing and wakeful.

She went a lot to the library in the evenings. Partly, perhaps, because of the library-boy who reminded her of David. Times that she saw him to nod to were gladder because she seemed nearer to home again, and happiness.

One night in October, after she had failed to find forgetfulness in any of the books, and hadn't met the library-boy, she turned to go—and saw him approaching. But it wasn't the library-boy. It was not David. Her heart went bump and then said, "hello." After that they were talking, little commonplace things, and avoiding each other's eyes. But inside they were feeling all smothery glad.

They drifted into a quiet corner where a window seat looked into the moon-splashed court. Then Mary looked up, their eyes met, and they slid into the breathless beauty that sometimes can exist between two persons—all the kindness and forgivingness that needs no words. Their hearts were nearly breaking with just being glad.

The day that they came home together the town was filled with glory. To some it was just a rainy

HERALDS MINIMUM WAGE

A minimum wage for male employees will be instituted in Alberta in the near future, according to Hon. E. C. Manning, above, provincial minister of trade and industry. The wage scales will be based on the number of working hours per week, already limited to 54 hours under the Hours of Work Act. Mr. Manning also announced that while a minimum wage is to be set, companies able to pay and who have been paying higher than the minimum will be asked to adopt a scale of wages and hours under the Industrial Standards Act.

Sunday but for them the pale yellow dims arched over gleaming wet macadam, reflecting their beauty, and all the world was palely golden. When it was darker, they stood by the gate and saw blue-gray sky streiched over darker blue-gray road. And street lights made drifting silver streams across it. Then back by the fire again—with a keener appreciation of life, of each other, and of being home.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma and pop was taking a walk before supper and some man went past carrying a big suitcase with colored labels stuck all over it saying on them Grand Hotel Paris, and Grand Hotel Rome and different hotels differnt places proving he had been abroad and had to live in hotels, and pop said, That's one thing that I've always longed to be able to blaunt, an old battered bag stuck all over with forrin labels, so common people passing by would sigh enviously, Ah, there goes a chap who has peered at the pyramids and quailed at the equator and roared at the Aurora Borealis. But alas my suitcases seem doomed to look slick and shiny and as good as new, pop said.

Well O, pop, why do they, I mean I know where I can get a pack of swell forrin labels, I said. Did Hiram's big brother Fred collect them by writing to big hotels in Europe for them, and he gave a bunch to Sid and Sid's willing to swap them for my tennis ball because he told me so. Holey smokes pop I bet I can get enough to cover about 3 suitcases instead of just one, I said, and pop said, Dont bother, thanks, I wouldn't let you sacrifice your good tennis ball for my selfish vanity.

Well Hmmmp, pop, it's not so good any more, and anyways I'd have fun pasting them on for you, in fact I pretty near had the idea of doing it just to surprise you, I said, and pop said, Yes gods my salfation begs, I mean on 2nd thought I wouldn't want to have people think I'm one of these fellows that waist their time and money knocking against the 4 corners of the earth, and maybe the chap we just passed didn't have a thing left in the world except that beg and he was carrying somebody's laundry home in it for his wife to wash.

Which maybe he was.

FLEETS GATHER FOR MEDITERRANEAN PATROL

Britain Orders Warships To Bolster Up Patrol To Drive Out Pirate Subs

Scores of Destroyers of Powers Now in Great Inland Sea

ELABORATE PLANS

Britain And France Work in Closest of Collaboration

London, Sept. 14 (CP-Havas)—The admiralty today ordered ten more warships to the Mediterranean to bolster the International patrol aimed at stamping out "pirate" operations by unidentified submarines.

Immediately after the signing of the nine-power "treaty" conference at Nyon, Switzerland, the admiralty announced the 4,300-ton cruiser Galatea and the nine units of the fourth destroyer flotilla were leaving immediately for the Mediterranean.

The fourth destroyer flotilla is composed of the 1,290-ton flotilla leader Kempenfelt and the 1,260-ton destroyers Bicester, Brilliant, Brazen, Beagle, Basilisk, Bulldog, Boreas and Beaver.

Ferry Destroyers in Mediterranean.

The new units will bring the total number of British destroyers in the Mediterranean to 40, including four flotilla leaders. The battleship Centurion's strength there is 21. In addition four other destroyers are in the dockyard dry dock in the Mediterranean fleet at short notice in case of necessity.

Anti - Piracy Patrol Plans

Geneva, Sept. 14 (CP) — The Mediterranean anti-piracy naval accord, signed today at Nyon provides for the following patrolling arrangements:

In the western Mediterranean (west of the 18th meridian with the exception of the Tyrrhenian Sea which may form the subject of special arrangements), the British and French fleets will operate both on the high seas and in the territorial waters of the participating powers in accordance with the division of the area agreed upon by the two governments.

In the eastern Mediterranean, each of the participating powers will operate in its own territorial waters. On the high seas, with the exception of the Adriatic Sea, the British and French fleets will operate up to the entrance to the Dardanelles in those areas where there is reason to apprehend any danger in shipping in accordance with the division of the area agreed upon between the two governments, and the participating governments possessing a sea border on the Mediterranean will undertake, within the limit of their resources, to furnish these fleets any assistance that may be asked for. In particular, they will permit them to take action in their territorial waters and use such of their ports as they shall indicate.

(The allocation of zones will be subject at any time to revision by the participating governments in order to take account of any change in the situation.)

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen, Science Service Meteorologist

"With the turn of the tide!" This is a common expression with sailors, many of whom believe that weather changes set in "with the turn of the tide". Some have thought that they observed an increase in air and estuaries, and an abatement of the wind as the tide went out. Those changes are, of course, the result of attraction; but they have never been thoroughly investigated. Slaves in this country found a marked increase of thunderstorms in the United States with a rising tide. Beliefs of this kind should be accepted cautiously.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Sept. 14 (CP)—Synopsis —A severe storm, centred this morning over Hudson Bay and moving rapidly northward, is causing strong winds and gales with rain over the Maritimes and Gulf. Moderate heavy rain has occurred in Quebec and Eastern Ontario and local thunderstorms in Northeastern Ontario. Fine weather has been quite cool over Ontario and is expected to continue here fair throughout the West with considerably above normal temperatures. High pressure covers the west portion of the continent with a trough of low extending southwestward from Hudson Bay across Northwest Ontario to the immediate west of the Great Lakes.

Lake Superior—Fresh winds, shifting to northwest; partly cloudy with scattered showers. Wednesday, fresh northwest winds, partly cloudy and cool.

Manitoba—Northwesterly winds; fair and somewhat cooler today and Wednesday.

Saskatchewan and Alberta—Fair today and Wednesday with stationary or a little lower temperature.

Czechoslovaks' Grand Old Man Marasyk Dies at Age of 87

Flags Flown at Half Mast For Founder of Republic

GREAT STATESMAN

Praha, Czechoslovakia, Sept. 14.—(AP)—Dr. Thomas G. Masaryk, grand old man of Czechoslovakia and founder of the Republic, today lost his long fight against illness.

Jan Masaryk, son of the first President of the Republic, whose life was born out of the Great War, personally announced the death.

"My father died at 3:20 this morning."

Country Folk Mourn

Flags in Praha and at the Chateau de Lany, the residence given Dr. Masaryk by the people, were flown at half-mast. The country folk among whom he had lived his last years uncovered their heads and bent their knees in silent prayer.

Madame Masaryk, the former Charlotte Garrigue of Brooklyn, died in 1923.

Masaryk will be remembered by many as a patriot and democrat whose effort in the Allied capitals during the Great War made possible the creation of his country.

He was honored in the postwar years as one of Europe's great statesmen; but to his fellow countrymen he was even more the symbol of their liberty and the revered Patron Saint of National Freedom.

First President

Masaryk became President of the Czechoslovakian State when it was born in 1918. He was re-elected in 1920, 1927 and again in 1934. In December, 1935, advancing age caused him to resign and turn over the presidency to Edward Benes, his disciple and colleague.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Sept. 14.—(AP)—Anarchists have made a coup d'etat at Gijon, one Spanish seaport remaining in Loyalist hands in the northwest, and have set up an Asturian dictatorship, Insurgents here announced at 1 a.m. today.

Their advices said Belarmino Tomas, an anarchist, headed the movement.

They issued a decree breaking off relations with the Spanish Central Government and setting up a separate anarchist state in Asturias, with himself the dictator.

There are apples, and apples, but when you produce a fairly sizable specimen nearly seven inches in diameter and weighs in the vicinity of two pounds—well, you can say with justifiable pride, that you have something. That tall light-haired farmer residing on Trent Road this year produced samples of the Wolf River variety that weighed 20 of these standards, with several of shade running. But last Sunday's wind and rain storm proved disastrous to the tree. Mr. Blakey awakened on Monday morning to find the tree split down the centre and a large number of his prize apples strewn over the ground.

BRITAIN ORDERS

British and French naval authorities today worked out a scheme in close collaboration for piracy control in the Mediterranean.

There will be nothing hard or fixed about the respective patrol zones. Destroyers of either country will proceed immediately if required to any spot, whether in their own zone or not. Ports, aircraft landing grounds and all other facilities will be interchangeable. Each naval commander will be under his own admiral, but the two admirals will work together.

Italy has not yet replied to the invitation to join, but it is not predicted this delay will hamper the scheme into operation as a consequence.

Geneva, Switzerland, Sept. 14—(CP)—Nyasaland—Nine Mediterranean and Black Sea countries today signed an agreement aimed at "ending acts of piracy" and re-establishing the freedom and security of Mediterranean shipping."

French Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos, chairman of the conference, first signed his initials to the accord. He was followed by Georges Bonnet, minister of Finance, Wasaf Bussunpasha of Egypt, Nicholai Politis of Greece, Anthony Eden of Great Britain, Victor Antonescu of Rumania, Tevfik Rusu Aras of Turkey, Maxim Litvinov of the Soviet Union, and Count Bojdan Pourish of Yugoslavia.

Immediately Effective

In a brief address after the formal signing, Foreign Minister Delbos emphasized the accord provided for "immediate measures to halt piratical operations and that they will be placed in effect immediately."

Signing of the accord coincided with simultaneous bombing of Belgrade a British warship had been ordered to proceed in the Aegean Sea after the undersea craft had torpedoed a Russian tanker. Dispatches from London and Paris said both, Great Britain and France had ordered warships to patrol the Mediterranean today to bolster their defensive strength.

Gravity of Problem

"To measure the importance of the agreement which we have here set to sign, we must recall the gravity of the problem with which the powers which we were confronted," Delbos said.

"We were called upon to provide measures aimed at bringing an end to the intolerable situation. Acts of piracy were carried out in the Mediterranean. Peaceful commercial shipping was interrupted, and a state of affairs prevailed which might at any moment lead to grave complications.

"In the presence of these anonymous aggressions, void of regard for human life and deeply affronting the feelings of our people, our duty was clear.

"We carried it out completely. Without neglecting other forms of intervention which we still keep in Geneva during the forthcoming sessions, we have settled the most serious problem—that of attacks by submarines.

"Practical and effective measures are provided which will be placed in execution immediately."

Speaking after Delbos, British Foreign Secretary Eden said:

Co-operation Best Crown

"On the chairman has defined the issue and the aim of our work as well that there is nothing I can add unless it is congratulations for the manner in which our deliberations have been conducted.

"Great Britain, like France, was at the outset powerless to act also unless to thank the other nations who have collaborated as well as the experts who have aided us in our difficult task. I think that our work has been useful and I hope it will be successful.

"I am confident will receive the approval of the world generally that all interested nations will cooperate in its execution whether they were represented here or not. Their co-operation would be the best crown for our work."

JURY SELECTED

Escorted into the prisoner's box by two penitentiary guards, Crosby took little interest in the proceedings. An interruption occurred when Justice Jeffrey asked Sheriff Davies: "Where are the officials in charge of the Collegiate?"

Judge Asks For Extra Guards

The Sheriff said there was a keeper behind the convict and Justice Jeffrey directed two more guards be placed near Crosby.

Crown Prosecutor C. L. Snyder, K. C., outlined the jury detail of the stabbing.

"The crown alleges," he said, "that the murder was planned weeks before." He explained the Crown would prove during the stabbing; how on July 31, 1936, Mc-Connell, then hospital male nurse in the dispensary where Crosley entered and stabbed him. Tooney and Mr. McCormick intervened, Crosley fatally wounded the guard.

Mr. Snyder referred to the previous murder case and told Justice Jeffrey "is regarded as the most outstanding judge in criminal law in this country."

Justice Jeffrey told the jury that from time to time they must absent themselves as men apart. Their lunch would be well looked after, but they were to remain by themselves, even to the extent of having the privilege of a visit from their wives, but not able to make a telephone call home."

Dr. Bogart Testifies

Dr. I. H. Bogart, first witness, said he specialized in general surgery. Questioned by Mr. Snyder, Dr. Bogart said the deceased had said he had treated McCormick July 10, 1936, and that the latter had been severely and in a critical condition. He had four bad wounds in his body and on examining his bowel, it was found to be punctured in two places. He said that he believed a sharp instrument had penetrated it from below the breastbone.

"General peritonitis from abdominal injury was the main cause of death," explained Dr. Bogart, according to Dr. Bogart, Dr. James Miller, pathologist at Queen's University conducted a post-mortem on McCormick.

Also examined by W. P. Nickle, Dr. Bogart said a toxic poisonous condition would affect the brain.

Effect of Drug On Brain.

"Would a toxic poison from a drug which had been administered affect the brain?"

"It might."

"Would the brain which affects our judgment and conduct?"

"It is generally attributed to the brain."

Dr. Bogart explained that if alcohol was taken it would be a toxic poison. He also said different people responded differently to different drugs. The effect of the drug, he was explained by Dr. Bogart, "in the brain would depend upon the mentality, the greater the shock to the brain by drug the greater effect." Bogart when questioned by W. F. Nickle,

Taking cocaine as an example, Dr. Bogart said that when administered by the mouth, it took an hour, but as when intravenie injections were made.

"When a man is suffering from delirium tremens isn't he positively temporarily insane?" asked Mr. Nickle.

"Yes."

Crosley Unruly, Says Witness.

Jack P. Toomey, who was assistant hospital officer at the time Dr. McCormick stabbing, said he was on the night watch with Crosley as any of the other prisoners that came into the penitentiary hospital. He said that in March, 1935, and prior to July, 1936, Crosley was unruly at times.

ROWE PROMISES
Conservatives.

Protection of Public

"I will establish a law that protects the public and gives the prospector an opportunity that he hasn't got at the present," said Mr. Rowe.

When promising a commission to inquire into the timber industry, Mr. Rowe charged the Government with the most ruthless exploitation of our northland that has ever been experienced in our province." He said the day the Ontario elections take place he will announce timber limits of 14,000 square miles were given away without tender to a United States firm.

The Conservative leader, who spoke at Fort William and Port Arthur, said his proposed commission would probe into timber deals in which he charged 23,000 square miles were handed out in the last year and a half. The United States firm receiving the 14,000-square-mile limit also was allowed to export the timber, he said.

Spears Have Promised

Crown dues on the 14,000 square miles were $1 a cord while Ontario producers paid $2.86. His government would alter the situation and give the north a "square deal."

"Ontario wood should be and will be processed by Ontario workmen and not used to provide employment for the workers of a country to the south. Our policy will be to 'S that Ontario workmen get work.

"Our policy will be to safeguard and conserve our tremendous but not inexhaustible timber resources. Through forestation, cutting and processing we intend to build up our great timber industry and keep its machinery and labor well within the hands of the people of Ontario."

Crown Lands to U.S. Millionaires

He referred to charges of a re-plottation made against the Conservative but maintained in a far more "Crown lands given to United States millionaires, under special advantages, in two years time than my Party has allowed

The timber commission would review these existing, allegedly made contracts, study plans of systematic production and marketa." The land clearance bonus for settlers would be part of the Conservative policy, he added.

Highways started by the present Government as "election bids" would be completed. The trans-Canada highway, started by the Conservatives, would be carried through. A systematic policy of feeder roads and tourist development would be followed.

Mr. Rowe promised a special department would handle northern affairs. Roads would be built to help mining and tourist development while at the head of the tourist department would be a man with some realization of such a department's possibilities.

DROUGHT AREA LOOK FOR BETTER DAYS IN FUTURE

Rev. Dr. G. Dorey Tells of Unflinching Heroism of Settlers

RETURN OF CROPS

Faith in the future of their part of the country is uppermost in the minds of the people of the drought-stricken areas of Southern Saskatchewan, Dr. George Dorey, Associate Secretary of the Home Missions of the United Church, Toronto, told members of Bridge Street United Church in a stirring descriptive address Sunday night.

Dr. Dorey, who covered nearly fifteen hundred miles of the southern part of the western province with the Moderator of the Church, told of the harrowing scenes of poverty; of a people brave and unflinching in the face of superhuman odds, and their faith that "God's goodness would eventually be seen in the future in the form of the return of crops."

Evidence of this faith, the speaker said, was seen in one particular town where men were busy rebuilding a grain elevator. Another instance was the erection of a skating rink where there was absolutely no evidence of water.

Thistle Is Ornate

Thousands of acres of wheat, producing land, said the speaker, was covered with Russian thistle. But undaunted, farmers of the country were investigating this menace and had discovered that the thistle contained the same feed elements as alfalfa. Instead of attempting to eliminate the weed they began repestations with the Department of Agriculture to cross the thistle with a type of Argentinian spinach which would give them a feed of value.

Another instance of the faith of these people, the speaker said, was seen in the fact that in an area where hundreds of crops were wiped out, farmers had developed a rustresisting wheat that brought them offers from all parts of the country.

"Any province that has a group of farmers, scientists and agriculturists that do such worthy activities to things like this is bound to succeed."

Great appreciation of the assistance given them by people of the other provinces in the country was found by the speaker.

Lovely Gifts to Stricken

Twelve hundred and twenty-five carloads of fruit and vegetables, hundreds of tons of clothing, thousands of eggs had poured into the drought-stricken areas from other parts of the country." Through my sacrifice we have handled over four hundred tons of clothing alone," said Dr. Dorey. "There is a lot of boy and girl happiness brought through these magnificent gifts."

"I believe the people of the southern part of Saskatchewan and although the population has decreased by eight percent during the past few years, we still have the older type here people. Our biggest problem is to make Canada a Christian nation. There never was a time that people had the instruments to save life, to destroy life, as there is at the present. That is why the United Church is going to maintain and preserve a ministry in Saskatchewan. For we are responsible for the major part of the rural life in that part of this great province."

"We are asking for $40,000 and we will get that amount through the goodness of the heart of man," continued Dr. Dorey. "These poverty-stricken farmers, from the slim revenue derived from cream-cheques, sent donations of cash last year to the flood-sufferers of the United States and of London, Ont. They felt this was the only way of showing their appreciation of the magnificent donations sent them by the church in the east.

"In this part of the country", concluded the speaker, "the goodness of God was most apparent. But we must work to let these people see the goodness of God if not through the Faith, then through the actions of men."

Thanks of the congregation for the splendid address was tendered the speaker, by Dr. James Semple. A feature of the musical part of the service was a solo by James Bannister.

Belleville to Present Brief To Probe on Transportation And Taxation for Highways

Special Meeting of City Council Decides to Submit Local Data

ISSUES INVOLVED

Unanimous endorsation of a suggested resolution, presented by a delegation of members of the local branch of the Ship-by-Rail Association representing the railway employees of Belleville, requesting that data and statistics regarding local highway transport problems be embodied in a brief to be forwarded by Council to the Royal Commission recently appointed by the Provincial Government to investigate all phases of Highway Transportation and Taxation, was made by City Council last night at a special session called for the purpose of meeting the delegation.

Resolution Presented

The resolution which was presented to Council by Mr. A. E. Berry, president of the Belleville branch of the Ship-by-Rail Association follows:

"Whereas the Government of Ontario has appointed a Royal Commission to investigate all phases of Highway Transportation and Taxation.

"And Whereas revenues derived from licenses, registrations and the Tax paid by such carriers are not returned to Municipalities in amount necessary to meet expenditures for construction and maintenance of the connecting links of the Provincial Highways through the City of Belleville, therefore be it resolved:

That the City of Belleville prepare and present to the Royal Commission a brief affording evidence that:

"(a) The cost to general taxpayers of construction and maintenance of highways, and the proper proportion of this cost should be directly charged against the users of highway, particular attention being given to the cost to the general taxpayer of maintaining thes highways by the use of commercial interests, competing with properly established methods of transportation. Who are using the roads for their own right-of-way.

"(b)—The necessity of adequate public control of these competing transportation agencies.

"(c) The need of such regulations as will ensure that steps are taken for the safety be established for all motor vehicles.

(d) The equity of a contribution to cities and separated towns toward the construction and maintainence of connecting links Provincial Highways through such cities and separated towns.

"(e) That a copy of this resolution be mailed to Dr. Britton, Secretary, of the Ontario Municipal Association."

Previous to the adoption by Council of the resolution, Mr. W. J. Brackner, Secretary of the Central Association of the Ship-by-Employees of Ontario, told council in response to a query by Alderman Wills that the Royal Commission which holds its first session in Toronto this week will hold sittings at twenty-one points in Ontario, Belleville likely being one at which it will receive the resolutions of the various municipalities and cities.

With practically no discussion Council adopted the resolution on motion of Aldermen Wills and Armstrong. Mayor Richard Ardell appointed Aldermen Wills, Armstrong and Mr. Berry as a committee "to look into and secure data in accordance with the resolution presented to Council, for submission to the Royal Commission."

The delegation in a letter to Council which was presented by Mr. Berry previous to the submission of the resolution, outlined a number of reasons why action should be taken and why the Royal Commission was appointed to look into these matters.

"For many years" the letter stated, "municipal councils have endeavored to secure assistance from the Provincial Government toward the costs of construction and maintenance of sections of municipal streets forming connecting link in the Provincial Highway System. Heavy taxation has been levied by the municipalities for the maintenance of these links which when laid were never intended to be used as an avenue for large heavy commercial vehicles. Revenue through license fees and gasoline tax derived from these vehicles by the government has not been used to compensate these municipalities for the damage done and the use of their municipal streets."

Use of Streets by Transports

"That the burden of taxation has been increased in Belleville due to the use of its streets by heavy transport and cannot be denied," the letter stated. "Depreciation of the surfacing of bridges has been accelerated by the heavy truck traffic. No doubt the bridges known as the Upper and Lower bridges which span the Moira River in Belleville could not have been replaced for some years, or at least see costly bridges provided, if it had not been necessary to build bridges substantially enough to carry the heavy commercial trucks now using these bridges.

Other points in the letter on which the deputation suggested evidence should be submitted are:

"1. Cost of construction, including interest on the investment, policing of streets, roads and bridges which are part of the Provincial Highway System.

"2. Annual cost of repairs to such streets, roads and bridges.

"3. Annual depreciation of such streets, roads and bridges.

"4. Difference between the depreciation on such streets and the depreciation on other paved streets in the town.

"5. Number of commercial vehicles registered in Belleville.

"6. Number of private vehicles, including trucks, registered in Belleville.

"7. Gasoline consumption of the above private vehicles based on an average mileage of 9,000 miles per year or an average of 15 miles to the gallon of gasoline.

"8. Gasoline consumption of trucks.

"9. A recommendation to the Commission for more adequate control and regulation of all motor vehicles.

"10 A recommendation to the Commission that the burden of the expense of the construction of the whole highway system and also its maintenance should be borne by the users thereof through taxation levied by a central authority.

"11. A recommendation to the Commission that the standards of safety of all vehicles be established so that the appalling accident rate which is a blot on the whole province be reduced."

Member of the Royal Commission appointed to investigate Highway Transportation and Taxation are: Mr. Justice R. R. Gwynne of the Supreme Court of Canada, Chairman; Professor C. R. Young, University of Toronto and Mr. R. Sayles of Renfrew, Ont.

Officials of the local branch of the Ship-by-Rail Association who headed the delegation last night were President A. E. Berry, Vice President G. C. Shorey and Sect. Treas. A. G. Meagher.

DRAPERS DISCUSS CUSTOMERS

"The difficult customer" had an entire session of the Drapers' Summer School at Oxford, England some days ago all to herself or himself. The attitude of customers has become an intensive study for the drapers. Some customers have become a daily worry to the shopkeeper and his assistants. Speaking of this average shop assistant, The Christian Science Monitor says, "there is probably no wage earner in the community who maintains a higher standard of courtesy under such trying conditions than the shop assistant.

"She, for it is more often 'she,' is usually working long hours with little rest; is, at 'rush' periods and 'sale' seasons, working at very high pressure, and is compelled by the unwritten law of her profession to adopt the attitude that 'the customer is always right.' If, under provocation, she should lapse but once from the 'Retort Courteous', it may endanger her job.

"The customer is not without difficulties of his—or her—own in the matter. He is forced frequently to come

. midst the crowd, the hum, the shock of men. To hear, to see, to feel, and to possess.

And it is understandable if sometimes, before he accomplishes the last-named act, his poise is a trifle shaken. Even so, to forget his manners is, at the very least, to forget his own interests; for the manners that "maketh man" make also, usually, for quick service."

WAR ON THE SUBMARINE PIRATES

There is to be a new war in the Mediterranean Sea with 35 British destroyers and 25 French vessels of the same class with possibility the assistance of Italy in the Pyrrhenian Sea chasing these wild dogs of piracy and undeclared warfare, against the agreements of nations, to exterminate them.

No recent warfare has had a struggle given over to itself as the pursuit of the mad dogs which swim under water. Airplanes and tanks, two late inventions, cannot be used for the same nefarious purpose as pirate submarine craft which can sneak up on an unsuspecting merchantman.

The submarine has been put to purposes in recent days by reason of the perfection of the craft which can range freely as compared with the first submarines and those used even during the World War. The first reliable practical attempt at submarine navigation appears to have been made in the early seventeenth century when a Dutchman, Cornelius Drebbell, successfully navigated a boat manned by twelve rowers in the Thames. This boat incorporated the plan for use of a liquid to restore the vital parts to vitiated air. Bushnell, an American, did invent one which undoubtedly can be called a submarine. His invention included a means of attaching explosives to the bottoms of vessels. The 'wellknown Robert "Fulton in 1800 sent down an egg-shaped boat to a depth of twenty-five feet where it remained for four hours. He attached a torpedo to an old hulk and blew it up. In 1851 an American shoemaker named Phillips spent a day in a boat at the bottom of Lake Michigan with his wife and family. Experiments were made for the Russians in the time of the Crimean War. During the American Civil War submarines were used by Confederates and Federals but there was little practical use, although the David sank the Hausatonic, to be lost in manoeuvres with her crew. Steadily the experiments were carried on. In the World War the submarine came out a fully fledged member of the defensive and aggressive arms of most nations. It was proven not invincible as the use of destroyers showed. During the World war submarines did much on the Central Powers' side to create a feeling of opposition to Germany, Austria and Turkey.

Since the Great War, there have been inventions which have increased the undersea craft's effectiveness.

The submarine has been given the badnam e of pirate for preying upon commerce in the Mediterranean in cutting off supplies to the Valencia Government.

The war on the pirate submarines opens as said before a new phase in the history of the submersible. A united front of many nations pursuing the wolves of the sea is the modern development of protest against the use of these craft for purposes prohibited by the agreement of nations.

This is one of the first international police patrols in history, with a banded fleet organized to preserve peace and make the seas safe. It has more than the office and duty of performance of war vessels in war. Will it be the first sign of international constabulary to enforce justice at sea? Will the united front give the League of Nations a great fillip forward with the recovery of prestige by the showing of an unyielding spirit to the unwarranted use of the submarine? This war against the pirate is not waged against any nation, and most of the greater nations stand with Britain and France to extirpate the nefarious actions of some submarines.

THAT PLACE CALLED HOME

There's a quaint old red-brick cottage in a quaint old town I know,
Where the morning glories mingle with the roses as they grow,
Where the meadow lark each morning sends his song up to the skies
Greeting fairy artists busy painting scenes with golden dyes.
There I learnt life's early lesson; there I learnt to sing and play;

There I learnt of God's great wonders in the blessed Yesterday.

I can see a sweet-faced mother watch with laughter in her eyes
As we children stirred the echoes with our shrill and joyous cries.
I can hear her soft voice soothing, I can feel her kisses yet,
That would drive the fear of pain away from bruises we would get.

On the silken thread of mem'ry there is nothing half so sweet
As a quaint old-fashioned cottage on a quaint old-fashioned street,
Where the children's happy laughter all the long day thro' is heard—
Sweeter to the list'ning mother than the song of mocking bird—

Where the heart of man may wander
when the busy day is done,
Arm in arm with dreams of Yesterday between the setting sun.
Better still, I see her bending o'er our bed
—at eventide
While the moonlight shines upon her—
'tis a picture sanctified.

Oh, man's cup of life was sweetened when the Good Lord from above Sent those angels we call Mothers with their deep unselfish love.
Man may boast of wealth and riches, of the conquests he has won,
From the first light of the morning till the setting of the sun,
But how quickly he would cast them off if once more he could roam
As a little barefoot laughing boy about that place called home.

WHILE THE DOCTORS IN CONVENTION ASSEMBLED.. IN... VARIOUS PLACES are debating state medical service including hospitalization, and while several experiments in medical service insurance are under way a news despatch from Massachusetts tells us how the municipal fathers of a town called Petersham in that state tackled the job of providing medical service for the citizens. The town was without a physician since January. (All villages are towns over there). A Town Meeting was called and it was decided to offer a gratuity of $1,200 annually, plus free rent in a large house, and the doctor can keep all he can make on the side. Petersham has a population of 800 and in the winter roads from larger centres are so bad that it is difficult to get outside doctors. The town doctor will act as school physician in addition to his general duties.

TWO LARGE SQUARE SAILING SHIPS raced from Newport, Rhode Island, to Bermuda, a ten-day run, and the winner had a margin of only fifty-five seconds, so close was the race. The two ancient windjammers are now racing back from Bermuda to Newport, and if the verdict is reversed another race and longer one may be arranged to settle the matter of superiority of craft or seamanship. The Joseph Conrad, named after that writer of sea stories, won the first leg, but the margin was so small that the return voyage is being watched with great interest by all lovers of the sea and sailing. The other craft was the Seven Seas. The elapsed time announced by the race officials gave the Seven Seas 10 days, 1 hour, 1 minute, 52 seconds, while the Joseph Conrad was logged in ten days, 1 hour and 57 seconds. Now the merry mariners will race back to Newport under all the canvas it will be safe to carry, with a weather eye out for hurricanes which are said to be brewing off the Atlantic coast.

Little Benny's Note Book

We was eating beakfist and I yawned a big yawn on account of I'm still feeling part ways asleep, and ma said, Now Benny when are you going to learn that it's not considered proper to yawn without first putting your hand in front of your mouth? and pop said, By the looks of things he'll learn by the time he has a long drooping mustash, and then it wont be necesserry.

Meaning the mustash would hide it for me, and I said, Well O, ma, gosh, pop, why aint it all rite to yawn in the open air?

Now my O, do you suppose? ma said and I said, Because other people will see you and it will make them feel like yawning too when they really dont have to.

The idea such an idea, ma said, it's the height of bad manners and the depth of ill breeding to yawn in other folks faces, so the natural polite reaction is to put your hand before your mouth, she said, and I said, But O, ma, suppose your hand happens to be dertey? That would be adding insult to injury, wouldn't it, ma? I said

Your hand shouldn't happen to be derty, your hands should always be kept clean, ma said, and I said, want to know the real reason for ing and will be much less likely to Why, ma? Just in case you cant hide your hand business, I think you're dislocate your jaw, and now eat want to hide a yawn with one of old enough to be told, pop said, your egg in comparative silence, his hands? The real reason is so that you can said.

Look here, young fellow, if you feel how far your mouth is open- Wich I did.

Ivanhoe School Log

The first settler on the 8th concession of Huntingdon was John Wood, from Berwickshire, Scotland, who came out to Canada in 1833. His nearest Berwickshire neighbor was Hugh MacMillan who took up land on the farm where his grandson still resides at the present time. Mr. Wm. Mitts settled in 1834, on the block of land which has since been divided into three farms owned respectively by Mr. Chas. Mitts, Mr. S. J. Kilpatrick and Mr. John Clement. Wm. Mitts lived where Mr. Clement now lives. In the same year, Mr. Cascallen settled on the farm where Mr. Donald Fleming lives. In 1836 many more settlers came. There were family of Irish, Scottish, English and U. E. Loyalist stock. Names of the early settlers were:—(Irish). May, Bogsett, McKee, Shaw, Rollins, Knox, Canning, Stone, Bulledge, Hannon, Carcallen, MacMillan; (Scottish), Wood, Harvey, Fleming, Roy, McAullen, Archibald; — (English), Thomson, Chapman, King, Liddey, Ewest, Gaunt; — (U. E. L.)—Reid, Mitts, Mr. Henry Casen, who originally owned Mr. Chas. Cooney's farm, was one of the survivors of a secret party in the woods for Sir Francis Franklin. Mr. John Wood went with other settlers as a soldier on the Loyalist side in the Rebellion of Upper Canada in 1837, Mr. Thos. Eno was the first postmaster and named the Post Office "Ivanhoe", after reading Sir Walter Scott's novel of the same name. This Post Office was located where Mr. Stanley Prest now lives.

There was no church in this community for a few years. A mission-ary from Belleville came to West Huntingdon every two weeks, Mr. Wood always walked there to service. The following years a church was built on the 8th line near its junction with the Madoc road, and a Bible Christian missionary came there every two weeks. The Weseyan Church, near where the Standard Church at Bethesda now stands, followed. Later the M. E. Church was opened at Beulah. When the Bible Christian and the Methodist Churches united, the Beulah Church was built on the present site, and was replaced by the present building after the fire in 1917.

Little is known of the first school except that it was situated near the road from Mr. W. Holgate's and that Mr. Thos. Eno, a very severe army disciplinarian, taught there shortly after coming to this country in 1842.

S. S. No. 12, Huntingdon, at the present time, is composed of two former school sections, one of which was served by the Reid Settlement School, and the other by the Hobbs School.

The Reid Settlement School was situated on the southwest corner of John Prest's farm, now owned by his grandson, Mr. Stanley Prest. It was a frame school about 26' x 32'. The old stone foundation, and the flat stone near the road where many of the children used to sit while eating their lunches, are the only remains of this building. The inspector at that time was Mr. McCarthy, of Madoc. The only teachers recalled are Miss Harvey and Mr. Lewis Wright. Mr. C. Sine of Rawdon, Martin Baker, and Mr. Bedome of Marmora, Mr. Warren Reid, Mr. John Wood, and Miss Mary J. Fleming were pupils of this school. Miss Jean Fleming recalls that Mr. Wright used to conduct a "spelling school." It was held at night in the Reid schoolroom. People from the settlement and the surrounding school sections came. The words were usually taken from the old fourth reader in which were many hard words. The teacher drilled the smaller pupils on many of these beforehand. Miss Fleming spelled the entire class down one evening, on the word "bedysarumgyraea", when she was eight years old, and received a little book as a prize. The inspector at that time was: Geo. Reid, grandfather of Mr. Albert Reid, Stirling, Jeffrey, and John Wood, father of the present John Wood on the old homestead.

Erected probably about the same time in those early days was another frame schoolhouse, situated on the north west corner of lot 7 in the 6th concession of Huntingdon. The place, then owned by Mr. Sylvester Holden is now the property of Mr. Robert Shaw. The building was about 26' x 30', and had eight windows, three on each side, and two in the south end. The door was also in the south. This school was also used by the M. E. Church as a place of worship, and continued as such after it was discarded as a school in 1876, until Beulah church was built in 1882. Later the building was bought by Mr. Tummon and used as a barn. Today it still stands on the Tummon lot west of Mr. T. E. Fleming's store. The wood for heat in those days was provided by the parents of the children attending the school. One quarter of a cord was allotted per pupil. The school tax was not collected in the municipal tax as it is now. The secretary-treasurer of the section made his rounds and collected the same. This proved a difficult task. Teachers in this school were: Miss Elisha Phillips, Mr. Gardiner, David Wiggins, Miss White, Charles Fuller, Mr. Morton, Miss E. A. Clarke (Mrs. Mayes), Miss M. Harvey, George Johnson, Mr. Butler, Trustees were: Sylvester Holden, sec.-treas., John H. Fox, David Fleming, Sr., Lewis Baker, Wm. Baker, Geo. Reid, Sr.

Apparently the Reid School must have been closed first as Mr. John Wood spent his last year at the Holden School after the former was closed.

Shortly after the union of these sections, the present brick school was built in 1876. Mr. MacNiteh was the inspector. The contractor for the building work was W. Garrison of Plainfield. Thomas Welsch of Prince Edward County did the brick and plaster work. The building was erected on lot 9, concession 7 of Huntingdon, which was bought from Henry Gasen. The original dimensions of the grounds were 10 rods by 8 rds. In August, 1908, the grounds were extended 1-2 acre to the east. This land was bought from Paul Cooney for $80.

The woodshed, which used to sit in front of the well, was moved to its present position north of the school. The well curb and cement walk were added. Mr. D. C. Dorrance had a splendid garden west of the school in 1912, for which, according to his ledger, an agricultural grant was given.

The brick school faces the road at the south, and measures 24' x 28'. It has eight windows, three on each side and two at the south. The lobby at the entry opens by two swing doors into the room. There are two cloakrooms, one on each side of the entry. Across the entire front or north end, are five slate blackboards. There are also five hyloplate boards, three at the west, and two at the east. Four rows of double seats were bought from Wm. Clements in Dec. 1903, one row of which was replaced by single seats in 1933. A good library consisting of 160 volumes is kept, up-to-date by the addition of new books each year.

A second book-case, made by R. J. Bristol, Madoc, was added in 1931. Roller window shades were arranged above the blackboards. Hot lunch has been served since 1930. First Aid equipment is kept in the cloak room cupboards. A new steel first aid case was donated by the Women's Institute, and for by school fair prize money. A sink and waste pipe have been installed. The former box stove was replaced by a jacket furnace in 1931. The coal and heater was donated by the Women's Institute in 1934.

The teachers in the school have been as follows: Miss Mary Stokes, Mr. Roberts, Miss Robertson (Mrs. Kerr, McGregor, Alberta), Miss M. E. Cherry, Henry Ostrom (1882), Tolman Wilkins, Roderick Chisholm (Dr.) John L. Clarke (1891); J. G. Hetty (1892, 1893), Joe Metz (1894) Edison McConnell (1895-1896), Robt. Elliott (1897, 1898), Geo. Hay (1899) Gerald Pringle (1900), Miss E. J. Mitchin (Mrs. Baldwin Reid) (1901, 1902), Miss Hartwick (1903), H. S. Wood (1904, 1905), Miss Bishop (Mrs. Rowe), (1905-6 and 7), A. W. Mc-Guire (supply), Miss Rogers (1907-09), Miss Bessie Corbett (1909-11), D. C. Dorrance (1911-12), Miss Parliament (1912-14), Miss Eva Parker (1914-18), (Dr.) Harold Welsh (1916-17), J. Clement (Sept. 1917-Dec. 1918), Miss Cameron (Jan.-June 1918) Miss Kathleen Dixon (Mrs. W. Wallace), supply (Sept. and Oct. 1918), Mrs. Rowe (Nov. 1918-June 1919), Miss Eva Barnes (1922-26), Miss Lillian Haggerty (Mrs. John Wallace) (1926-28), Miss Helen Yeager (1928-30), Miss Vera Rock (1930-32), Miss Winnifred McIntyre (Mrs. A. Campion (1932-34), Marion F. Mutton, (1934——)

Salaries from 1891 to 1904 ranged from $300 - $400. The highest salary paid was $1200 to Miss Eva Barnes in 1926.

Some of the trustees in this school were Lewis Mitts, John Wood, Russell MacMillan, W. H. Chapman, John Ray, Robt. Stout, Samuel Ray, John Fleming, G. R. Mills, W. R. Hollis, C. A. Mitts.

The present trustees are S. D. Prest, Robt. Shaw and Harold Reid. Mr. Arthur Wood is the auditor.

Music, as a special subject, was introduced in 1929 with Miss Leah Ramsay as supervisor, until her death in July 1931. Mrs. Blanche Alexander of Madoc has carried on the work very successfully since.

The medical health officer, Dr. S. Eagleson, Madoc, inoculated the pupils for the prevention of diphtheria (1935) and scarlet fever (1936 and vaccinated against smallpox (1936). The nurse, Miss Martin, Albert Tummon, Hector Roy, Fred Benson, and Fleming Rollins, the latter two pupils, showed the supreme sacrifice.

An expression of appreciation is extended to Mr. C. A. Mitts, Mr. John Wood, Miss E. Fleming, Mrs. J. Clements (librarian) and others, who have so willingly recalled events and searched records for the above information.

Any added information, or any corrections which would aid in making the history of S. S. 12, Huntingdon more accurate and complete would be gratefully appreciated.

Marion F. Mutton, teacher.

Advertisement Under Fire

Mr. Hepburn claimed it was common knowledge in Toronto that the agency handling the Conservative Campaign advertising referred back one advertisement because of inaccurate statements but Mr. Rowe instructed it be published.

Vague references to the Hoist Association and political contributions had been aired by the Conservative leader, he said.

"I know nothing of any hoist campaign funds," declared the Premier. "Mr. Rowe says he does. If he knows anything let him come out openly and tell it to the world."

Hepburn Denies Knowledge

Premier Hepburn drew a detailed comparison between the efficient administration by his government and that of the preceding Conservative Government, citing increased revenues without increased taxation.

In illustration he pointed to the operation of the Niagara Parks Commission. Under the late Government, he said, it lost money continually because Government members entertained at the expense of the taxpayer. Under three years of Liberal rule the Commission had paid off $800,000 against its debt.

Quebec's Threat

He asserted he had no apology for cancelling Quebec Power contracts. The Government had purchased a frequency changer when it had "its back to the wall", he said, then Premier Taschereau of Quebec sent his provincial treasurer to Toronto, to warn the Government to take all or none of the Quebec power it had contracted for.

If all Quebec power had been shut off at the time the only shortages might have been in Northern Ontario and the frequency changer would have remedied this.

Ferguson, Meighen Attacked

He coincided that if men like Howard Ferguson, Senator Arthur Meighen and C. A. Maguire could control Hydro users to $400,000,000 of unsaleable power, without recourse to succeeding governments, democracy was a farce.

Mr. Hepburn told his audience the facts were even worse than he first thought in the case of the property leased to the Liquor Control Board by a relative of Leopold Macaulay, former Minister of Highways.

Mr. Macaulay's legal firm had arranged the whole deal, he said, even to putting up the money. The property had been rented for three times its worth, so that in a single year rents from the Liquor board took care of 56 per cent of the capital investment.

Social Crediters Sing Theme Song

Edmonton, Sept. 14.—(CP)— A new theme song of Social Credit, sung to the tune of "Tipperary", was given its premiere last night at a public meeting in suburban Edmonton.

The chorus ran:

"It's a short way now to Social credit;
It's a short way to go.
We'll soon use Alberta credit,
It's the fairest way we know.
So good-bye to old-fashioned farewell high finance.
It's a short, short way to Social Credit—
Alberta's great chance."

What Local Theatre Managers Say About Coming Attractions

AT THE BELLE

Kay Francis and Errol Flynn in "Another Dawn"

There's a British garrison trapped in Iraq (Arabia), and only one chance for them to be saved.

They have an old, feeble airplane. It can fly . . . with bombs . . . a dam that needs to be destroyed. But it can't carry enough fuel to fly back. The man that flies it and destroys the dam and saves the garrison has no chance in the world of ever returning. And there are just two men who know how to pilot a plane.

That's the climatic situation in "Another Dawn", the romantic adventure story filmed by Warner Bros., now on the Belle screen until Wednesday, matinee daily.

One of the men is that handsome Irish star, Errol Flynn. He's a junior officer and pal of the colonel of the outfit. Also, he's in love with the colonel's wife, who is the lovely Kay Francis. And the colonel is that strikingly good-looking English-man who used to be the romantic idol of London . . . Ian Hunter. He loves both his wife and his junior officer, but has no idea that both love each other.

Who flies the plane and destroys the dam and saves the garrison? You must see the film to find out. Starting out from the problem it makes, "Another Dawn" an exceptionally unusual and gripping picture play.

There's a rather tragic coincidence in the background of this movie. It was made from an original story by the act scenario of the late Sherlock Holmes author, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. He was an air-plane enthusiast; had his own plane and used to fly every evening after he was through at his studio.

Just as the picture went into work", as they say, Sir went up one evening, crashed into the ocean, and a couple of miles away from his boat . . . and drowned. He was killed instantly.

William Dieterle, who directed such outstanding pictures as "The Story of Louis Pasteur" and "The White Angel," was the director on this one.

Besides the three top-ranking stars from the Warner Studios, Kay Francis, Errol Flynn and Ian Hunter, it has in its cast such outstanding performers as Frieda Inescourt, Herbert Mundin, Donald Muntly, Jr., Mary Forbes, Billy Mahon, Billy Bevan and Davis Clyde.

Barely do you find such a colorful picture as "Another Dawn", with its wild scenes in the barbarous Arabic romantic appeal and its gallant Britons. It shouldn't be missed.

Bombing of Shanghai

A special added attraction on the same program are the Sensational Films of Shanghai Bombing, the greatest drama of the War in China filmed by News of the Day cameramen at the risk of their lives. Scenes of terror photographed a few seconds after the bombing of Shanghai's big hotels and department stores. A funny multiple-reel comedy and a smart revue complete the program.

AT THE CAPITOL

Robt. Montgomery and Marion Davies in "Ever Since Eve"

Two stars of tremendous popularity and of well deserved top rank among comedy players, come to the Capitol Theatre Wednesday in "Ever Since Eve," as bill No. 1 on the season's entertainment in Belleville picture bills.

They are Marion Davies, the lovely blonde comedienne, and Robert Montgomery, the debonair youth who has won the leading roles in many gay movies.

Miss Davies and Montgomery are co-starred in what is described as the liveliest, fastest moving farce either has played in for a long time.

Miss Davies plays the part of a manicurist who has been so harassed by employers because of her golden-haired beauty that she disguises herself with a dark wig and glasses and goes looking for another job.

Montgomery is a novelist who is crazy about blondes, but is forced to accept this seeming brunette forced upon him by his hard-boiled publishers who want him to keep his mind on his work.

Both are having strictly business during working hours, with Marion Davies, but it chances that he meets her socially, one evening, when she's not disguised.

Besides the two stars, "Ever Since Eve" has a cast including such comedy experts as Patsy Kelly, Frank McHugh, Louise Fazenda, Allen Jenkins, and Carol Hughes.

Those who meet Nero Wolfe for the first time in film or fiction are amazed by the new personality introduced by Author Rex Stout in the character of the Wolfe detective, doings. Unlike his prototypes, the estimable Sherlock Holmes and Philo Vance or the philosophical Charlie Chan, Nero Wolfe boasts none of the physical characteristics of the rule-book sleuth. He is fat, pudgy and corpulent. He has too keen a fascinating and eccentric figure.

Edward Arnold who plays Wolfe has never stepped beyond the confines of his studio home; self exiled in a house of rare orchids and cupboards bulging with bottles of beer. He maintains inconsistency to all except his sides and servants and refuses to suspects in the cases he works on who are drawn to him by a fear and respect for the man's tremendous intellect.

He rears through the most intricate mysteries with the complacement ease of a chess master at play, unperturbed by his rivals of huge meals and regular hours. He gathers his information through the efforts of his chief detective, Archie Goodwin, and by means of his super-psychology and admirable wit bares the essential facts in a simple picture of the actual crime.

An artist and confirmed misanthrope, he startles his clients with psychological runs and maneuvers their actions to suit his own convenience and serve his own ends.

That this charming character would eventually find his way to the screen repertory of famous detectives was long anticipated. Columbia Pictures sponsor Wolfe's screen debut in the film dramatization of Rex Stout's "Fer de Lance," which will be the feature attraction at the Capitol starting Wednesday under the title "Meet Nero Wolfe," as smash hit No. 2.

The perfect choice for the role of Nero Wolfe is manifest in the selection of Edward Arnold, who offered that memorable characterization in "Diamond Jim" and "Theatre Royal."

Sidney Bridal Couple Honored by Friends

Mr. and Mrs. U. Perry Presented With Gifts And ... an Address

A large gathering met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Parry, 3rd Concession, Sidney, on Tuesday evening, to pay tribute to their daughter, Aletha, who was recently married to Mr. Urvan Perry of Frankford. Friends and neighbors of the whole community were present at this happy gathering. After a social hour was spent, Mr. Sanford Gaffard called order and the bride and groom were escorted to the front room where an address was read. After the gifts were opened, Aletha and Urvan each gracefully thanked the friends and invited them to visit them in their home.

Following is the address:

Dear Aletha and Urvan:—

It is with pleasure that we have gathered in your home this evening, to join as friends and neighbors, have met to wish you every success in the new relationship which you have recently assumed. This occasion gives us the opportunity to express to you, Aletha, something of our appreciation of your faithful services in the church and community.

Many of our children have been scholars under your care as teacher of the Junior Department in the Sunday School, to which you have given much of time, energy and study. You were an efficient W.A. President during your years of office, working long and hard to mean the most to that organization. More recently you have given splendid service and leadership as convener of the department of Christian culture in the Y.P.W. We have long been conscious of your many contributions to the work of the church and have felt that we owed you much for your untiring efforts.

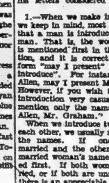
We are glad that marriage is not removing you from our midst but that you are enriching our neighborhood by establishing your own home among us.

To you, Urvan, we give the heartiest of welcome. We hope you will like us and find among us loyal friends and neighbors. Though you are at present a stranger to most of us we are anxious to extend to you the hand of fellowship and to receive you as one of OUR selves.

And now as a token of our best wishes for your future happiness and its appreciation, however, inadequate, of the services which you, Aletha, have graciously rendered in our midst, we ask you to accept these gifts. We give them joyfully, knowing that we can always depend upon you for loyal and efficient service among us and as a small payment upon the debt which we already owe you.

Signed Winnifred Saylor, Mabel Hubble, Ada MacAllister, Stanley Spafford, and Surrell Hamilton.

Weddings



TIGHE—SUMMERS

A quiet wedding was solemnized on Tuesday morning at 8.30 o'clock at St. Michael's Church, when Annie Sommers of this city, was united in marriage to John Tighe of Read. The ceremony was performed by Rt. Rev. Monsignor Nicholson.

The bride wore a becoming dress of navy satin faced crepe and a corsage of roses. She was attended by her cousin, Mrs. Fanny Ryan of this city, who wore navy blue sheer and carried roses. Mr. Lawrence Witnes of Read, was groomsman.

Following a wedding breakfast Mr. and Mrs. Tighe left for Toronto and western points and on their return will reside at South Anne.

Slim Waist Again in Fashion

Marsha Hunt
Exercises keep her waistline small.
(By Helen Follett)

With foundation garmen's and frocks a trifle down in the waistline, considerable effort is going on among the girls to reduce the size of the "equator". Unlicensed waistline is a horrid beauty fault, and whether you're thin or fat, you may be, too many inches around the middle will detract from chic and charm.

Torso flexing is the best means of trimming down and keeping slim with feet five or six inches apart, hands on hips, chest up. Then deep breath; while drawing it in, send the upper portion of the body forward and down, trying to get able to lower your head until it is on a level with the knees. Expel the air from the lungs slowly, come back slowly to first position.

Six times is enough for that movement. Rest, take deep breaths and then let the upper portion of the body backward. That's not so easy. Keep the legs rigid and tummy flat and bend at the line of the waist.

With hands on the hips, see how far you can turn the body from side to side, keeping the legs straight. Ten minutes a day of these calisthenics, continued for six weeks, should cause the waistline to diminish.

GOOD MANNERS

by MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Etiquette in Public

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1.—Please tell me how to introduce a man to a woman. Should I say "Mrs. Smith, may I present Mr. Jones?"

2.—What should one do when with a man and one enters a restaurant, hotel or theatre . . . . should the lady walk first?

3.—When meeting men in street cars, or in any public place, should the lady speak first?

4.—When with a man, should the lady hold the man's arm, or should he hold hers, or is it improper if not done?

5.—If a lady enters a room in the morning where several men are eating breakfast, how should she greet them?

6.—When a man has taken a lady out for an evening, is it considered impolite not to ask him in?

7.—When leaving a theatre, does the lady or man suggest light refreshments?

8.—In inviting a man to one's home for Sunday dinner, or for an informal Sunday supper, where only two live in the house, is it considered bad taste, or is it correct?

9.—In writing and telling a man you enjoy his company as well as his kind consideration, I regret!

Olive

1.—When we make introductions, we keep in mind, most importantly, that a man is introduced to a woman. That is, the woman's name is mentioned first in the introduction. Thus, it is correct to use the form "may I present" or "may I introduce Mr. Jones to Miss Allen, may I present Mr. Graham". However, if you wish to make the introduction in reverse, you may mention only the names: "Miss Allen, Mr. Graham."

When we introduce two women to each other, we usually mention only the married name. If one is married and the other is not, the married woman's name is mentioned first. If both women are married, or if both are unmarried, and there is an appreciable difference in their ages or degree of distinction, the older woman's name is the name of the woman of greater distinction is mentioned first. And these same things apply when we introduce two men to each other.

When we make an introduction we should not say, "meet my friend", or "meet Mr. Graham here", but you to meet . . . .

There is only one correct way to acknowledge an introduction, and that is to say, "How do you do?" You may, if you like, add how long have caught the name correctly, or how long this has existed, but say, "Glad to meet you", or "Pleased to meet you", or "Happy to meet you, I'm sure".

2.—The usual custom, when a man and woman enter a restaurant together, is for the woman to follow the headwaiter to the table. But it is just as correct (and to my way of thinking, wiser) for the man to follow the headwaiter, to consult with him about the desired position of the table, and so forth.

3.—Yes . . . , the woman is given the prerogative of first acknowledging an acquaintanceship with a man. However, she waits for her to bow or to speak first.

4.—When a man and woman are walking together on the street, it is best form for them to walk independently . . . . not holding of arms.

5.—A friendly "Good Morning" would be the greeting.

6.—If it is late, or if the girl knows that it will be inconvenient for her family, she doesn't invite the man to come in. The writer has this understanding in this omission, and respects it.

7.—It is the man who would suggest going to supper after the theatre, though it would be the host. It would be he who would suggest the hospitality.

8.—This kind of invitation . . . . in which a man to Sunday dinner as one's home, or to Sunday evening supper . . . . is thoroughly proper; where the household consists of two ladies.

9.—In answering a man's letter, it is gracious and proper to tell him how much you enjoy his letters. And when you are thanking him after he has taken you to some place of entertainment, it is polite to say, "I had such a happy time tonight, Bob. It was a great pleasure to be with you, and I enjoyed every minute. I hope you'll going to see you again soon."

Advice to the Lovelorn

by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Because Indifferent After They Went "Steady"

Dear Miss Fairfax:

For three years he begged me to go "steady", but I wouldn't agree until this summer. We do not live in the same city, but nearby, and he does well if he comes to see me once a month. I'm getting tired of why he's changed so much since we agreed to go together.

I'll be a senior in high school next term, and I've told him many times that I don't care to think, but for some reason he seems very anxious to have me keep on with my school work. Have you it's manly? he mentioned marriage several times, but hasn't talked about it once lately.

If I can't be with him, I'd just as soon stay at home. I often wonder if I'm doing right by waiting for him.

V.

If the young man is of high school age, the same as you are, it isn't well to take these proposals of going "steady" too seriously. As this column has pointed out many times in the past, at high school age nearly all girls look attractive to boys, and it's a great mistake for a girl to take this temporary admiration too seriously, and to grow miserable and decline to go out with other friends when his boy doesn't show up. Remember there are as good fish in the sea as ever were taken out.

Wants to Marry Sister of Deceased Fiance

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Since my twin sister's death over a year ago, her fiance often comes to see me, and I must admit I have fallen in love with him. He has asked me to marry him. I told him I didn't believe it would be right for only my likeness to my deceased sister. He answered: "What difference does it make?" by saying I am a faithful and loving husband?" And he insists he can't live without me, and his love is returned.

Do you think I am selfish because I was to marry the husband of my sister? Should I give him up and marry someone else and just be friends?

Undecided

Some of the reasons you have thought up for not marrying your deceased sister's husband seem very fine-spun to me. What could be more natural than that he should have fallen in love with you, who resemble his former love so greatly? I can't see any reason for refusing him.

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton, M.D.

STRENGTHENING THE SICK INDIVIDUAL BY GIVING HIM PLENTY OF FOOD

Less than fifteen years ago patients with almost any illness were put on a diet to eat small foods, and very little liquid foods. There was the feeling that foods would create a disturbance which would pass into the blood and be carried to all parts of the body. The bowel was supplied with food, thus preventing accumulation of wastes. In other words, the old-fashioned method of building up the body's strength—to resist the ailment was put in the background.

Similarly when a patient was being prepared for operation, he was given small amounts of soft or liquid foods, his intestine flushed out and often an enema used also to make sure there were absolutely no "wastes" in the lower bowel.

As we think of it now we can understand why so many patients were slow in recovering and why surgical patients remained in hospital about a week longer than at present. Now, instead of a week or ten days for the patient to make up for the weakness caused by the ailment, he should eat and perhaps also too much purging.

It is also in the last, ten or fifteen years only that research physicians have been investigating foods thoroughly, their list of vitamins, the need of minerals, the action of vitamins.

Previous to this time any individual, after getting information on himself and possibly a few others, could announce to the public that he had discovered the proper food combination of foods to preserve health and prevent disease. And, as a matter of fact, the average physician had not studied foods sufficiently to fully understand many of the weakness of the claims made, or that the suggestion could not apply to everybody.

Thus, in speaking of the great advance made in the last few years by research physicians in well-equipped laboratories, Dr. Alvin McLester, one of America's outstanding food experts, states in the Journal of the American Medical Association, "Nutrition was formerly the step-child of medicine . . . . today medical men are keenly alive to the vastly important part which nutrition plays in the prevention and treatment of disease."

Dr. McLester calls special attention to the diet restrictions formerly imposed on typhoid, stomach ulcer, Bright's disease, diabetic and other patients and the harmful results therefrom.

Bribe a Boy To Avoid Drink?

Grenelle Says That's No Way to Convince Him of its Danger

(By Lisa Grenelle)

"How much do you think your father is worth if you are not to drink?" the boys asked Elmer.

"I'm going to get a car if I don't touch it until I'm 21. And then will I go on a "bender"! I was told mother is going to give me a hundred dollars—" began Harry.

"Oh, shucks it isn't worth it, one boy said.

"Why not? I don't like the stuff, anyway."

"Well," Elmer said, "I'm going to see what it's made worth my while."

An hour later, when Elmer emerged from his father's study, he was not elated over the "bribe" he had been offered. He wasn't even dispondented that Father had offered him no bribe at all. Elmer was deep in thought.

Won't Bribe Him

"In the first place," Elmer's father said, "I'm not going to bribe you to keep from drinking, and I can't figure out a better reason for not drinking than that. I think that better reason is self-respect."

Elmer's father did not tell Elmer that drinking was confined to the cheap, the ignorant, the vicious.

"Drinking too much isn't a sign of being a good fellow," he said, "it's simply a sign of weakness."

"But Dad—"

"Drinking is running away, Elmer. You can call it by anything else. Why do boys of your age drink for fun?"

"Because they're afraid they won't be considered grown-up and manly unless they do. Isn't that more like it?"

Impaire Efficiency

"Well, I suppose—

"You know, don't you, that the habit of drink, especially if it is accompanied by excessive drinking impaires efficiency? You can't be a pilot. The same rule applies in any vocation you choose, although not always so immediately or so obvious.

"The point I want to make clear to you now, my son, is that you're going to drink, sometime, if you don't drink too much. But you are not flattering yourself if already you have ceased to be able to enjoy yourself without the aid of a few drinks."

"You've taken all the kick out of it, Dad—"

"I meant to, Son."

That's how one father handled Elmer. Whether it was the right way or not, only time will be a proper test.

POPULAR YOUNG LADY HONOURED

Friends Gather to Present Gifts to Marguerite White, Rawdon

Rawdon. Sept. 14—On Friday evening September 10th over one hundred guests, young people, assembled at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest White, Rawdon, in honor of Miss Marguerite, on the occasion of her approaching marriage to Mr. Leon MacAllister of Sidney.

A large number of community friends from Mount Pleasant, Bethel and Wellman's were present besides guests from Sidney, Johnstown, Zion Hill, Stirling, Minto, Springbrook, Campbellford, Frankford, Belleville, Quinte and other points.

At 8.15 p.m. Rev. J. E. Beckel seated the honoured couple in the parlour and proceeded to the purpose of the gathering. After his address a splendid programme was enjoyed. Items of a humorous nature were given by Miss Frances McMullin, Mrs. Frank Smith and Mrs. Arthur Phillips. Miss Edna Thrasher and Miss Ada McAdam sang a duet. Solos were given by Miss Faye Andrews and Lindley Coughlin.

Miss Eileen MacMullin read an appropriate address and the young couple then opened the large assortment of parcels which revealed a costly array of silver, china, linen, blankets and kitchenware, showing the high esteem of the young couple.

Mr. Marguerite and Leon each graciously thanked their friends for the lovely evening, the third, when surrounding societies will be invited. Mrs. Semple, Dominion Board President will be the speaker. Lunch was served by the group in charge.

Miss Marguerite and Leon each graciously thanked their friends for the lovely evening, the third, when surrounding societies will be invited. Mrs. Semple, Dominion Board President will be the speaker. Lunch was served by the group in charge.

All joined in singing "For They are Jolly Good Fellows," and a dainty lunch was served a delicious lunch.

The following ladies:

Mount Pleasant, Sept. 10, 1937.

Dear Marguerite and Leon:

We, your friends and relatives have gathered here this evening to spend a social hour with you before your approaching marriage.

We all realize Marguerite that it will be very difficult to fill your place in the church and community activities. All of us have enjoyed your vocal talents both in the church choir and at our social gatherings and you have also been a faithful Sunday School and Young People's Society worker and an interested reader on the teacher executive. We know that our loss will be another's gain and we are sure that you will continue to use your talents for the Master in whatever church you may be in a different community.

Leon, although you are a newcomer among who we assembled here tonight, we assure you that both you and your intended bride will always be warmly welcomed to Mount Pleasant and we shall be delighted to have you with us whenever it is possible for you to pay us a friendly visit. We extend to you and your wife our choice of a helpmate and sincerely hope that you will have many and prosperous journey for your matrimonial voyage through life. It has been said that "a home means love and charity, companionship and sweet content. The earthly with the heavenly all blended together and so we wish you a happy home.

As is our custom we have brought with us tonight a few gifts and we sincerely hope that as they are used in your home that these articles will serve as a reminder of your many friends at Mount Pleasant and we trust that they will help you over the kindliest wishes on this momentous and happy occasion. Signed on behalf of your Mount Pleasant friends —Eileen MacMullin, Faye Andrews, Edna Thrasher, Frances McKeown, Vera McAdam.

W.M.S.

The September meeting of Mount Pleasant Women's Missionary Society was held at the church with an attendance of thirteen members who answered roll call with the Bible verse "praise".

Mrs. Hogar McKeown prepared the program and also sang an appropriate solo at the close of an interesting devotional talk on "prayer" given by Mrs. John Holmes.

The business opened with quiet music and the president read a thought-ful poem as the call to worship each person offered a sentence prayer and all sang a hymn. Miss Edna Thrasher read the Bible lesson.

In the business period Mrs. Roy Thrasher with Miss Frances McKeown as alternate was appointed as delegate to the sectional rally which will be held at Foxboro on October 1.

The resignation of Miss Edna Thrasher who has been the very efficient Mission Band leader for the past six years was accepted with sincerity and the society deeply realizes the great loss will be to our community's gain. Mrs. Frances McKeown, the assistant Band Leader will carry on—the work until the election of officers in November.

Mrs. Frank Smith gave an interesting synopsis of the last chapter of the study book "John and Women of Far Horizons".

Mrs. Kenneth Weaver sang "Help Somebody Today" and Mrs. Allan Bailey read a timely selection on "The Four Horsemen".

In the study on Foreign Missions of recent selections were given by Mrs. Arthur Phillips, Mrs. J. E. Beckel and Mrs. Frank Smith. The president presented a few highlights from the recent "school for leaders" at Wilton.

This helpful service was dismissed with the singing of the Lord's Prayer in unison.

WHEEL OF KINGSFORD-SMITH PLANE IS FOUND FLOATING OFF THE BURMA COAST

The two-year-old mystery surrounding disappearance of Captain Charles Kingsford-Smith, famous Australian aviator, while on flight from London to Australia in November, 1935, was apparently solved recently. A tire, wheel and brakes landing gear found floating in the Andaman Sea off the coast of Burma was positively identified as part of his ship.

The tire, floating for nearly two years, was still fully inflated, according to H. M. Andrews of Moulmein, Burma, who forwarded the picture and details.

A photograph plainly showing the tire factory numerals was forwarded to the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Co. With assistance of the Lockheed Aircraft Corporation, definite proof was established that the parts once belonged on Kingsford-Smith's American airplane.

Kingsford-Smith was believed to have gone down in a severe storm while crossing the Bay of Bengal between Allahabad and Singapore, or to have been lost in the Jungle country.

The wreckage was taken out of the sea across the Gulf of Martaban from Rangoon, Goodrich was advised.

The sun sparkled on the waters of the lake and a gentle breeze played about the pines that fringed the shore.

Cynthia stood just inside the picket fence that ran in front of her summer home. It was the typical Cape Cod cottage, plain as to outline with no gables or dormers to detract from the original plan.

An air of peace pervaded the entire picture, with the exception of Cynthia herself. She stood surveying a pile which she had just nailed to the house. It read: GENUINE ANTIQUES FOR SALE.

The Chases had been among the early settlers of Cape Cod, and the house and furnishings had passed from generation to generation. Cynthia's grandmother had died during the previous winter and that made Cynthia sole heir and survivor.

It seemed advisable to dispose of the house and its contents. Cynthia, who had an enviable record as a librarian in New York and who was greatly interested in the "vanishing American," was employed in an Indian school.

The work, varied by without a single applicant and Cynthia began to feel secure. Flowers grew in profusion and she spent many hours among her beds, growing the old-fashioned ones she had always so fond.

As she stood, trowel in hand, scrutinizing the effect of bright perennials beside a clump of hollyhocks, she heard somebody walk up the brick path. The person saw Cynthia and came to a sudden stop.

"May I look at the antiques you are offering for sale?" he asked.

Cynthia pulled herself together with an effort. "Yes," was her laconic reply.

They entered the house. Beside the hearth stood an old-fashioned three-legged stool, simplicity. Brass warming - pans, bellows, dogs, and fire tools. Next door was one with one another in brilliant. A secretary stood at one end of the room, a Governor Winthrop desk in a corner, chairs of different periods stood about, a high-boy and a butterfly table were in the group. In the kitchen was a fine old cupboard to interest the antique collector.

The man looked them all over appraisingly. Cynthia felt sure that he had found real treasure.

"Have you anything else, special pieces or are they all for sale?" he asked.

Cynthia swallowed hard. "They are all for sale," she replied rather faintly. She had meant to keep a few, but because it seems best that I should.

He looked at Cynthia and sensed the struggle and she was surprised at his understanding. "Of course," he thought. "Too bad," he thought. "Cooking girl. Common sense variety. Wonderful stuff. Glad she had the wisdom to keep it."

"I am interested chiefly in the secretary," he said, "but I do not want to make a decision now. Do you mind if I drop in again in a day or two?"

"Not at all. Come at any time and I'll gladly show you my treasures again," she replied coldly.

He handed her his card. She held it in her hand and read: Mr. Anthony F. Turner was engraved in script.

The next afternoon he came again. Cynthia was sitting on a rustic bench in the garden, sewing, head bent.

"You want to see the secretary again?" she said, and started to rise.

"No special hurry," he said. "May I sit down?"

She looked for half an hour. Then he looked at the secretary and agreed to take it. Cynthia's price she asked. He intimated that there might possibly be a reduction if he could be liked to do it leisurely. He hoped to be in the neighborhood for a month and during that time would make final decisions. Cynthia was to wait until then?

The next day at noon he dropped in. He and Cynthia was preparing her lunch. There was plenty for two. He ate with a good will. Cynthia told him about herself and her plans. Somehow, they grew surprisingly well acquainted in a very short time.

He found him at the cottage for a brief period, during which Cynthia wrapped everything from books and pictures to pollitics. Each day he came, bringing Cynthia's chatels and bought one. It looked as though he would have them all.

On the tenth day he wanted to know if the cottage could be bought. "Yes," she said, in a manner like the thought that the things will not be disposed of, everything will remain as it is now." She smiled, though tears were very near.

"I can make this possible only under one condition," he retorted.

She looked bewildered. "And what is that?" she asked.

"That you remain its mistress," he replied.

"Perhaps I shall after you present the proper credentials," she said briskly.

"I'll get them at once, together with a marriage license," he said.

"What an inconsistent young man you are," she said jauntingly. "You told me a few days ago that you did not want the cottage."

"Oh, that had reference only to antique furniture and not to modern young ladies."

Canada's Athletes are Above '34 Level in Track and Field Trials for Br. Empire Games

In Times, Distances And Heights Records Are of Better Standing

SPRINTERS SCARCE

Does Not Appear to be a Second Williams on Horizon

Toronto, Sept. 14.—(CP)—Providing, for the basis of comparison, anyway, that the 1938 British Empire games competition is no better than in 1934, Canada should carry off a reasonable share of track and field titles in the third "Olympics" in Australia next February.

Placing the best Canadian times, distances and heights developed in some trials against Empire records set at London, England in 1934, it would appear the Dominion's boys and girls will at least equal the 1934 record when they brought home five Empire crowns.

The bulk of the country's track and field talent is centred in Ontario, records of some trials indicate, but the Maritimes, where men's trials yet are to be held, probably will provide the leading feminine sprinter of the Canadian team, and the West likely will receive liberal representation in the sprints and weight events.

Probably the most outstanding of the present track and field crop, leaping Larry O'Connor of Toronto, seems the best bet for a Canadian victory with a half-dozen or more in the comfortable position of having turned in times and distances comparing favorably with Empire record marks. There is no definite word how many will be selected for the Australian trip.

O'Connor ran the 120-yard hurdles in 15.3 seconds, equal to the mark Don Finlay of England set in winning the event in London. But O'Connor, smooth as a deer over the barriers, can go faster than that.

Scarcity in Sprinters

Right now, there does not appear to be a real outstanding sprinter in the Dominion. Certainly there is none to turn in a 9.6 that won the 100 for Percy Williams in 1930. Young Harry Colman of Winnipeg has the best time this year of 10.1 against 10.5 for Jack Brown of Toronto.

Two field event marks bettering Empire records were set by Canadians in trials, at Allen Meagher of Halifax, churned the 190 in 11 seconds flat, a tenth of a second faster than Etie Hiscock's time for England three years ago.

Ernie Ow of Winnipeg, set up a new Canadian discus mark in the Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta head trials with a heave of 145 feet, 9 inches, more than nine feet better than the Empire record of Harry Hart of South Africa.

Jim Donaghy of Toronto should throw the javelin 215 feet or a little more—he did 202-10 in the trials—compared with the Empire mark of 207-1 1-2.

Other top-notch efforts in Canadian trials included 49.4 by Johnny Loaring of Ottawa, Ont., and 50.4 by Jack Fraser of Vancouver in the 440, compared with the Empire record of 46 flat.

Max Lenover of Chatham, Ont., did 1.94 in the high jump, and Bill Dale of Victoria, under better conditions, raised it to 1.96-1. Phil Edwards, British Guiana's great middle-distance star who ran as a Canadian in the 1934 games, holds the games mark of 1.34.2.

OSHAWA COPS C. O. B. L. FLAG

Biddle Restricts Eliminated Ponies To Three Hits

Oshawa, Sept. 14.—With Ken (Jake) Biddle hurling three-hit ball, Oshawa General Motors, Senior O.B.A.A. champions, won their second successive C.O.B.L. title at Alexandra Park last evening when they defeated Kingston Ponies 4 to 1. Although Oshawa nicked Tony Paczkowski for ten hits, the big right-hander hurled shutout ball after a disastrous first inning, in the opening frame Oshawa collected four hits including a homer by Doug May and a triple by Boss Bennett for all their runs. Kingston lost a glorious chance in the same inning when they filled the bases with none out but Biddle's baseball held them runless.

Oshawa made trouble in bit Biddle and he led Oshawa to their third straight playoff win after they had dropped the first in the best-of-five series. Pep Hurst, fiery Oshawa left fielder, was ejected from the game in the first inning after a verbal conflict with Umpire Collins.

PLAY-OFF SOFTBALL TILT IS TIED HERE

Orillia Plays at Point Anne in O. A. A. Semi-Final

After battling for seven innings to a tie, the Napanee Mic Mac Havelock intermediate O.A.S.A. play-off game at the Coleman Plate diamond, yesterday was called on account of darkness in the eighth inning, the final score being seven all. The game was a third and deciding tussle and will be replayed at the Belleville Exhibition Park on Thursday.

The Napanee nine forged to the fore and were leading 4-1 in the third, but the Havelock squad staged a come-back to notch four runs in their half of the fourth and take the lead. At the end of the seventh the count was tied and even all. In the initial half of the eighth, however, Napanee scored six runs, but owing to darkness the officials were forced to call the game in the last half of the eighth, reverting the score to the tie count of the seventh, resulting in a second "saw-off" game to be played today.

The O.A.S.A. also announced yesterday the Point Anne "Centennial" would meet the Orillia intermediates in the first game of the Intermediate O.A.S.A. semi-finals at Point Anne on Wednesday, the return game being listed for Orillia on Saturday. The Point Anne nine qualified for the provincial semi-finals by virtue of their eliminating the Toronto Long Branch team in the opening round of Ontario softball play-offs.

Running into second base after his single in the third inning of a game with the Chicago Cubs, Dizzy Dean apparently hurt the foot that put him out of action from the time of the All-Star game until recently. His injury wasn't serious, however, as the great Dizzy remained in the game, shortly after. The Cubs beat him 4-0 behind the pitching of Larry French. He is seen surrounded by Cub players, his own teammates being conspicuous by their apparent lack of concern as he nurses the injured foot. The game was played at Chicago

Farr and Schmeling No. 1. Contenders

Schmeling who holds a knock-out victory over the Brown Bomber, and Farr, defeated in his first title quest two weeks ago, ranked well above former champion Jimmy Braddock in the N.B.A.'s official rankings.

J., No. 6; Nathan Mann of New York City, No. 7; Al McCoy of Boston, No. 8; Arturo Godoy of Chile, No. 9, and Roscoe Toles of Detroit, No. 10.

CALLING 'EM Between the Lines

with Ken J. Colling

The following poem, composed by Martin B. Conway, Vice-President of the Canadian Amateur Lacrosse Association, was recently afforded Gordon Delaney, President of the Belleville Lacrosse Club, on his turn, was kind enough to pass the article along to us. Ed reader:

Lacrosse, the Sport of Canada

I'm one of the old lacrosse boys, a friend of the gutted-stick;

I tell you, the old game's got me, and I'm sticking to it.

Of the days that it takes for training; of the games that are earned and lost—

"I'm through," I say, when we put away our sticks with the Autumn frost.

But when May comes down on the West wind, 'tis then that I feel the pang

At the thought of the fun I'd be missing, and you find me back with the old gang.

I've done my shanks in the scorching heat, a heat that no one knows

Who has not lived for a summer in "Our Lady of the Snows".

I've felt the grass a-frimble, and the sting of tongue-lashing hail;

While the sweat on my neck and forehead streamed down like a water-spout.

I've seen the field a-whirling, and never really knew

How I nerved myself for another spell—and stayed till the whistle blew.

They are jolts, and you bet you feel them, when you get the body blow;

Some bumps you take and some bumps you give—in the end you get square.

Maybe you shed a tooth or two; your skin is not always whole;

But it's worth it when you grab the ball and bang in the winning goal.

You know that the crowd is with you; you can hear the loud mouthed fan,

"Go down on the home, for the love of Mike", or "Everyone cover a man".

And oh, how your blood goes leaping when the boys in the brothers roar,

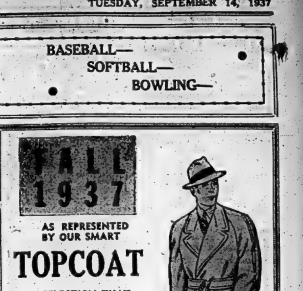
"Bore in on the nets and break the rip—just two minutes to score".

You have pulled out a game by a goal, a penalty, or you've cracked beneath the strain,

But they still have a thrill in after years when you play them all over again—

So measure the creases ready, and pin the nets in place,

The teams are padded and steady, and the ball is there to face;



"I'll be out to do my darndest, if I'm only an "Also ran".

For this is the sport of Canada, the game that takes a man.

General Manager Warren C. Giles of the Cincinnati Reds, announced the unconditional release of Outfielder Chuck Dressen yesterday. Coaches Tom Sheehan and Long George Kelly also fell under the axe. For the remainder of the current season, Chief Scout Jack Wallace will guide the Red Stockings, but the salaries of the three dismissed men will continue until the end of the present season.

Oshawa repeated their triumph over the Kingston Ponies, C.O.B.L. for the third time in history when they defeated the Kingston Ponies 4-1. In a third victory in four starts yesterday, Ken "Jake" Biddle, hurled great ball, once the Motor City crew gave him four big runs to work on in the initial frame, but for those disinterested, it will always remain a great mystery just why Manager Joe Daley and his board of strategy failed to score in the initial frame. The Ponies got the first three men on the sacks, but a man out in the initial frame, and failed to score the goods. The Kingston outfit never heard of "One Run John McGraw", but it surely looked like a golden opportunity to at least force the issue to a fifth and deciding game.

It is seldom a play-off club is so fortunate as to get their initial three belters aboard. Surely that should be hard enough, but then to "permit them to die there is a little less than criminal. We are not trying to belittle "Jake" Biddle, who stood out as the star of the entire C.O.B.L. play-offs, in our mind. Biddle was in every game of the Peterboro' series, except one. Then, when the Motor City crew were up against it, Biddle nabbed to the hilltop and in the pinch stopped the Ponies in Oshawa, after having hurled and lost the day prior in Kingston. Biddle the Oshawa club can hand their hats to their ace hurler, Biddle.

BEACHES SHORT ON LINE PLAYERS

Coach Ponton Faced With Drought of Middle Wingers

Toronto, Sept. 14.—(CP)— A shortage of middle wing players faces Coach Alex Ponton of Toronto Balmy Beach, Ontario Rugby Football Union entry, this fall. A series of departures from the team's ranks has cut a wide swathe through the list of available men for that position. With an exhibition game with Roughriders at Ottawa scheduled for September 18, Ponton feels he has work to do.

Ernie Hempey and Ab Pople, who did fine work at middle wing, both have both left Toronto, Hempey to play with Indians, Montreal's Interprovincial Union Club, and Pople to work in Welland. Davis and Bart Farley, capable middlewings, are unable to perform this fall.

'Bill the Terror', Detective, Retires

New York, Sept. 14.—(CP) — William J. (Bill the Terror) Quaine, first grade detective, ends thirty years in the New York police department today and at midnight retires on pension.

During his service, the 56-year-old Irishman who left the University of Dublin to pound Manhattan's pavements in the navy blue of the New York police, received three citations.

He smashed half a dozen old time gangs and at one time, it was reported, the underworld placed a price of $10,000 on the head of the "toughest cop in the department.

However Quaine performed his duty without ever being seriously injured. On one occasion he had to fight off eight gun-toting assailants. He killed one. He was credited with a major part in the smashing of Harlem's "Little Italy" gangs.

ON BASEBALL TOUR

On an exhibition tour, Joe Louis heavyweight champion of the world and his manager, Julian Brown, Bombers, visited the Canadian National Exhibition. In an exhibition game which Joe umpired on the base for four innings. His team was defeated by the selected Toronto team.

MISSING GIRL

By Maryse Rutledge

"We will go to the casino tonight," the Princess announced that Saturday. "There is a most charming man, I want you to meet."

But the charming man, whoever he was, didn't turn up. Katia, in one of her seven black sequined evening dresses, sat at the cocktail table. Beside her in white, Jane was pale as one of the first spring daffodils. They would have little conference talk when they got back to the villa, she decided, watching the drift of jewelled evening gowns and white, black and white of well-tailored men. They mean nothing to her, these sleek people sliding and gliding over surfaces. She thought of Bertie Cotter with a sense of sadness. How he would have enjoyed it and swaggered around in his boy from Fond du Lac who had played once too often. And here was she, the girl from a Fond du Lac garage who had gambling away her dreams.

Whatever are you thinking of?" the Princess said quite harshly. "You sit like a statue. We have not seen Monsieur Dixon lately. There was a strange, almost anxious note to her voice. "Do you not know if he has gone?"

"I haven't the faintest—" Jane began. Then, suddenly the world seemed to stop as the blood drained from her cheeks. The Princess followed her frozen stare, and murmured, "Mon Dieu—"

Slender in evening clothes, Elmer Dixon walked toward them, and, long-limbed and grim, beside him strode Tony Kaye.

The lights blurred with the rocketing of Jane's heart from her stillness. Somehow Mr. Dixon had found out who she was, and, perhaps because he felt sorry for her he had gone to Tony. Told him how lonely she was in this beastly artificial life. He was coming to her.

She half rose from her chair, not noticing the Princess, who had suddenly grown very old.

The two men stood over the table, and what she saw in their faces caused Jane to sink back in her chair.

Tony spoke, his voice as cold as steel. "This time you've gone too far," he said. "Fortunately for him, Mr. Dixon got certain information and communicated at once with me in Paris. You can't play the same game twice."

CHAPTER XXVIII
ACCUSATION

"You can't play the same game twice."

What was Tony saying! And there at the limit, limit cliff of Mr. Dixon so stern! As in a nightmare the two men overhung the small table with its half-sipped champagne cocktail glasses. Jane's fingers gripped the edge of her chair. Her husband—Tony still was her husband—and this other man who had been her friend, standing like judges before her. Was she really sitting here in the Biarritz Casino, with its gay night life streaming by, dance music floating in? Or was this another nightmare, from which she would awaken, again alone, in her room in the villa!

The Princess Tcheirea had moved only slightly, with the faintest of shrugs, her strong features as if folding in defeat. But from the firm lines of her satin, her shoulders rose as arrogantly as Anthony Kaye's, and her black eyebrows were bars holding to the last.

Before Jane could speak, she said: "Ah, Monsieur Kaye, you were also playing poker, perhaps. Your wife would be on the street if you were not for me. And I am not rich—no, not as you are."

"I don't understand," Jane whispered, starting up, and then the ringed gold of her curls her eyes were very young and frightened. All her suspicions of Katia Tcheirea rushed back.

Tony's voice was low and hard: "Must I make myself clearer? I've given this gentleman my check for the $2,000 he contributed towards your care. A poor little girl who can't remember who she is. Another case of amnesia? And you, Madame—"

He turned to the Princess with stinging contempt. "You are slow that any woman I had married would be on the street except for gaiety."

Jane started up from her chair. "Oh, what is this? What does it mean?"

For a moment, Katia Tcheirea looked at her almost pityingly. Then she shrugged again. "What could I do, ma chere? Affairs going so badly, and we had to live. I only told Monsieur Dixon that I found you in Paris, ma malade—very ill from a shock, perhaps. Was not that true? I possibly exaggerated a little when I told him you only remembering your name—Jane Carey. It is a rather public place to discuss this, not so?" And she glanced from their speechless table to the shifting groups. Tony's tall body blocked them into privacy. "I'm interested in your explanations, Madame. Do continue. I'm sure Mr. Dixon is interested, too." He glanced toward Jane. "You'll be less convincing and rounder in their glitter as, weakly, she obeyed.

Then Princess spoke directly to her. "It was for your good," she said. "You were too proud. You would not accept anything from Monsieur Kaye. I asked Monsieur Dixon not to tell you of—his so kind help, since you were yet in a nervous condition. $5 voila! After all, my dear, it was your own story that gave us the idea."

Jane was on her feet again, tall in the sheathing white satin. "And you can believe that I ever knew what she was doing!" Her white face blazed at Tony and Mr. Dixon.

People were settling at tables nearby with bright, fleeting stares in their direction.

Mr. Dixon's brown eyes wavered, elderly face. "I only got in touch with Mr. Kaye," he muttered, "when quite by chance a man I was taking to at the hotel said he'd seen you in Paris—and well, he seemed to know who you were."

The Princess Tcheirea stood up, still a dominating figure. "It is better we go." She laid her hand on Jane's arm.

But Jane didn't move. Her eyes were on Tony. "When I left the Katia," she said. "But do you think me capable of that? She looked straight into his bitter, gray eyes.

A slight contraction as of pain drew down the corners of his lips, deepening the lines. But his mind was set against her loveliness that had once deceived him. She had spoiled what might have been so worth while, plunging him back into the old cynical, reckless life, with Lorna streaking like a red flame through days and nights of tawdry play. No, he couldn't forgive.

So between the four of them, standing there among lights and rippling movement beyond the corner table, a silence spun thin and tense before Tony spoke. "Your association with this woman is enough for me," he said sternly. "Undeniably, we're not yet divorced. The only way you can prove that you took no conscious part in this fraud is by breaking your present connections. As for you, Princess," he said curtly, "Mr. Dixon has had you investigated. If in 24 hours you shall see that you are requested to leave by the authorities as undesirable."

Mr. Dixon bulked forward, his glasses bright against the ruddier glow of his cheeks. "I'm of Mr. Kaye's avoided looking at Jane. "The Princess Tcheirea deliberately lit one of her Russian cigarettes. "It is apparently Monsieur Kaye who commands. You are rather clever, my dear. But it's nothing matters." There was melancholy dignity to her as she moved away, erect in her black gown.

Tony had been too hard. A sudden fierce defiance whirled Jane around to face the two men. "You can't dictate to me," she said and impulsively she was off, almost flying in her white and gold past floured faces and lights. She caught up with Katia Tcheirea at the entrance of the casino. "I'm coming with you," she said breathlessly.

"Ah!—so?" For a second tenderness softened her harsh face. Then another word was uttered until they were back in the villa. They faced each other in the small, stiff salon.

"Your way," Jane said then in a tone before—anyone. It's true, though, all Tony said. You used me to get $2,000 from Mr. Dixon?"

Katia Tcheirea nodded. "I did not think it would harm you," she said simply. "We—I needed the money."

Jane turned away with a shudder. "I'll never forgive you for that. And Tony paid back Mr. Dixon! No, it's too much—too horrible."

"It is life," the Princess said wearily, "just as it is life that because of your Tony I must leave Biarritz. He is quite right. Even if they could not force me to go, they could make everything most unpleasant, and ruin my shoes. Ah, well—there are other places, and the season will soon be over."

"I don't know how I ever could have been attracted to you," Jane broke out passionately. "You're really a dreadful person. I shall leave on the first train tomorrow morning for Paris. I can only hope you won't be on the same train."

The Princess paced to the end of the room and back. "Once I was a very great lady. Before the revolution," she said gently. "A few rags are left—here." She touched her heart. "Our paths shall not cross again, my dear. Have you any money, if I may be so indiscreet?"

WALL ST. CLOSE

STAMGDS	5/64c	ed.Co.:

New York, Sept 14 (AP)—Leading stocks hit the upgrade in today's market for the best recovery in two weeks, many gaining 1 to 3 points and a few as much as 10 or so at the best.

After an opening advance some hesitancy appeared. Offerings were quickly absorbed and the list swung into a rally that, for a while, put the ticker tape two minutes behind. Mild profit-selling near the final hour reduced extreme advances in many cases. Transfers were about 1,700,000 shares.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Sept. 14 (CP)—Share prices swung upward under a wave of buying today on the Toronto market, the action reflecting a strong tone on the New York Board. Strength was in evidence from the opening on a less ruffled political atmosphere in Europe and the recovery gained headway in the later afternoon, giving the market a strong close. Gains of points appeared in the Industrials and Senior Base Metals and substantial gains marked the secondary golds.

Brazilian, Massey-Harris common, the leading distillery stocks and majority of the Building, Utility and Food shares moved to higher ground. C.P.R. and Ford A advanced about 1-4 to 1-2. In the Steel, Canadian Car firmed more than a point, and National Steel Car advanced about 1-4 to 1-2. In the Golds, Lake Shore, Dominion Oil, Pato, Pato-Hersey and Steel of Canada.

Paper Stocks were much improved. Abitibi 1st preferred about four points and gains of 1-4 to 1-2 were boarded for Abitibi common and 2nd, Great Lakes issues. Bank were quiet and steady.

International Petroleum added more than a point and Superior, Canadian Malting and Imperial B and Royalite added 1 to 2 points each.

McIntyre, Dome and Lake Shore advanced about a point each and gains of 20 to 35 cents appeared in the same medium-price stocks.

Gains of 2 points or more were held by International Nickel, Preters and Noranda and Hudson Bay was up about 1 3-4 at the close.

MARKET COMMENT

St. Lawrence Corporation "A" sold down to 22¾ on Saturday, a new low for the year. In connection with this security it is pertinent to point out that dividend arrears on the stock now amount to $12.25 a share, so that at its recent low a buyer of the stock was actually paying only $10.50 a share. The company is understood to be earning at the rate of $3 in the current year, with the prospects for 1938 of course, much more promising. All in all, St. Lawrence "A" appears to be one of the more attractive of the newsprint group.

The Trader in Barron's points out that the sickening break of last week ought to drive home the fact that the stock market can do anything anytime. Easy money, unparalleled marginal restrictions, high earning power, restrictions against short selling, and all of the thousand and one Roosevelt-lations designed to protect the investor have been completely powerless to prevent the natural working out of liquidation. Selling has been the respecter of Individual issues or groups.

As usual, there has to be an explanation and, naturally, it is the tense European situation. It serves as well as any. Yet, the foreign dangers were at no time actually weak, much less demoralized, and the volume of selling orders from abroad at no time approached the size of those of April. Had the market not been so vulnerable, it would have stood its ground. The news simply favored the trend.

A trading market may be expected for the immediate future. Nimble traders have been presented with a number of opportunities in the past week but when liquidation has finally been completed, a sustained rise can be expected.

Produce Prices on Montreal Market

Montreal, Sept. 14—Advances on the local egg market last week were extended when trading started on another week yesterday. Fresh receipts in the city were 1c to 2c higher than last week's close and prices to the retail trade, on small lots, were put up a similar amount. Butter and cheese ruled easy. Sales at the Canadian Commodity Exchange were 650 boxes of butter from 26 creameries, of which 200 boxes sold at 28 1-8c and 450 boxes sold at 26c, the latter being the closing maximum price posted. Small lots to the retail trade were quoted by jobbers at 27 1-2c for solids and 28c for prints.

On the egg market the demand was reported better than the supply, with graded shipments in free cases selling at 30-31c for A-large, 28-29c for A-medium and 24c for A-pullets. Empire grades were unchanged at 32-34c for A large and 30c for A-medium.

Order-in-Council Benefits British Textile Industry

Increase Empire Content Cotton Fabrics Demanded

DIRECTED AT JAPAN

Ottawa, Sept. 14—(CP)—Operations of foreign exporters who have tried to beat the Canadian customs by claiming British preference for their commodities, under certain conditions, will be curbed in consequence of an order-in-council approved by Cabinet. The government has increased the Empire content required on cotton fabrics "further manufactured than bleached" from 33 1-3 per cent to 50 per cent.

Canadian imports with a total annual value of $3,307,245 are affected.

The order was prompted on representations from the United Kingdom government, made in accordance with the terms of the trade treaty which came into force Sept. 1. It is aimed at a practice which permitted foreign manufacturers of cotton fabrics to print their wares for England to be finished. By so doing, they were able to claim a content 33 1-3 per cent of Empire work. The goods were then shipped to Canada, and, entering as British goods, received the benefits of the preference.

During the hearings of the Royal Commission probing the textile industry, complaints were voiced on behalf of the primary textile institute to send their grey cloth to England, have it further processed there to an extent that it would fulfill the 33 1-3 per cent Empire content requirement, and then ship it from England to Canada. The goods then came in under the British preference schedule of the customs tariff.

The new fills cotton manufacturers of England, whom the agreement was designed to benefit, will thus put at a disadvantage. The extent of this was indicated by the fact that of the $3,307,245 worth of printed cotton goods imported into this country during the last fiscal year, $2,364,214 came from England, and the remainder from foreign countries.

How much of the $2,364,214 worth of English goods was represented by imports which had "been" the British reference policy by those methods could not be ascertained.

The filing of the Empire content requirement to 50 per cent is designed to counteract this condition.

Loses Control of Car Picton Man Injured

Losing control of his automobile on Highway No. 37, one mile west of Bloomfield, late Saturday night, Roy Thurston, Picton, was pinned by England when the car left the highway, hurtled across a deep ditch and crashed into a telephone pole. Two companions travelling with Thurston were uninjured.

Dr. T. S. Philp of Picton, attended the injured man who was found pinned under the steering wheel. The car was badly damaged.

Franc at Lowest In Many Years

Paris, Sept. 15 (AP)—A sailing wave today toppled the French franc to its lowest depth in more than a decade.

The franc closed at 29.35 to the dollar and 144.76 to the pound sterling. In terms of the dollar that is 3.407 cents. The government currency stabilizing fund has abandoned attempts to bolster it for the time being, and, some believe, it may go eventually to 30.00 to the dollar.

The drop marked a new level in the long decline of the currency since the face which Premier Raymond Poincare stabilized in 1926 at 25.51 to the dollar, or 3.91 cents, after a period of severe financial unrest.

DARTS IN FRONT OF CAR, 5 YEAR OLD BOY KILLED

Arthur W. Munroe on Scooter Rides Into Traffic

STATION ST. FATALITY

Driver of Motor Car Tries to Swerve to Avoid Striking Boy

As the result of a fractured skull, sustained when knocked to the pavement by an automobile driven by Wallace Munroe, five-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Munroe, 86 Station street, died on arrival at the Belleville General Hospital late Tuesday afternoon. The little lad was playing along the curb, riding his scooter wagon when he suddenly darted out in front of the passing automobile, driven by Mrs. John H. Bone, 27 Earl street.

Mrs. Bone was proceeding south on Station street, when between Brown and Burrell Streets, the little Munroe lad suddenly rode, without warning, from the curb on his scooter. Mrs. Bone tried frantically to avoid striking the child but was unable to stop in time. The left but the right front tender struck the lad and knocked him to the pavement with such force that the skull was fractured. Dr. A. A. Walters was passing at the time and immediately stopped to render assistance and succeeded in stopping the flow of blood en route to the hospital in Martin's ambulance. The lad never regained consciousness upon arrival at the institution.

Driver's Account

According to the only eye-witness, Mrs. Bone, the little lad was sitting on the verandah of her home at 88 Station Street and Mr. H. E. Bone, a passenger in the car driven by his wife, there was no indication or warning given that the boy intended to leave his position suddenly. Mrs. Bone could not suddenly turned to his left and darted on the street directly into the path of the vehicle.

Detective Fred Izard and Traffic Officer Doug. Ellis investigated the tragedy and found that Mrs. Bone had made every effort to avoid the accident, her car finally coming to rest in a private driveway on the east side of Station Street, where she had swerved across the street to do so. Mr. Bone rushed the little lad. The accident happened within a few feet of the Bridge Street intersection where Mrs. Munroe was busied with her house work. Neighbours, hearing the screams of the child, ran to the boy playing alongside of the curb and found the little fellow after the accident and thought nothing of this occurrence as his account, he was playing quite close to the curb, until just before the arrival of the car, when he darted out alone.

The inquest looking into the death of Arthur W. Munroe opened at the Martin Funeral Parlors, Church St., on Wednesday and following the coroner's jury viewing the body and identification of the deceased by his father, Mr. A. Robertson adjourned the hearing until Thursday next at the Police Court rooms.

Dr. G. A. Walters viewed the body along with the coroner's jury and testified the boy died as the result of a fractured skull, while the boy's father, Arthur Munroe, established identification. The body was then released for burial.

The coroner's jury, empanelled by Sergeant Arthur Booth, consisted of George Wilson, Foreman, Percy Mason, Russell Wotten, Reg. Ross, Wm. Boyd, Harry Abbott, Everett Smith and Victor Bird.

Arthur Wallace Munroe was in his 6th year and was born at Campbellford, two months ago he came with his parents from Stirling to reside at Belleville.

Surviving him besides his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Munroe, is one brother Robert Leslie Munroe, age two years.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

'Mine with Iron Door' Is Sought by Engineer

$90,000,000 in Gold Believed Stored in Arizona by Spanish Conquistadors Ages Ago, According to Legend

$60,000,000.—

Hits Searched 50 Years Ago

About 50 years ago, as Sturdy told the story, a great-great-nephew of the Francisco Arvizu here from Spain with his uncle's maps. He hired a prospector, known only now as "old Pearson", and together they searched the hills for months with no success.

A Frenchman, Charsieur, spent years looking for the "iron door". His widow and daughter still have the maps.

The 80 acres on which the mine is supposed to be located, is now valued at $40,000, Sturdy said. He owns the fourth of it, and the rest is owned by a friend and the Apache Indian Reservation.

15 Year Search

Sturdy's friend, C. W. McKee, of Wickenburg, Arizona, has been searching for the door 13 years.

"McKee and I plan," Sturdy declared, "to find a rock that has tumbled down from the mountain three years ago. All the maps existent lead to one particular mountain. Under those fallen rocks will find the door."

McKee has collected 46 maps, Sturdy said, drawn on human skin, and inscribed with strange hieroglyphics.

The Escalante mine was the inspiration of Harold Bell Wright's novel, "The Mine With the Iron Door."

CHILD IS KILLED WHILE PLAYING IN TOMATO FIELD

Truck Backing up Runs Over Helen MacDonald, 20 Months Old

NEAR WELLINGTON

Uncle Was Backing up Truck to Pile of Tomato Crates

Death struck swiftly in a tomato field on the farm of Mrs. Cora MacDonald, one mile east of Wellington, on the north side of Shore Road, yesterday afternoon, when little Helen MacDonald, twenty-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald MacDonald, Roslin, R.R. 1, Wellington, was run over by a truck operated by Harry MacDonald, an uncle, who was backing the vehicle toward a pile of tomato crates.

In a statement issued last night, Coroner Dr. R. S. Thompson, of Picton, declared the accidental death occurred through no fault of the driver. Dr. Thompson said, after a rigid investigation into the circumstances surrounding the accident.

Truck Backed Slowly

Playing with a group of children in the field the child apparently did not notice the truck which was slowly backing in their direction to load with tomato crates. Nothing but a shrill shriek from the children at a safe distance from the vehicle, MacDonald alone of those in the field, saw the child's fate. Suddenly there came a shriek. Pickers in the field turned towards the truck. Brakes screamed as the driver brought the truck to an unaccountable manner, the little girl had fallen beneath one of the rear wheels of the truck and had passed over her head. Death was practically instantaneous.

The girl was rushed to the office of Dr. R. M. Sarles in Wellington but was beyond all human aid. Coroner Thompson was notified and has investigated the accident. The girl was the youngest member of the MacDonald family.

Says Next War Fought Without Church

Hartford, Conn., Sept. 15—(AP)—Rev. Dr. Richard Roberts of Toronto said today the next war will be fought without the support of the church.

"There will be no recruiting from the pulpit, no prayers for victory in the churches," he told the annual pastor's conference at the Hartford Seminary.

The pastor of the Sherbourne United Church at Toronto, referred to war as "primal murder" and a diseased international relationship.

"The church is suffering yet from the consequences of the last war," he said, "and it will not support another."

SHOT THRU NECK, MAN RECOVERING

Constable Says He Did Not Mean to Hit Man Who Ran

Edmonton, Sept. 15—(CP)—Jame Dandy of Sudbury, Ont., sought by police as the alleged companion of Thomas Terreberry, Port Robinson, Ont., shot through the neck by Constable J. E. Paterson during a chase in North Edmonton, reported police headquarters here last night.

Dandy said he had read in the newspaper that arreberry was shot yesterday and that police wanted him for questioning.

Hospital authorities reported continued improvement in Terreberry's condition. The bullet entered the back of the neck and emerged at the point of the chin. It was stated he had a good chance of recovery. The bullet just missed the vertebrae.

Constable Peterson reported to his superiors that he did not mean to hit Terreberry. He stated two men ran as he accosted them in a lane in the rear of a house and that he became suspicious of their actions. Terreberry was hit by the second of two shots intended as a warning to halt.

NO-INTERFERENCE SAYS JAP ENVOY TO BE ENDURED

Eiji Amau Watches Closely League's Discussions

JAPAN AND RUSSIA

Hiroji Nori, Financier, Sees Danger of Strife With Russia

Geneva, Sept. 15 (AP)—Japan will refuse and ignore even friendly mediation by the League of Nations in the Sino-Japanese conflict, the Japanese Minister to Switzerland disclosed today.

The Japanese envoy, Eiji Amau, told the Associated Press Japan knows no interference in the Far Eastern crisis.

His statement came as the League pondered what, if any, action to take on China's invocation of the nine-power treaty and her demand for a League denunciation of the Japanese military campaign.

"There is no question of Japan accepting a temporary League [illegible] exist in case he is invited to defend herself," the Japanese Envoy declared.

Developments Watched.

Amau said that though Japan is no longer a member of the League he is following developments during the present session.

Officially Amau is in Geneva in his capacity as director of the Japanese Geneva Bureau to handle international conferences.

On Tokyo hints the Japanese government ordered Amau to decry Chinese charges of aggression, but a foreign office spokesman said he had been given no detailed instructions.

Amau, at his own discretion make an unofficial statement to the League, the military attache declared, adding that League action would "aggravate" the Sino-Japanese crisis.)

Oriental Situation.

New York, Sept. 15 (AP)—People are beginning to recognize that trouble between Russia and Japan is possible, if not probable, as the outgrowth of the latter's invasion of China.

Hiroso Mori, Japanese financial expert, has called attention to the possibilities by stating his country intends to go through with the Chinese campaign "even if a third power enters it."

Such words bear weight when coming from Mori, who must be one of the main financial backers for Japanese military adventure. However, almost any Russian or Japanese will tell you that both the two countries are slated to fight someone or other. They have been openly arming against each other for years.

Russia is reported to be giving aid to China, especially, for the independent Chinese Communist armies, against the bid of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek.

COALITION OFFER MADE, SAYS ROBB

Declares at Thessalon Hepburn's Plan Would Have Destroyed Parties

Thessalon, Ont., Sept. 15 (CP)—For the second time in a week Conservative speakers have declared Premier Hepburn had made a coalition government offer to Conservative Leader Rowe.

With Mr. Rowe on the platform, Hon. W. H. Price, former Minister of Health Minister and Conservative candidate for the Provincial House in Sturgeon Falls, made the statement. In Cobourg last week W. H. Ireland, president of the Ontario Conservative Association, mentioned a coalition proposal.

"A little while ago Mr. Hepburn got in a panic and sent a hurried call to Mr. Rowe," Mr. Price said. "And he was willing to give up the premiership.

"He would, by uniting with Rowe, completely destroy the Conservative party and the Liberal party in Ontario. That coalition party being brought about by Hepburn and Rowe uniting with Premier Duplessis of Quebec and defeat Mackenzie King."

Mr. Rowe said today while the Hepburn government boasted of collecting $2,700,000 in taxes last year, it gave farmers $288,000 less in grants than previously.

WARNS NATIONS OF JAPAN

Geneva, Sept. 15 (AP)—Sir Wellington Koo, one of China's most illustrious statesmen, warned the powers that Japanese aggression may menace them some day if they do not support China now.

He made the statement before the League of Nations Assembly in a moving indictment of Japanese "aggression".

Rowe the Man to Direct Province, Arnott Declares

West Hastings Conservatives Enthusiastically Cheer Young Candidate

POLICIES CONTRASTED

Verbal guns of the Conservative artillery laid down their opening barrage in the Provincial election of the political front last night when Major Richard Arnott, Belleville, Conservative candidate for the riding, and Mr. T. Nelson, Toronto, Liberal critician of the administration of the Hepburn government, addressed Conservatives in the Conservative Committee rooms on Front Street. Other speakers who addressed the enthusiastic gathering were Harry Peck, K.C., Colin Hepburn, Picton and Harry Rollins, president of the Conservative Association of Hastings and chairman for the evening.

Interspersing his remarks with much enjoyed vocal solos by James Hunter who was accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Duff.

Thunderous acclaim accompanied the cheers greeted the young candidate for the riding as he rose to speak following his introduction by Chairman Rollins.

Hepburn Attacked

Directing his primary attack on the present Premier, Mayor Arnott stated that after the record of his government he doubted if the public would place further power in the hands of the man Mr. Hepburn, whose very actions were direct violations of that great democratic principle we, as Canadians, have against the rule by party leaders. The main issue in the provincial election campaign against Hepburn," Mayor Arnott said.

Rowe For Premiership

"There is no question in my mind," he continued, "that after Oct. 6th the Hon. Earl Rowe will be in a position of power to direct the destinies of the province for the next five years. Rowe, Canada can trust him to govern it wisely and well. The main issue demands reason for the coming victory is the fact that the people are tired of the rule by dictator Hepburn.

"I appeal to every class and creed to remember his record and ask if they approve of a man like that to govern them again."

Eulogizing the Conservative leader Mayor Arnott stated that "the Conservative party has no press behind them, unfortunately, Mr. Rowe's whole career and his high position in politics during the years he has been in the public service

SAYS PATRONAGE WORKED IN NORTH

People Afraid of Losing Jobs For Political Views, Says Rowe

By CP Staff Writer

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Sept. 15 —(CP)—Victory for the Conservative party at the Oct. 6 Ontario election will be difficult for them to collect money owing the province by a cabinet minister, Hon. Earl Rowe told a Sault Ste. Marie audience here tonight.

He designated Controller George S. Dunbar of Ottawa as the party's candidate in Ontario South.

Conservative leader made the choice in spite of differences between Conservative ranks in the riding where Arthur Roebuck, minister in the last legislature, obtained injunctions against holding a convention.

Breaks With Attitude

He expressed appreciation of the attitude Controller Dunbar and Lieutenant-Colonel George S. Sloan and Osmond D. Rowe, prominent citizens for the nomination, in withdrawing in favor of their leader's choice.

Rowe requested the nomination of Dunbar to run as our official candidate, the government of $90,000,000 or as he has accepted," said Mr. Rowe.

Mr. Rowe declared the province is at sit in Mr. Hepburn's government and owes the government $50,000 and get this money back. "When a small operator has to pay his dues collectively he asked Sir Sault Ste. Marie audience. "Why should a Chorus Girl not pay union dues and owe the province $50,000 while the Premier goes up and down pockets at the province?" he queried.

He accused the Premier of having plans to renew Hydro-electric power contracts, and had already renewed some more than half the ones cancelled in 1935. The Premier was challenged to deny the contracts were required and Mr. Rowe charged the government

CONGO-RED USED TO FIGHT CANCER

Radiologists Told of New Weapon in Fight Against Disease

By STEPHEN J. McDONOUGH

Chicago, Sept. 15 (AP)—A common dye, Congo Red, was proposed today as the new weapon in medical science in the fight against cancer.

Two New York City physicians, Dr. Isidore Arons and Dr. Boris Sokoloff told the International Congress of Radiology that a solution of the dye materially slows down the growth of some types of cancer, and, in some cases it caused cancer growths to be absorbed in experimental animals and enabled the natural disease-fighting mechanisms to control them.

Previously the dye was found useful in controlling hemorrhage due to tuberculosis, pleurisy, cancer and

FINANCIAL POLICY SAVING MONEY

So Says Hepburn Referring to Cut in Motor Licences

By CP Staff Writer

Lindsay, Ont., Sept. 15—(CP)—Ontario motorists' automobile licenses will be available to motorists Sept. 21, Premier Hepburn told a Conservative meeting here last night, at the same time charging Conservatives had been responsible for the general $5 reduction he promised recently.

"Our Tory friends have been saying this was only an election dodge, but I am not really going to do it," he said. "I'm going to take them by surprise because on the 21st of this month the new plates will be available at the old rates. This is going to mean a saving to the people who drive automobiles of $2,700,000 a year."

Inflation Predicted By Roger Babson

Boston, Sept. 15—In speaking before the Boston Chamber of Commerce today Roger Babson said:

"The chances are 60 to 40 that we are headed for a 50-cent dollar. Inflation or repudiation may be resorted to and the result will be much the same.

"General business is bound to be better this fall than last fall. Farmers, wage earners and stockholders all have more money to spend. I am forecasting no boom, but I do foresee business improvement.

"When the Federal Reserve Board and other Administration agencies get business on track, as they did this spring, he said, "they really are forcing the current period of prosperity.

"We are in a gradually declining bond market. People who are now buying certain low-rate issues are going to regret it. Rails will get strengthen. The price of money generally has gone up and down. The laws of action and reaction are far more reliable than the laws of Congress.

"Don't be a bear. It the country enters a period of real inflation, the bull market has just begun," he said. Although the present technical conditions are not favorable for a bull market, I am not saying it is too short today."

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Earth's temperature! It is believed that the earth's interior is very hot, but consideration is so slow that it is not perceived at the surface except as it becomes manifest in geysers and volcanoes. But the sun shining on the earth heats the top layer considerably, which heat is lost at night by radiation. The daily change of temperature penetrates only about three feet, and the seasonal change more than 100 feet. Even the hottest days are in late July or August, a considerable time after the direct rays of June 22. There is also a lag between the hottest days, the summer heat reaching there about six months late.

PARALYSIS YIELDS IN MANY PLACES

But More Iron Lungs Required to Help Victims

Ontario Department of Health yesterday issued an appeal that iron lungs be built to help meet conditions at the various hospitals in the province. The order for the iron lungs made by Toronto firms was placed at the Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto where six of the machines are in use.

Demand For Men Drops

The demand for labourers had only one iron lung idle. It was reported at the Department from London. Six patients were in the devices at the Toronto General Hospital where it was said a demand for more machines would appear any moment.

The paralysis picture throughout Canada showed Ontario with only 47 deaths. Toronto's toll was 26 and London's seven. Manitoba's death toll stood at 25; Saskatchewan three and Alberta five.

The Manitoba fatal cases totalled seven, three in Nova Scotia, and four in New Brunswick. More than 1,000 persons were afflicted since the epidemic started. Ontario's case list totalling 1,638 names with 500 in Toronto district and 145 in London. Quebec had 1,000 cases.

Twenty one new cases appeared in Toronto yesterday with Windsor and Brockville reported three; Kitchener and Sudbury two, and one in Manitoba totalled eight. Two new cases in New Brunswick raised the total to 19.

St. Catharines, Sarnia, Woodstock and Stratford reported one case yesterday as these points in Ontario brought to a thirteen the number of cases.

HEAVY RAIN MAY CAUSE TOMATO ROT

Recent heavy rains may have a tendency to cause a black rot in heavy-laden tomato fields of the district, prominent growers stated this morning. Many fields in Prince Edward and Hastings Counties loaded with ripe fruit because of the inability of canning factories to handle the crop, will, they say, be the first to suffer, it was stated. On the other hand, factories will be able to "catch up" with canning operations if the heavy influx of rain has flooded the plants during the past week.

SHANGHAI PRESS CORRESPONDENT VISITS BELLEVILLE

M. Chesbin is Engaged in Economic Study of Trade

CHINESE CONFIDENT

For the purpose of completing an economic survey of Canada, and also to get first-hand information of relations between his native China and this country, M. Chesbin, correspondent of the Shanghai China Press, the largest English daily publication in China, is at present in Belleville, where he will study the agricultural, industrial, educational and political conditions of the Bay of Quinte area.

Mr. Chesbin completed his second trip across Canada for the purpose of studying economic conditions and also to create a better understanding of trade relations between China and Canada. At present China imports from Canada wheat, automobiles, rubber, flour and minerals, while the chief export of our country to Canada is raw silk. Mr. Chesbin formed the Ontario Investigator today and added he was very pleased. He says would be a much larger field for Canadian commodities in China in the future.

Mr. Chesbin completes a twelve-day tour of inspection in which he makes his economic survey, in order to contact every possible line of industry, commerce and agriculture.

Confident Over Struggle

Mr. Chesbin is convenant and keenly interested in the struggle Japanese-Chinese conflict.

"Although I am Chinese, and have pledged their support to the Central Government, I am not prejudiced. There was one dissenter — Hungary. The delegate of that country later said he could not sit on the committee "because six other years he passed without Hungary being accorded equality at arms."

"I find the government who are now residing in Canada and carrying a livelihood, are keenly interested in their native land and eager for authentic information for the benefit of conflict. No invader ever conquered China, because that country is so immense its population is absorbed any who invaded its shores or its people and invasion in the past, but today our man power can exhaust the modern methods of warfare, as there is its strength in population, added Mr. Chesbin, who will visit local industrial plants during his stay and study of economic conditions in Belleville.

1938 Markers On Sale Sept. 21 At Reduced Cost

Ontario's 1938 motor markers—for both passenger cars and commercial vehicles—will be on sale on Tuesday, Sept. 21, it was announced this morning by Mr. S. E. Vermilyea, local issuer. The announcement made by Premier Hepburn at a meeting in Lindsay last night, confirms the statements of Provincial Highways Inspectors, who were in the city a short time ago. Mr. Vermilyea said, According to the new schedule a straight reduction of 50 per cent all passenger cars will go into effect.

Camp trailers licenses will be $1.00 as will be those of motorcycles, a fifty percent reduction on transfers by the way, while commercial vehicle licences will be reduced twenty-five per cent.

The new plates will be available on Sept. 21st., instead of October 1st. as was formerly reported, Mr. Vermilyea stated.

ROWE THE MAN

is because he has been placed there by people who are his neighbors. If they can trust him and put their confidence then surely being can too."

School Tax

Reviewing the issues and the administration of the present government, the speaker challenged Premier Hepburn to "find but a few individual supporters whom he fooled and the Separate School supporters he has betrayed, who will sign a form will be regarding this issue this time. No Hon. Hastings is threatened to resign if the bill was not passed. The bill came after the by-election in the district, but Hepburn did not resign. Indeed the Globe said he suggested it would be a triumph of statesmanship if the Act were repealed and the next day it was, I ask him in all fairness, where is the school supporters what his present attitude is regarding this question."

Touching on the present position of mentally ill patients in Ontario, the speaker declared that Mr. Hepburn cut the expenses in operating these institutions from one million dollars to less than $100,000. Now mental institutions are overcrowded by 5000 patients. The saving all helped to balance the budget. Meanwhile, Rowe brought little sunshine to the lives of these people," Mr. Arnott said.

Loans to Farmers

"The first thing Hepburn did was to put through the present system of farmers," Mayor Arnott stated referring to agricultural loans. He was himself the friend of the man on the back concession. The Hon. Mr. Rowe had established the Farm Loan Board and came to the rescue of the farmer. The system in this respect is entirely different from the present because Mr. King sees the need of it. The abolition of this loan was a contributing cause of what Mr. Hepburn did when assistance was needed the most."

"I for one will not interfere with the laboring-man and I will defend his right to join whatever organization he wishes as long as it is within the law of the land," the speaker asserted. "The laboring man, under the present democratic law and order and that organizations must abide by the law. The Liberal party has never had trouble with the laboring man and I have faith enough in him to know that we never will. The present government is not and tells the laboring class what they unless they must join then what is the use of them."

Hydro Control Expectations

Dealing with the Hydro question, Mayor Arnott stated that Hepburn had no business negotiating Hydro contracts and starting Ontario on the trail that Alberta is on and Saskatchewan is now approaching the government may have to borrow money to meet new contracted power. Roebuck stated that we have plenty of power and there is no possibility of a shortage. Furthermore what was the need of the Commission entering contracts we have capable engineers who can solve these things—if they are left alone."

The best thing Mr. Rowe has said yet is, 'Divorce the Hydro from politics!' Political interference with this important utility is drifting away the gold mine which rightfully belongs to the people and are not enjoying the benefits of the great gifts Nature has given to Hepburn policy. It was there before he came into power, and going ahead."

In 1934," concluded the candidate, "the public entered into agreements because of a desperate hope that prosperity would return sooner. Don't be fooled by the landslide of 1934. It was only a matter of 70,000 votes, and after all was said that such a terrific landslide? I firmly believe a great majority of West Hastings is thinking along the same lines as the people in other parts of the province and for that reason I expect there will be a Conservative representative in Toronto after Oct. 6th."

Dissolving Charged

Charging that the Hon. Dr. Faulkner must accept the responsibility for the discharge of six medical officers of health and the lack of control exercised over them through his economic policy, Mr. R. T. Wilson, Toronto barrister and guest speaker for the evening, declared that Ontario is "sick" under the present administration. "The condition of mental hospitals of this province is deplorable," said the speaker this verdict was brought in by grand juries of all over the province. "Why did Dr. Faulkner allow Hon. Mr. Rowe to do what Mr. Hepburn awoke to these conditions he used two old goals to house the surplus patients, and with election coming on he is building new mental hospitals at St. Thomas of 1000 beds at a cost of four millions. They find they need one near Brampton, another at Port William, all near the homes of cabinet ministers."

Ask Dr. Faulkner If he is doing the best thing with his economic efforts with regard to the hospitals of Ontario," Mitch, and Mitch shall' need assistance as they are spending six millions for hospitals in a public move to get votes."

Child Hygiene Grant

The Conservative Party granted $45,000 to schools for health and child hygiene. In 1935, Dr. Faulkner stated it was a relief bill as this grant is abolished. His administration has reduced the grants to incurable patients of $1,500; to hospitals for consumptives of $100,000 a year. The Conservative Government distributed insulin at a cost of $100,000. Hepburn charged back 25% of this to the municipalities."

Reviewing the 25 "stirring of Hepburn's broken promises" the speaker charged the Premier with not paying $1.5 pennies but poor at performance."

Relief

He said he would furnish a minimum wage for men, but has no idea what it is. Relief foods stock he said he would provide employment for every man on relief. He says this problem which is typical of the man; I see the Hon. Mr. Hepburn Unemployment Insurance, but this is just another case where he will refuse to act to put too much stock in it."

Beverage Room System Attacked

Charging that the present policy of Liquor Control is for the purpose of obtaining revenue "regardless of where liquor is sold", the speaker asserted the present system is highly deplorable. Fifteen hundred and two licenses have been issued for the sale of ten millions instead of the five hundred licenses under entry to power. Hepburn realizes this condition and has had a dead-line imposed. He said he will appoint an independent commission to investigate the question of politics. Mr. Rowe will appoint a commission to investigate and see that these regulated are shield by standard hotels and respectable. He will see to these, and only these, will be allowed to operate.

Repeal of Assessment Amendment

Touching on the Assessment Repeal Act, the speaker declared that Mr. Hepburn felt that the Separate School Supporters should have a right, did he not let it remain on the statute books and the electors of the province pass judgment? What arrangements has he made with Mr. Howard? He should see that the minority rights are safeguarded. These rights are not as afforded them under the B.N.A. Act."

On the Hydro

"Why did the Premier wipe out the Hydro Commission, appoint his own commission, and turn it into a Government department?" asked Mr. Wilson. "Why did he dig into the reserves of the old Hydro, take out fifty-two millions of dollars, transfer it to the Treasury Department and claim he had reduced the cost of government by this amount? Because he did way, Conservative Hydro Commission had representation on the Commission and was able to keep the opposition he might encounter from the Premier. He showed dictatorship in this respect."

Demands of Power

"After the Premier had found that power demands had increased from 1,000,000 H.P. capacity to purchase 456,000 H.P. The Hepburn policy regarding the new contracts will cost the public millions of dollars. When the Premier announced the Ajax and Aldilla project, they were told it would cost $2 thousand per horse, foresight has shown to much better advantage than has the Hepburn contracts."

The speaker charged the Government with discrimination against Canadian business in favor of American interests in regard to the sale of power. "True," he stated, "the employment created by this new development will be but for a period of time but had Canadian interests been given the secret grants given to outside interests, the jobs were more lasting and there were any tenders called for. Hon. Mr. Rowe," he suggested, "should appoint a commission to investigate these things."

On Question

Referring to the C.I.O. question, the speaker charged that the Premier stirred up the public about the "menace" of the C.I.O. when nothing is certain happenings in another country.

"That's politics, we are not going to have these things in Ontario," Mr. Wilson declared. "Had the Hon. Earl Rowe negotiated with these people at Oshawa, he could have prevented the strike. If they were going to operate in Ontario they must abide by our laws and the strike would have ended a week before it did. The Conservative leader believes in the freedom of Association, collective bargaining and the right of a man to join whatever organization he relates to join. The Government should not interfere or take sides in any dispute as long as law and order is maintained."

"We are not going to stand for speaker concluded. "Hepburn's dictatorship has been expressed in his attitude toward the courts and his record on the Liquor Control Board. He has tried to be described as a brilliant, young leader, but as a matter of fact he is inconsistent, hysterical and provocative in his ways."

Election Referred To

"Remember the East Hastings election of 1934 and the part it played in the defeat of what is going to happen in October 6th. Don't be misled by the aggressive backing of the Globe and Mail. Millions are behind Mr. Hepburn. There will be a landslide in Ontario that will put Ontario where it does not want as a Premier, a republican as Alberta, a man good on promises but poor in performance and a dictator."

Predicting an overwhelming victory in the forthcoming election, Mr. Charles A. Payne, K.C., said there was no question about winning the election, but a question of how big a majority. "The picture is altogether different this election," he stated, "and the handwriting is on the wall." The speaker continued "disgust with a premier who is nothing more or less than a wisecracker, and a

"SEEING EYE" COMES TO BELLEVILLE

Miss Hazel Hurst and Her "Seeing Eye" Guests of Rotary

The Seeing Eye", one of the most interesting organizations in the world, situated at Morristown, New Jersey, has won the interest and admiration of many people through magazine and newspaper articles describing the work done there, which in brief is the training of dogs to act as guides for blind persons. The "Seeing Eye" was brought very close to Belleville citizens fortunately enough, to have Miss Hazel Hurst, of Gedensby, who though blind birth is able to go anywhere and become a useful citizen through the Seeing Eye", which in her case is "Babe", a German shepherd dog trained at the "Seeing Eye" headquarters in Morristown, N.J. Miss Hurst came here as the invitation of the Bellville Rotary Club, and was the guest of the club at luncheon in the Hotel Quinte where she gave an address and demonstration of the cleverness of her dog guide. Miss Hurst also visited the Collegiate Institute and addressed the pupils Monday.

Introduced to the Rotary Club by Howard Clarke, Miss Hurst gave a graphic account of her training period at the "Seeing Eye" in New York, methods of training for both trainers, students and dogs. She expressed deep gratitude to the Rotary organization for assistance, and spoke highly of the work of Rotary in making communities and the world generally a better place to live in. She has addressed seventy-five Rotary Clubs including three in Canada, and has travelled 36,000 miles, escorted by "Babe" her trained dog guide, her "Seeing Eye". She said that in Paris and Nice, France, where traffic laws are not as strict as here, "Babe" guided her through the traffic without a mistake. She attended Rotary International Convention in Nice, France, and was one of the outstanding features of that convention. Her mother was born in Brockville and her father was also born in Canada.

Blind people do not ask for pity, said Miss Hurst, and do not want it, they appreciate sympathetic understanding, leading to self support, happiness and freedom.

Friendly Hello and Handshake

Blind people do not relish being classed as liabilities, as subjects fit only for segregation and pity, said Miss Hurst. On the contrary they wish to be considered, taught and assisted to become valuable citizens, forgetting the interfering complex which might otherwise be their portion. A friendly "hello" a hearty handshake, and a disposition to regard the blind as people of some importance is appreciated. Everybody has some handicap, said Miss Hurst, and the world not change with other people because they might have some handicap which she wouldn't like to have preferred to remain as she was.

Blind Typists Excel

Regarding proposed pensions for the blind, Miss Hurst said that to offer a pension to a young person like her, and another would not make her own way in the world, and able to do just that, would be wrong. God does not take anything away from a person without giving something in return, in fact he pays back three-fold—if one faculty is stunted others are made doubly efficient. The world does not owe us a living but we blind folks owe it to ourselves to go out and make that living, not as objects of charity on a street corner or making brooms, but in worthwhile occupations. There are many blind people in professions and in some occupations they excel, said Miss Hurst, notably as typists for they concentrate upon their work better and lose less time primping.

Miss Babe, the "Seeing Eye"

Miss Hurst devoted part of her address to her "Seeing Eye", Babe, a very intelligent German shepherd dog, two years old, who is her sight, her guide and her protector, her freedom.

Three months is sufficient to train an intelligent dog at the "Seeing Eye", and pedigree is not preferred, intelligence only counts. Incidentally it takes three years to train a human "Seeing Eye" trainer—three months for the dog, three years for the trainer. The "Seeing Eye" is supported by philanthropic people, and the dogs are all donated. It cost one thousand dollars to train a dog for the "Seeing Eye" and the person who gets the dog pays $150 for the dog as the dogs are not sold and can be recalled any time in case of ill-treatment.

Miss Hurst was enrolled in the school and trained first with a male teacher acting as a guide, harness and all. Then a dog is selected which will suit, under the student's temperament, and both then trained together. "Babe" has been with Miss Hurst constantly for a year, and directs her steps, obeying commands of "Right", "Left", "Forward". When she goes out shopping or elsewhere she gets directions and communicates them to the dog when required. Dogs are color blind but "Babe" senses the traffic movements and is conscious of crowds direct before pedestrians. If they come to a step, up or down, or the curb, "Babe" halts and signals that a change in tempo is desirable, saving her from sudden shocks and falls.

"Seeing Eye" For Canada

In the United States a law has been passed which gives "Seeing Eye" dogs the right to travel on all public carriers. Canada has not come to that yet, although Miss Hurst was given a special car for herself and "Babe" from Brockville to Ottawa recently. There are 250 "Seeing Eye" dogs in the United States and two in Canada. Miss Hurst is anxious that a "Seeing Eye" training school be established in Canada, and expects to work with the famous local Canadian soldier, Capt. Baker, to that end. The parent organization in New Jersey has promised to supply a plant for Canada and supervise it for one year. "Seeing Eye" trainers must have spent at least four years in college and understand human beings and dogs.

Rotary appreciation for Miss Hurst's interesting address was voiced by Chas. J. Simons and President Fred Douglas.

Guests present included Charles Guntier, of Wellesley, Ont. Dr. Ted Kennedy and R. H. Martin, Belleville. Jamieson Bone led the singing and Mrs. John Deacon presided very acceptably at the piano.

An invitation from Ottawa Rotary Club for an inter-city meeting there September 27 was accepted and arrangements will be made to send a large delegation of members on that occasion.

FINANCIAL POLICY

Financial Heroes Resisted

That saving was possible, Mr. Hepburn said, because he had resisted the "pressure" of Toronto financial houses when floating new provincial issues.

The last thing he had had to do after taking office in 1934 was to fight the Toronto financial interests, the Premier said. The Henry government had obtained a large loan on 5½ per cent bonds sold below par. Bond dealers made $14,000,000 profit on the deal—for which the government was advised by three experts it considered $60,000 for their advice, he claimed.

Says $6,500,000 Saved

Faced with the necessity of obtaining additional funds at par, the Hepburn Government floated a loan at less than three per cent after a terrific battle," he said, which meant a saving of $2,500,000 a year in interest charges on the one loan.

Success of the government's pulpwood policy was indicated by the steady increase in newsprint production and number of men employed in the industry, Mr. Hepburn continued.

Newsprint Production

Where Ontario had once, in 1933, produced as much newsprint as Quebec, in 1934 it was producing only about half the Quebec total, he said. He claimed this was due to the Conservatives giving away limits away to their friends who did not develop them but held them for speculation, while Quebec insisted on development.

Through change in policy, 30,000 men were now at work in Northern Ontario bush compared to 15,000 when the government took office. Next year with 17 new mills under construction, 50,000 men would be at work there. Revenue from lands and forests was now about $7,000,000 a year and would soon be $10,000,000, compared to a loss under Conservative administration.

Mr. Stephen contended that in permitting export of pulpwood, the government was creating work for men cutting wood which would otherwise be wasted, since pulpwood like other crops, had to be cut when mature or it went to waste.

Kidney Acids Rob Your Rest

Many people never seem to get a good night's rest. They're up two—three times and most often. Often they blame it on "nerves" when it may be their kidneys. Healthy kidneys filter poisons from the blood. If they are faulty and fail, poisons stay in the system and sleep is ruined, backaches often follow. If you don't sleep well, try Dodd's Kidney Pills—for half a century the favorite remedy of millions.

SOLUTION IN HOME

The solution of religious and world problems lies in proper training in the home, the Right Rev. Irving Peake Johnson, Bishop of Colorado, said at St. Bartholomew's Church, Protestant Episcopal, New York.

"In order to gain true perspective of the larger realm, we must learn our lessons in the grade schools of life," he declared. "If the battle of Waterloo was won on the cricket fields of England, then the battles between privilege and underprivilege will be won in the intimacies of the home.

"A nation of unhappy homes is one of shattered ideals of justice. The trouble with an unhappy nation is that the people have to live with themselves and can't do it. That is why they travel at seventy-five miles an hour down our highways, why they go to the movies so much, why they are onlookers instead of participants in our sports. They are trying to get away from themselves."

Religion, Bishop Johnson said, should be in the intimacies of life—the relation between man and wife, parent and child, employer and employe, and in friendships.

"You can ruin a home by being selfish without breaking the Ten Commandments," he continued. "You can turn your home into a hotbed for scandal by discussing and magnifying other people's faults before your children. Or you can, by noble sentiments in private practice, show the true caliber of your religion."

Man in this restless age needs to learn anew the value of prayer, the Rev. Charles G. Fuller, pastor of the Feathered Lne Presbyterian Church, New York, said in his sermon. One must learn not only the joy of prayer for himself but the joy and wisdom that come from praying for others, he said.

"Prayer lengthens our vision the way a telescope does," he added. "The naked eye can see stars in the heavens, but not nearly so many as through a telescope. Human judgment, with it stendancy to see only the bad and to take a sly delight in the misfortunes of others; with its tendency to hate and envy, sees life through a cloud.

Evil exists not in man's weakness but in hiding weakness, the Rev. Dr. Reinhold Niebuhr of Union Theological Seminary said at Riverside Church.

"The real problem of Christianity," he said, "is that man is tempted to deny his mortality, his relation to nature, to hide his weakness and to appear stronger than he seems.

"Evil is not that man is insecure but that he tries to make himself secure by sheer power at the expense of his fellowmen. Behind all these excessive ambitions for power lies a deep insecurity. Evil is not that the body is mortal but that man devotes himself to it as if it were.

"God created us as animals, but as something more than animals. You cannot choose between the body and the mind, because they are one. You cannot choose between eternity and time, because you are in both."

Dr. Niebuhr said at another point that man had a curious freedom over the limitless of nature, no matter how much he was driven by them.

"Man has all that nature has and more," he went on. "Man begins where nature ends.

"All modern Nazis and Fascists are romantics who want to get back to nature. France thought that the only way she could live would be by being stronger than Germany. The only way that Germany can live is by defying the world.

"We cannot take away the influence of God. We cannot live as the animal does."

The code of society is stronger with some persons than that of Sinai; and many a man who would not scruple to thrust his fingers in his neighbor's pocket, would forego peas rather than use his knife as a shovel.—J. R. Lowell.

If you are for a merry jaunt I will try for once who can foot it farthest.—Dryden.

The labor and sweat of our brows is so far from being a curse, that without it our very bread would not be so great a blessing. If it were not for labor, men could neither eat so much, nor relish so pleasantly nor sleep so soundly, nor be so healthful, so useful, so strong, so patient, so noble, nor so untempted.—Jeremy Taylor.

"CALF WITH A COUGH" "HORSE WITH THE BLIND STAGGERS", "BLIND THOROUGHBRED BULL AT Ontario Agricultural College", former election war cries in this province, have passed away and long since been forgotten by all except those who were in political harness in the dying days of the Ross government in Ontario, as well as the working newspapermen of the period. "The Old War Horse in the Saddle" as one newspaper described the Premier, George Washington Ross, caused plenty of laughs, and though pressed to do so many times the newspaperman who wrote that headline has never explained how he got that old war horse into the saddle, horses, war or otherwise, being disinclined at all times to occupy the saddle. "The Calf With a Cough" got into politics as "Exhibit A", if we remember right in an attack upon the administration of the Ontario Agricultural College. "The Blind Bull" or was it a stallion? was another attack on the O. A. C. it being charged that the powers that be there bought an animal that was blind. "The Horse With the Blind Staggers" emerged from a political meeting at Lyn near Brockville, where a political meeting was in progress in the interest of the Liberals. A speaker was heatedly defending the government of the day and attacking those dirty Tories with all the vehemence that politics in those days demanded when a horse which had been standing quietly along side a barn (The meeting was in the open air) suddenly he-hawed in derision, in other words treated the speaker to the horse laugh, whatever that is, and collapsed weakly against the barn, after a series of convulsions which gave great amusement to the crowd—according to the opposition press. However, in our opinion getting "The Old War Horse in the saddle" was the hardest political feat of all, and only one which lived the longest to plague its author.

2,000 Year Old Indian Sites Are Found at Oneida Lake

Successive Waves of Culture Shown in Different Level

ACTUAL HOMES FOUND

Rochester, N.Y., Sept. 15—(AP)—Clues to unravel the mystery of a culture sequence in New York State dating back 2,000 years ago were found with the unearthing of two huge Indian village sites on the shores of Oneida Lake, the Rochester museum announced last night.

For years archaeologists suspected the existence of the missing culture connection, and even had picked up traces of the period in Indian relics, but discovery of the actual home of these ancient Indians completes the picture.

William A. Ritchie, head of the excavating party which discovered the village sites, said that since July his men had been unearthing implements, utensils and skeletons which proved that the lake shores near Riverside were the seat of a civilization 1,000 years old before Columbus discovered North America.

"We know that successive groups of aborigines came to this section, bringing different levels of culture," Ritchie said. "During the 2,000 year period, one tribe of newcomers would supplant the former, sometimes intermarrying so that the two cultures overlapped."

ment "sought frantically to avoid a power shortage."

Services Reduced

The Liberal administration "ruthlessly" reduced government services "to set up a $6,000,000 election grid pool to release its millionaire friends on Bay Street," Mr. Rowe said. "Was the blind man concerned with the $6,000,000 surplus when his government reduced the grant to the National Institute for the Blind?"

The education grant was reduced $1,250,000; health service grants by $600,000 and hospital grants cut $1,000,000, he continued. In the face of these cuts the government obtained $32,000,000 more in taxes last year so the surplus should have been at least $10,000,000.

Iron Ore Bounty Not New

Mr. Hepburn's iron ore bounty was not a new policy, for in 1923 James Lyons of Sault Ste. Marie introduced former Premier Howard G. Ferguson to advance such a bounty. Mr. Rowe said his government would pay the bounty to help keep the Helen Mine, near Sault Ste. Marie, in operation, and also re-establish other bounties.

Rome and Webster, a United States engineering firm, which Mr. Rowe said was now on the government payroll, would be "first" and competent Canadian engineers hired to run Hydro.

The United States engineering firm, he said, was "different entirely tied up with the private power interest of the United States.

Mr. Lyons, a former Minister of Lands and Forests, who introduced Mr. Rowe, charged the government was responsible through patronage activities for the reign of terror" in the north. People were afraid of losing their jobs because they were not Liberals, he added.

Besides an afternoon meeting at Blind River, Mr. Rowe will speak at Espanola and Thessalon before journeying to Sudbury for a night address.

Symbolism of Masonry' Subject of Address of Rt. Wor. Bro. Adams

Making his initial visit since having been elected to the position of District Deputy Grand Master, for the Prince Edward District No. 12 of A.F. and A.M. in Ontario, Rt. Wor. Bro. Robert Adams, of this city, officially visited the Bancroft Lodge No. 423 A.F. and A.M., O.R.C., on Monday night when he spoke on the subject of "the symbolism of Masonry as applied to our present day life".

Rt. Wor. Bro. Adams was accompanied by W. Bro. R. E. Houston, District Secretary, and Bros. F. W. Geen and J. G. Shaw, all of Belleville. Bro. Rev. James Semple, recently appointed Chaplain for the Prince Edward District, A.F., and A.M., was unable to accompany the party owing to previous engagements however, Rt. Wor. Bro. Adams assured his audience he intended to visit all lodges under his jurisdiction within the current Masonic year.

It is also understood that a large delegation of local Royal Arch Masons will attend Divine service at Stirling on Sunday next, where the District Divine Service for the Royal Arch Masons will be held for the year 1937.

Women's Canadian Club Arrange for Many Fine Speakers

The executive committee of the Women's Canadian Club held its first meeting since the long vacation at the residence of the President, Mrs. G. O. Wright, Christ Church Rectory, Everett Street, Tuesday evening. It was announced that a very interesting programme has been arranged for the coming season and the members of the club may look forward to numerous enjoyable and profitable evenings during the fall and winter. The club enjoyed an excellent membership last year and it is anticipated that the membership will be much increased this year.

The first lecture will be given by Mr. Thomas Wayling, Press Gallery reporter at Ottawa, and a journalist of note. Mr. Wayling spent considerable time in England, Germany and France this year. He was a Canadian delegate to the gathering of ex-service men of the Great War in Germany; he covered the Paris Exposition this year and was present at the Coronation of Their Majesties, King George and Queen Elizabeth. He heard former Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin deliver his last speech in the House of Commons, and accompanied Prime Minister Mackenzie King when he visited Aberdeen and Dundee. Mr. Wayling covered also the Royal Air Force Pageant at Hendon, England, and flew from London to Brussels.

Speakers during the coming season will also include Mr. John H. Davidson of Toronto, who will speak on "Issues in the Air"; Mr. Edward Shackleton of London, England, son of the noted explorer, the late Sir Ernest Shackleton; Mrs. Cornelia Van Geuns of Holland, "Folk Songs and Legends"; Mrs. Madge Macbeth of Ottawa, "South America"; and Mr. Charles Eccles of Toronto, "Canada Calling Europe". These are only a few of the interesting speakers who have been secured for the Club's fall and winter sessions.

Cannifton Church Holds Special Services

Is Re-opened After Having Been Closed For Decorating and Installing New Fixtures.

Beautiful weather greeted the special reopening services of the Cannifton United Church Sunday, Sept. 12. The services both morning and evening were attended by very large congregations. Many of these came from the surrounding district to hear once again the Rev. R. E. Kemp, whose kindly and effective ministry on this and neighbouring circuits in past years lingers as bright spots in their memory. Those who were fortunate enough to be present were well repaid for their effort in coming by hearing two stirring Gospel messages.

The special music by the choir including the solos of morning and evening by Mr. Cyril Magor and Mrs. Claude Parsons of Belleville were most appropriate, and made an impressive contribution to the helpfulness of the services. The walls of the interior of the church presented a most pleasing appearance, the renovation has certainly transformed its weather-marked ceiling and walls and the installation of the electric fixtures so kindly donated by the Holloway Street United Church adds greatly, both to the appearance and lighting effect in the church giving an auditorium a renewed worshipful atmosphere.

The floral decorations of the altar and pulpit were beautiful; much credit is due to the committee, Mrs. Mills, Mrs. Collett, and Mrs. Roy Pound, who supervised and arranged the flowers and plants contributed for the occasion by members of the congregation.

The special occasion can be regarded as a real success and the congregation can look forward with confidence to fully meeting all its obligations, because the "Alert" Sunday School class and the "Women's Association" have assumed important financial responsibility to co-operate with; and supplement the effort of the Trustee Board at this particular time.

Miss Hurst Demonstrates How Her Dog 'Gives' Sight to Blind

FEARS NAZI AGENTS

Miss Hazel Hurst was a welcome visitor at the Belleville Collegiate yesterday, where she gave a practical demonstration of the ability of her "Seeing Eye", German Shepherd dog, "Blake" and spoke to the students and faculty on the work of service clubs in the matter of assisting those in need.

When you meet a person who is so unfortunate as to have lost his or her sight one does not crave sympathy, but rather understanding. If the general public would try to understand the blind to a greater degree, then this would be a better world for us all," Miss Hurst declared.

Miss Hurst was introduced to Principal P. C. MacLaurin by President Fred Douglas of the Belleville Rotary Club. She demonstrated to the entire school the possibilities and knowledge of her "seeing eye" canine, as she referred to the dog, which acts as her sight and guides her with ease and accuracy under the most difficult circumstances.

Because he feared Nazi agents would track him down, Dr. Heinrich Brauning (shown), chancellor of Germany from 1930 to 1932, requested that unauthorized persons be prevented from attending a lecture he delivered before the Canadian Institute of International Affairs at Toronto. Dr. Bruening escaped from Germany a few days before the great "purge" of 1934. So private was the lecture that newspapermen were not allowed to attend for fear undue publicity would direct the attention of German agents to him.

Present Photograph Of Late Jas. F. Hill To Conservative Assoc.

Formal acceptance of a beautiful photograph of the late James Hill, former Conservative member for the riding of East Hastings and Party Whip at Queen's Park, presented to members of the Belleville Conservative Association at the public meeting held in the interests of His Worship Mayor Richard Arnott, present candidate to contest the riding, in the Conservative club rooms last night, was made by President Harry Rollins on behalf of the members of the association.

Following the expression of appreciation of the association for the splendid memorial gift to Mrs. Hill, the gathering rose to its feet and observed a reverent silence for one minute in respect to the memory of the departed member.

Tribute Paid to Late William Moore

At the meeting of the Bible Society held on Monday evening tribute was paid to the late William Moore and of his interest and work in the Society. Last year he was presented with a life membership.

ALBERT COLLEGE REOPENS TODAY, REGISTRATION HIGH

Over One Hundred Students Registered at School

STAFF CHANGES

Albert College opened this morning for the fall term with the largest attendance in years, over one hundred students registered. The boys' accomodation is now taxed to the full for the first time in five years or so and the girls' residence (which was formerly the Robinson home) on Highland Avenue can accommodate a few more. There are sixteen girl students in the new residence, now used for the first time.

Students come from many parts of the world. While the most of them are from Ontario there have come students from Vancouver, Saskatchewan, Quebec, Nova Scotian, British West Indies, one from Trinidad and two, a brother and sister from Chile, who have come for three year term before they return to their home.

Opening Service

At the opening chapel service this morning at eight thirty-five Rev. Dr. Bert Howard presided, assisted by members of the faculty, and a hearty welcome was extended to the new and former students. A special service to mark the opening of the college will take place on Friday evening, Dr. Howard presiding.

This morning owing to the epidemic of infantile paralysis which has been prominent in many parts of Ontario though no case has developed in Belleville, Dr. C. S. Orchard, M.O.H., ordered that a nasal spray treatment with zinc sulphate solution to every student and member of the staff at the start as a precautionary measure, as students have come from many parts of the Dominion and elsewhere.

Changes in the staff include newcomers: Franklin Styles, A.T.C.M., English and music; A. R. Miller, B.A., specialist in mathematics and physics; E. R. JIM DIDN'T KNOW ... WHAT WAS HOLDING HIM BACK

Be Fit . . . Be Vital

Avoid Dull, Logy Feeling

If you feel logy and tired at times—unable to cope with things—it may be due to sluggish intestines—the result of too little bulk in your diet. And Post's Bran Flakes may be just what you need to correct it. They help to supply this needed bulk. You'll find them different from any other cereal you ever tasted—full of wholesome goodness and with a delicious nut-like flavour you'll really enjoy. Eat Post's Bran Flakes every day.

WHY MANY PEOPLE CANNOT ATTAIN SUCCESS

by Ronald Spencer

Success is within the capabilities of most people, yet many cannot attain it. Usually they lack the vitality—the self-confidence without which real achievement is almost impossible.

Quite often such people are not in the least aware of the conditions that hold them back. They only know they feel listless—unable to cope with things. This may be, and very often is, due to a sluggish system—the penalty of a sedentary occupation or the stress of modern life. The food wastes do not move readily along the intestinal tract. Elimination is delayed or imperfect. This sets up poisons in the body—causes fogy, tired feeling.

Whether you are aware of tired feeling or not, you will find Post's Bran Flakes a real help to you in keeping fit and vital. They help to provide the natural bulk that keeps food wastes moving—help to promote regular elimination. If listless, tired feeling is not readily relieved in this way, see a physician.

And you will enjoy eating Post's Bran Flakes. They really are a most appetizing, delicious-tasting cereal.

B.Y.P.U.

Monday evening marked a splendid opening meeting of the Baptist Young Peoples Union, when over 70 young people met in the church for a banquet held in the Sunday School rooms.

During the course of the banquet a short musical was conducted which added to the enjoyment of the meeting. Miss Edith Looker, newly elected president for the second year was in charge of the program, and expressed a welcome to the large number present; it being the largest opening meeting of the Union.

Following the banquet, Rev. Orr read the Scripture and Mr. Arthur Hepburn led in prayer with two delightful solos.

The business part of the meeting was conducted by the president, who mentioned the Fall Rally of the Peterboro Association, which will be held in Port Hope on Oct. 11. It is the aim of the Belleville Union to win the banner at this rally and thereby retain same after having won it on the previous occasion.

It was also mentioned that the Union would hold its annual play in the fall instead of the spring this year. The name of the romantic Comedy is "Tuesday's Roses" and will be capably directed by Miss Mildred Lloyd.

Directly following business, Miss M. Lloyd gave two fine readings and Miss D. Croft, favored the group with two delightful piano solos.

Mr. Gerald Harrop of McMaster University speaker, was introduced by Rev. A. G. Sinclair. The speaker chose for his topic "Flirting" and defined it as neglect of the heart without intention. There are many people who flirt or brush the surface of the things of the world. What would happen if God flirted with the problem of Sin? The speaker also touched on the outstanding work of D. L. Moody. Mr. Harrop's talk was an inspiration to the Young People, who listened attentively.

Following the singing of Blest Be The Tie That Binds, the evening was brought to a close by Mr. Harrop.

Advice to the Lovelorn

by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Take Your Time About Getting Married

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Lately I've been going out with a boy I like very much. He now tells me he doesn't make a big enough salary to get married, and wouldn't be able to settle down for a long time. Shall I tell him I'll wait for him? I'm only 19 and he's 24.

Margaret.

It isn't necessary to say anything, unless he asks. The boy probably wants you to know he likes you, but doesn't want to be taken seriously. Just keep on going out with him, if you enjoy his companionship, but forget marriage as far as he is concerned.

Sometimes a boy will stop coming at all, if a girl tries to force a romantic relationship. Don't hurry about getting married. You're young and have plenty of time.

Her Father Was Angry

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 20 years old and very much in love with a girl of 18. Her parents seem to dislike me, but why, I'm not sure. We've been meeting each other on the sly, and everything was O.K. until one day she came to my home with a girl friend.

We were sitting in the living room talking when someone knocked. When I opened the door a man pushed in, and there stood her father! He was furious, and started to quarrel and fight. He pushed him and went home.

That's the last time I saw her, and I haven't heard from her. My friends tell me to forget her, but I love her too much to do that. What can I do?

Discouraged

It is possible for 18 and 20 to love several times before they settle down to marriage. But if you're certain she's the only girl in the world, you'd better try to find out why her parents object to you. They may think you're too young, or not able to support a wife. The argument over your house makes it more difficult; perhaps you'd better try to forget her, as your friends suggest.

Giving the Boy Friend a Steamer Present

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We've been the best pals for more than a year. We have never gone "steady" as a good many of your correspondents call it—just good friends who enjoy hiking, swimming, dancing together and thank Heaven no-"pawing," which I think spoils everything in the way of friendship.

This boy has just taken a prize as an architect, which will enable him to study in Europe for a year. I want to send him a steamer present, something a little more personal than a basket of fruit or candy, and yet something that won't look as if I had designs on him. What would you suggest? I've thought of a dressing gown; is that too personal?

Girl Friend

As you two have been hiking and canoeing and been such good companions for more than a year, I think a dressing gown would be an excellent present. I've seen such lovely ones in paisley brocades, and they're not beyond the reach of ordinary pocketbooks. Of course you could give the young man books on architecture, doubtless he's fed up much as he has taken a prize in architecture doubtless and fed up with the subject. I think the dressing gown is your best bet.

Two Old-Fashioned Girls

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We are two old-fashioned girls of 19 and 18, and while we're both considered good-looking, we don't seem to have a way with the boys. We're excellent dancers and believe in having a good time, but we never seem to meet the right boys, because they're all the "grizzly-bear" type who want to start off an acquaintance necking, and as you know that's a great deal of a bore to the old fashioned girl.

Some of our girl friends, who live any Toon, Dick and Harry, don't think of us because we're not flashy. We're wondering if we're too old-fashioned, and whether we should wait until some decent boys come along. We're tired of sitting home every night.

Two Old-Fashioned Girls.

Try to make friends with some of the better type of young man than they're now characterize as "grizzly bears."

Bread and Butter Letter

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have been visiting some friends for a few weeks and many times taken me to different places and I have had a very fine time. Now that I have returned home, I would like to write to them, thanking them for all their kind deeds. Please give me an idea of what to say, and how to go about it?

B.

A "visit of a few weeks" is a very important event in the social life of most girls, and for a most important letter of appreciation! Maybe this time you might suggest your letter to you (written to the hostess of the home):

Dear Mary,

Such a wonderful visit I had with you, such a wonderful time! My mind and heart are full of the most delightful of memories. You have such a perfect home, and your hospitality is so glorious that I am thinking of it most of the very special words, "brand-new" words. Lacking these, I do, however, thank you, with a very full heart, for all your great goodness to me.

It was such a joy being a member of your charming household during these happy weeks. I have the privilege of meeting your interesting friends, and I am glad your beautiful parties, to share your garden and your books. How I thank you for your kindness! And "Thank-you" for all this beauty that you have given me! You made me so wondrously happy. I am that I have a new inspiration in life!

You promised . . . . . remember! . . . . . that you would let me know when you are to be near my home and that you would then come to visit me. We are all looking forward to that visit with high hearts.

Dearest love to you and Tom, and again my deepest thanks.

Affectionately.

As a bow of appreciation for this visit, you should send, with your thank-you letter, a gift to your hostess. But I am sure that you have already planned this.

Future In-Laws

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. My son is planning to be married during the next year and no announcements have been made as yet. The young lady has visited us on several occasions and has also met most of his friends. We have never met her parents, and I am wondering if it is not the right place to make the advances, or should I write and invite them to visit us? They live about five hundred miles from here.

2. After my son is married (which would be in her home) would you have a wedding at her home, or they come to see us after the wedding? As I would love where we live, it is so hard to draw the line. If you can give me your idea of an informal invitation, how to word it, give and outline a few of the delightful informal parties which my son was born and raised here so, of course, everyone knows him.

Mother

1. It is the family of the groom-to-be who make the first "social advances". So since the family of your son's fiancee live too far away for a "welcoming call" you should write her at once and tell her that you have the good news, and how happy and proud you are to welcome her into the family. It will be easy for you to do this, since you know her so well. Then it would be appropriate for you to write, in your name and your husband's, to the parents of the young lady, and invite her and her husband to visit you.

2. This is one of the very nicest parties in the world. I think—the party given by the bride's family to introduce the bride to the groom's friends in his home town. By all means plan to do that. Also this party (I suggest) as a tea-party, or as a Sunday evening buffet party. You and your daughter-in-law and son (and your husband, if he wishes) would stand near the entrance of the living-room to receive and welcome the guests and to introduce your new "daughter" to the friends whom she does not already know.

HOW OFTEN CAN YOU KISS AND MAKE UP?

FEW husbands can understand why a wife should turn from a pleasant companion into a shrew for one whole week in every month.

You can say "I'm sorry" and "kiss and make up" after every marriage that's ever been made, and if you want to hold your husband, you won't be in that category, long.

Put Problem Child on Honor

Writer Suggests This Method as One Way to Obtain Results

(By Lisa Grenelle)

"I give you my word," his aunt told me, "he was impossible. None of the family could do anything with him. He wouldn't pay any attention to anyone, was consistently rude and disrespectful, wouldn't study his room—wouldn't do anything he was told. I had just resigned, hadn't seen the boy since he was a baby, and I was horrified by what the family and Algonquin boy what the family and Algonquin boy who he headed for the reformatory."

He appeared sullen the first time I saw him; he had on a dirty shirt, his hair was over his eyes, and he looked furtive and defiant. "You look as if you'd been in a fight," I said, smiling at him. "Was it a good fight?"

He looked up at me suspiciously. "I ain't been in any fight," he said, and then, realizing there was no accusation or reproach in my expression, he relaxed slightly.

Different Boy

"You know, fellah," I said there's a baseball game going on where I live and if you'd consider it worth a change of shirt and emerging from those grape vines hanging over your face, I'm on the lookout for an ace."

"At the baseball game we didn't talk about anything but the players.

"Before the end of the first inning, he was a different boy, relaxed, cheerful, talkative, off the defensive.

"We had a date the next week. Oh, no. But still I didn't speak to him of his shortcomings.

"The third week, after 'any luck,' I took him to my boys' room and asked him if he'd like to make him up, if he'd be interested in a fair daily program for himself and I'd see if I couldn't get it put through with the boys' aid.

"He did just that, and a pretty good program it was.

"That's pretty stiff," I said. "Think you can stick to it?"

"Sure," he said.

Punished Self

"All right then." I told him, tack it on the wall to remind yourself and when you've lived up to your self a red cross. Three red crosses and you'll have to forfeit a weekly party."

"On the third week he called me up to say he couldn't go to the ball game with me, because of three red crosses. I told him I was sorry, but I didn't scold. I was glad he'd had proved that he was honest, and that was the first step in any important step.

"The next week he showed me his chart proudly—no X's. I congratulated him and we went on a real party."

With children, even more than grown-ups, it is important to expect the worst—you get it. If you nag and condemn and scold—pretty soon there's plenty about which to nag and condemn and scold.

SHANNONVILLE W.A.

The W.A. of the United Church met in the home of the Secretary-Treasurer, Mrs. Claude Clarke on Wednesday, Sept. 8th, with the Neighbors' Aid Ladies of Thurlow as guests. Mrs. Sam Elliott, President of the W.A. took charge of the meeting.

An address of welcome was read by Mrs. Stanley MacDonald. Mrs. Archie Greenlaw, on behalf of the Neighbors' Aid, made an appropriate reply and thanked the W.A. for their kind invitation. A solo by Mrs. Stanley Grills, playing her own accompaniment on the guitar "Where Roses Turn to Ashes and the Organ Turns to Rust," was much enjoyed. Mrs. Lott, of Sidney, the guest speaker was then called on and took for her subject the characteristics of some of the outstanding women of the old testament urging the ladies present to emulate their virtues. Mrs. Lott's helpful addresses inspire and encourage the members to greater devotion to duty and willingness to be of service to others. Mrs. H. Murphy in moving a vote of thanks to Mrs. Lott, for coming to speak to the group expressed the appreciation of the gathering. Mrs. Donald seconded this note of thanks. A reading was given by Mrs. (Rev.) Craig and a sacred solo by Mrs. Haight. Rev. Craig gave a short address on the "Practical Side of the Ladies' Aid or W.A." as it is now called in providing the necessary funds of the upkeep of the parsonage, etc. Collection was $4.46. Sixty were present at the meeting.

Are You Too Thin?

It May Be Your Nerves

If you have failed to gain weight
By regulating your diet,
Perhaps your nervous system is at fault.
If you have the worry habit,
And are irritable and fidgety,
You cannot expect to develop bodily curves.
No amount of food will nourish you properly
So long as nerve force is wasted by worry.
Under these conditions digestion is bad
And your body is kept thin and angular.
The use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food
Is a most satisfactory way to regain normal weight.
This treatment makes the blood rich and red,
Restores the vigor of the nervous system,
And enables you to develop peace of mind,
As well as personality and an attractive figure.

Good Health, Cleanliness Keep Facial Skin Lovely

(By Helen Follett)

It isn't to be expected that the complexion will stay young, fresh and smooth without a certain amount of care, and constantly bumping into hazards. Digestive upsets cause it to become pale, gray or yellow. A brisk wind rumples its smooth surface and fluffs up the epidermal coat until it feels like sandpaper.

Atmospheric dust crowds into the pores and has a bad effect upon the delicate fabric. Stress or emotional strain causes it to fall into creases. To have a perfect complexion, one must have perfect health and give the skin the attention it requires.

Frances Dee
This beauty never neglects her complexion

Cleanliness is the first rule. Use soap freely unless the cuticle rebels. Rinse away the suds thoroughly. If there are blackheads or pustules, apply hot compresses to free the pores of waste products.

Oily applications are helpful. They offset the deplorable effects of strong sunlight and wind. Heavy on hand a cold cream, or cleansing oil for the removal of make-up. Apply a heavy cream after the soapy washing at night. Let some of it remain on. In the morning use cold water freely.

Cleanliness is not the only reason for the daily bath. The scouring of the body with soap suds and a heavy brush stimulates the blood supply, gives one a glow of exhilirant and helps the skin to carry on as an eliminating organ. This kind of a bath one takes and add when one takes it depend upon the condition of the person. A bright bath at night will make some individuals wakeful, others will find it soothing and quieting to the nerves.

Nothing takes the place of that fresh, well-bathed look. Dainty women are common lookers. They know what scrubbing does for them.

In childhood the texture of the skin is fine, but the pores scarcely noticeable. Sometimes this delicate fabric remains the same all through life. Sometimes the pores expand and the character of the epidermal coat changes. It is believed that this condition comes through neglect or because the diet is not balanced.

Hearty eaters usually have poor complexions. Their blackheads become overactive, the walls of the pores stretched. It is advised, if your complexion isn't what it should be, to eat more green salads and vegetables, fruits and cut down on tea and coffee.

Standing with the weight of the body on one foot is a bad habit that should be broken. It makes one likely to become weaker than the other, one hip higher.

To keep legs strong and slender and ankles in good condition, run on your toes for a few minutes when you do it. Keep your hands in water from the chest upward. There will be all manner of beauty benefits wooning your way. Among them will be rosy cheeks in your cheeks, spots that don't come out of the orange juice.

After a woman is 35 her weight should remain stationary. It will be due that if she minds her eating habits and when forgets the exercise.

She should find time for calisthenics or breathing exercises. Women are remiss on this matter. Miss Grace Pitman, 'and Mr. T. W. Holmes acted as usher.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, looked lovely in her bridal gown of embroidered white silk net over white satin, fashioned on princess lines and with bolero jacket. Her veil of embroidered white silk net, falling in a short train, was held in place by a coronet of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of "Better Times" red roses, and her only ornament was a white gold bracelet, the gift of the groom.

Miss Margaret Bateman, sister of the groom, was her only attendant, wearing a floor-length gown of pale orange, and a large picture hat. She carried a bouquet of Talisman roses and brown-eyed Susans.

The groomsman was Mr. Ray Mallory, brother of the bride.

The groom's gift to the bridesmaid was a gold compact, to the groomsman a white gold tie set, to the organist a sterling silver necklace, and to the usher a Parker pencil.

A reception was held for the immediate families and close friends of the bride and groom at the summer home of Mr. W. C. Holmes, Oak Lake.

Following the reception, the young couple left amid showers of confetti for a two weeks' trip to the Atlantic coast, returning through the Adirondacks. For travelling the bride wore a sand suit with brown accessories. On their return they will reside at 211 Foster Avenue, Belleville.

RUSHLOW—HOLMES

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at ten o'clock this morning in Bridge Street Church, when Mabel Irene Holmes, Redmerville, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Holmes, became the bride of Mr. Leonard Edward Rushlow of this city. The ceremony was performed by Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was lovely in a gown of white lace and blue floor length with white accessories and an ermine scarf. She carried a bouquet of pink and white roses and lilies with gladioli and an heirloom prayer book.

Mrs. Ralph Pulver gowned in navy blue and grey, was matron of honour, and Mr. Henry Pulver, Church Street, supported the groom.

Following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents, the rooms being arranged with a profusion of pink and blooms. Mrs. Holmes, mother of the bride, who received with the young couple, wore a becoming suit of burgundy with matching accessories.

Mr. and Mrs. Rushlow later left for Ottawa; the bride chose for travelling a two-toned tailored suit with brown and pink accessories.

Mr. and Mrs. Rushlow upon their return will reside in Belleville.

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton, M.D.

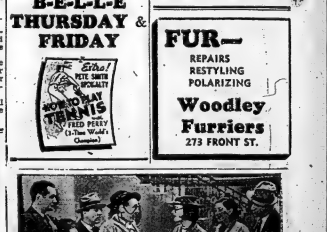
MORE CASES OF PIMPLES (ACNE) TREATED BY PITUITARY EXTRACT

About the time that the growing boy and girl begin to think about their looks or appearance, it so often happens that unsightly pimples (acne) appear. On what was formerly a healthy skin, this ugly skin ailment appears and causes the victim much suffering and life of the individual—home, school, business, social is spoiled and he or she develops an inferiority complex that prevents financial and social progress.

Physicians, recognising the fact that acne appears just at the time that the body is changing into manhood and womanhood, are agreed that certain glandular aids from the sex glands are not doing their work correctly or completely particularly the pituitary gland lying on the floor of the skull. The result is that certain foodstuffs absorb foods more than others, are not completely digested, and that changes occur in the skin itself and to some extent in the blood. The glands which is used to keep the skin soft and pliable. The little digestive tracts in the skin holding the pores are filled with hardened skin thus preventing the oil from flowing on skin.

I have spoken before of the 17 cases reported by Dr. Charles H. Lawrence in the Journal of the American Medical Association in which the pituitary anterior lobe gland gave splendid results. Fifteen cases was not many but Dr. Lawrence was convinced that out of thirty cases where the extract of the pituitary gland was used 15 pituitary gland was used successfully.

For some time it was believed that the thyroid gland was at fault but now it is known that it only helps up the body processes. It was brought that this gland was not producing enough iodine. However Dr. Lawrence by making establishment that the pituitary anterior gland in acne cases was supplying the normal amount of juice.



It would thus be good sense in the treatment of acne to try to find out whether or not the glandular aids that are not handled properly by the body. Extracts recently obtained by Dr. Lawrence by the use of anterior pituitary extract may cause other investigators to find this treatment for this mean ailment.

AT THE BELLE

"Emperor's Candlesticks" with William Powell and Luise Rainer.

"The Emperor's Candlesticks", produced by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer from the novel by the Baroness Orczy, comes to the Belle Theatre tomorrow (Thursday). Powell and Rainer team only with William Powell and Luise Rainer in the starring roles.

It is a daring film, not only because of its intriguing narrative, but more because it gives three celebrated stars a new opportunity to prove their versatility.

In the new picture, Powell, famous for his creation of Philo Vance, finds is seen as a debonair secret agent in pre-War Europe. Miss Rainer, erstwhile Chinese slave-wife in "The Good Earth", now becomes an exotic spy. The contrast is startling and the two stars achieve their divergent roles to perfection.

In a setting of glamorous beauty in Vienna, Warsaw, Paris, London and Russia, the action of the story follows the adventures of these two across a continent. Always there is suspense, danger and intrigue and, presently, there is romance.

It is a novel vehicle for Powell and Miss Rainer and their talents rise to new heights in the capable cast of exceptional strength includes Robert Young, Maureen O'Sullivan, Frank Morgan, Henry Stephenson, Douglas Dumbrille, Bernadene Hayes, Donald Crisp, Ian Wolfe, Reginald Owen, Bert Roach, Charles Waldron, Emma Dunn, Frank Reicher, Paul Porasal and E. E. Clive.

The director was George Fitzmaurice and the producer, John Considine, who produced "Broadway Melody of 1936" and other notable triumphs. "The Emperor's Candlesticks" will add new laurels to their records and to those of the entire cast.

"How To Play Tennis"
A special added attraction on the same program is "How To Play Tennis", with wise-cracking narration by Pete Smith, and starring the champion of the courts, Fred Perry, this reel is excellent sport picture fare. Demonstrating the infallible precision, control and many tricks of the game that one must know to become a champion, make this a most interesting subject that should not only be lovers of the sport but to all spectators.

"A Girl's Best Year", a smart and tuneful M.G.M. miniature musical comedy with a host of entertainers from stage, screen and radio will be exhibited on the same program.

Kay Francis Leaving.
Three top-ranking stars from the Warner Bros. studio appear in the romantic adventure film "Another Dawn", featuring Kay Francis, Errol Flynn and Ian Hunter, announced presentation at the Belle tonight only.

Besides the members of the triangle "Another Dawn" has such players as Frieda Inescort, Herbert Mundin, G. P. Huntley Jr., and Clyde Cook.

International films of Shanghai bombing, filmed by News of the Day cameramen at risk of their lives. A smart musical revue and a funny Joe Palooka comedy conclude a splendid program.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Ever Since Eve" With Robert Montgomery and Marion Davies

With Marion Davies and Robert Montgomery as co-stars, and a supporting cast that includes such popular comedians as Frank McHugh, Patsy Kelly, Louise Fazenda and Allen Jenkins, the comedy "Ever Since Eve" will open today at the Capitol Theatre as hit No. 1 on another smash double bill.

It is described as the sprightliest piece of nonsense that either the lovely golden-haired Miss Davies or handsome Bob has ever played in.

Montgomery plays the part of a goofy author who cannot settle down to finish his novels because he has his mind on blondes. Miss Davies assumes the role of a secretary who has been so pestered by previous employers on account her good looks, that when she goes to work for Bob she does so in disguise, making herself a homely as possible.

Bob meets her at night, undisguised, doesn't recognize her, and falls in love with him. The complications resulting from this are said to be fast and furious.

The cast of roles portrayed by Miss Davies and Montgomery in the picture are especially suited to their talents and the triumphs of former films are repeated here many-fold.

Perhaps one of the best features of the picture is the presence of a side-splitting supporting cast of comedians. Performances by Allen Jenkins, Frank McHugh, and Patsy Kelly keep the audience in the proverbial gales of laughter.

"Meet Nero Wolfe"
"Meet Nero Wolfe", starring Edward Arnold as the portly, cool-criminologist who lives quietly among his orchids and beer kegs and solves murders as a hobby, is shown as hit No. 2 on the same programme. Lionel Stander is seen in the leading supporting role as Nero Wolfe's chief aide and legman. Others in the cast are Victor Jory and Joan Perry.

The film is based on the widely read novel by Rex Stout called "Meet Nero Wolfe" which was adapted to the screen by Bruce Manning and Jo Pagano. The story itself tells of the efforts of Wolfe to clear the shroud of mystery that surrounds the murder of Professor Barstow on the golf greens of a prominent country club. During Wolfe's investigations two others meet a similar fate. Forced to play a desperate trump card, Wolfe subtly challenges the murderer and forces him to show his hand.

Strategic points of shirring mark the starched and sheer dresses. Schiaparelli does a frock of black chiffon with two huge triangles of shirring on the bodice at either side. Under-arm shirring catches up the sleeves.

NEW DEVICE MAY REPLACE CUMBERSOME "IRON LUNG"

This new type respirator, recently brought to New York from Sweden, is said to be a long step in advance of the "iron lung" as an aid to sufferers from infantile paralysis. Made of aluminum, the device covers the chest and abdomen, leaving the lower part of the patient's body free and eliminating most of the discomfort entailed by use of the original iron appliance. It also allows for adjustments in treating kidney and other ailments. The "iron lung" is the invention of Dr. B. O. Sahlin.

'Silent' Carl Hubbell Became First Major Leaguer to Hurl 19 Wins

WINS OVER PIRATES

Scrappy Boston Bees Play Good Baseball In All Departments to Blast Cubs

(By Bill Boni)

(Associated Press Writer)

There's no rest for the weary. Slapped down and around twice on the same afternoon by the Bees, the world champion Cubs, who dropped 3-2 games in back of the Giants, the Cubs today faced two more games with Commodore McKechnie's scrappy crew—and especially with Commodore McKechnie's veteran Rookie veterans or, by any name you please, crack pitchers.

The latest of them, Milt Shoffner, was set to go to work against the Bruins this afternoon. Behind him are Lou Fette and Jim Turner, the all-conquering mates who will be rested by tomorrow.

That double dealout handed the Bruins yesterday—8-6 as the Bees slapped behind Johnny Lanning, a lad they fished out of the relief bin behind Danny MacFayden— did the Cubs no good whatever.

While the Giants were splitting a pair with Pittsburgh, at cost to Ochs a full game back, Boston tacked two more defeats on their list. The champions, in the "second lost" column, now are four games to the rear of the league-leading Bees.

The standings showed the following:

Clubs	Won	Lost	Games Behind
Chicago	79	58	—
Giants	83	—	2
Cubs	79	58	2 1-2

The Giants came out of the only doubleheader of the day unscathed as invasion well enough. In the opening which they won 7-3 behind Carl Hubbell more than the silent southpaw has had all season and scashed him to count for the honor of being the first major leaguer to win 19 games.

Even in the night-cap, which they lost at 6-2 to Cy Blanton, they slicked the Pirate left-hander for eight hits and might have pulled the game out of the fire in the ninth when Frank Lerher, who had batted in four runs in the opener, grounded into a double play with the bases jammed.

The rest of the day's program was enough to leave pitchers strewn in slap-happy carnival lots. The Yankees, at that, led the parade with a 18-hit display good for a 11-3 victory over the Indians and leaving the American League Champions only three points behind double-header to erase Cleveland's last mathematical hope.

The Brown Derby Tigers also climbed into double figures, the Browns with an 11-6 shellacking of the Athletics, Detroit with an 11-8 clouting of the Senators.

Following their example, the Cardinals and Dodgers swept right through their double bills: 6-1, Louis climbed into a third-place tie with the Pirates by beating the Phils 5-4 in 10 innings after a 1-0 in four and a half, while Brooklyn first raked out the Reds 4-3 then swamped them 11-3.

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press)

Wank Leiber, Giants, and Bill Brubaker and Johnny Waner, Pirates—Former drove in four runs to lead way to 12-2 victory in opener; Brubaker and Waner batted out a 4-3 defeat of Giants in night-cap.

Billy Rogell, Tigers—Drove home five runs in 11-6 trimming of Senators.

Ducky Medwick and Lonnie Warneke, Cardinals—Former's double scored winning run in 14-inning 3-2 victory over Phils; latter hurled 1-0 shutout in second game.

Bill Dickey and Myril Hoag, Yankees—Bagged seven hits and drove in nine runs in 11-3 massacre of Indians.

Roy Parmelee and Buck Marrow, Dodgers—Henshaw checked Reds rally in ninth as Brooklyn took opener 4-3; former hurled six-hit relief job in second game while latter blanked Reds with six-hit, 11-0 win in nightcap.

John Lanning and Danny MacFayden, Bees—Former limited Cubs to five hits, latter to seven as Boston swept twin bill 9-6 and 4-2.

Ernie Bowman—Beat Cubs with three runs in 11-6 triumph over Athletics.

Fights Last Night

(By The Associated Press)

Cleveland, Ohio,—Charley Baxter, 197, Pittsburgh, stopped Frankie Lockwood, 134 Indianapolis, (4).

New York,—Charley Badami, 141 1-2, New York, outpointed Lew Raymond, 146, Baltimore (8).

Elizabeth, N.J.—Buddy Ryan, 170, Roselle Park, outpointed Johnny Helgas, 172, Long Branch (8).

New York, Sept. 15 (AP)—Chuck Dressen, aired by "Zinzinnati" probably can laugh with the Giants, if he wants to.....In the meantime, if the Reds haven't decided on their 1938 pilot, what's the matter with Tony Lazzeri of the Yankees?

Jimmy Foxx, Athletics' batting star, has been out of the game since August 1 because of a broken finger.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with

Ken J. Colling

In order to stimulate interest and materially assist in the increasing of the general attendance, the Belleville Rugby Club is introducing a new wrinkle this season. For a nominal flat sum, to later be arranged, all students at the Belleville Collegiate will be admitted to the home games of the local grid squad grafts. The students will not have to pay the admission and will attend the games in a body. Not only should this increase the attendance, but it will educate the younger generation and assure the local grad of some assured vocal encouragement. Regarding the above mentioned flat sum to be tendered the Rugby Club to finance the scholar scheme, we understand there will be absolutely no draw on the student's individual or collective finance. The sum will be raised by others interested in the game and the children.

There is a possibility that a fourth team may be included in intermediate group No. 1 of the O.R.F.U. Harold Bailey, enterprise Secretary of the Association, has been doing some missionary work in Kingston, with rather prolific results. A body of enthusiastic ball persons in Kingston are seriously considering , sponsoring a rugby team to be known as the Kingston "Grads". If this new club is finally born another 10 days or so more certain information is expected before the end of the week. Should the new local group a well-balanced four teamed loop, including the R.C.A.F. "Flyers", Belleville, Kingston Garrison and the Limestone City 'Grads,' if they finally materialize, it will be fine.

Coach Archie Duffield is all smiles these days, he had 19 hard-working grid candidates out last night and 17 out the previous workfore. "We have our eye on three or four outstanding potential players and once we get them out to practice our squad will be complete. The boys are working a little extra hard because we have a tough old nut to handle in the Prince of Wales second opens just one week hence, Coach Conrad Duffield is to get the pick locals through their paces under the watchful eye of Coach Belgrid. The squad's new regalia will arrive next week, but until then we are not sure what the uniforms for the team will be this year.

Although the ball season is on the wane, we still have at least a couple of more chances to see the softballers in action. Both the Post and Anne "Consonmen" have covetous eyes on the Intermediate "B" championship pie this year. They have advanced to the semi-finals in this group. The Post will be at Village this evening Frank Sedore's Post-Tyrpo aces. Tonight the intermediates in the first game of the semi-final series. If the 'consonmen' continue to play as they have they will play the finals at the local Exhibition Park. Tonight at 8 o'clock Mic Macs and Havelock clash in an intermediate "play-down" series at, now afternoon. This is a replay of the seven-all tie played between these two clubs here on Monday.

THREE AMATEUR BOUTS ON CARD

Plenty of Gusto Seen at The Arena When Amateurs Tangle

With their customary gusto and exuberance the amateur wrestlers will stage the Belleville Arena for three sterling bouts on Friday night. That arch enemy of the patrons of the grunt and groan business, Fred Pelletier, the celebrated Lion of the North, takes on a newcomer in George Armand, Toronto, in the main bout of the evening.

For those who enjoy clean scientific wrestling there will be Bill Gale and popular Red Garner, international lightweight champion, in battles with Harold Standish of Minnion. In this latter match there is always considerable poundage, as Standish out-weighs the champ about nine pounds.

The initial bout of the night sees that guitar-playing Irishman Arnie Winnipeg, "Cowboy" Sullivan clash with Peter Fernello, the Greek adonis while the pugnacious and popular Jimmie Simpson, whose work inside the square circle is equally as interesting to watch as the antics of some of the wrestlers, will be the referee of the night. Numerous local fans attended these amateur bouts merely to see Simpson go into action and at times himself enter into the contests.

By kind permission of Wing Commander E. L. Godfrey itn guaranteed boxing bouts are slated to be presented at the Arena one week from tonight. The right game has been in the making in Belleville for some years, but boxing received considerable stimulation through the efforts of Tommy Farr recently and no one doubts but what it will be highly proven by the large crowd that is expected to attend these bouts.

Conny Smythe, Managing Director of the Toronto Maple Leafs, recently announced he had signed Bill Thomson, star right winger of the Port Arthur seniors. Thomson was a member of the 1936 Canadian Olympic hockey team, but played in the English league. Apparently the Leafs are out in full force of the all-too-obvious breaches in their ranks of last year.

If one can believe half of what one hears, there is to be a general housing of baseball gates into the C.O.B.L. before next Victoria Day. We understand Joe Daley's Foxes and Jack Peterboro and they all ready in the field for baseball Frye's for nothing at Wall Gerow and Ernie Gibbard. Instead of the old saying "go west young man", it will be a case of "don't get trampled in the rush for diamond talent' this side the Credit bog?

Do you remember when Jack Dempsey picked himself up from the canvas floor and flattened Luis Angel Firpo in one of the greatest modern-day heavyweight boxing fights staged at New York 14 years ago yesterday. Knocked down six times, Firpo sent the champion through the ropes in the first round, Dempsey returned Firpo to the canvas twice more before the knockout in the second round.

The Chicago Cubs have a golden opportunity to keep up in the National League running this week, dropped both ends of a doubleheader to the Boston Bees, who played great offensive ball, the first game and then behind the veteran Dazzy Vance, burned in a sparkling defensive game to win the second 11-6. While all of this was going on the Giants increased their lead over the Chicago Pirates, during which the great Carl Hubbell turned in his 19th consecutive victory of the current season. The Giants are now 2½ games out in front of the Pirates, who still retain a tough opposition on their present western tour.

The National Boxing Association met yesterday, threatened to shear champion Joe Louis of his laurels unless he came to Madison Square Garden at least agrees to meet him. Actually the threat amounts to a bit of a laugh. Didn't Braddock break a contract with Schmeling last June, while no later than last month Tommy Farr was released from a contract with Schmeling last February. When one state boxing commission can tell the National body to "go pot" as was the case last June, what's the use of the N. B. A. trying to kid themselves into ordering the champion, or any one else, around?

TIGERS SHARPEN CLAWS AS WELCH RETURNS TO LAIR

Rejoicing as Noted "Huck" Welch Appears at Hamilton Practise

(By The Canadian Press)

Ash Wastey "Huck" Welch today about those retirement plans he talked about a short while ago and he'll probably just grin and say: "Well, maybe next year."

For Huck, who hooks a football in a fashion to warm any coach's heart, turned up yesterday for the first time this season to the Hamilton Tigers' workout. Although he didn't say definitely he intended to play it's a pretty good bet Huck will be on the firing line when Tigers start their Fig Four schedule.

While Tigers are busy cheering news Welch might be back, Big Four rivals are toiling like beavers in preparation for coming exhibition games. Two training camps are hurt by injuries to key men.

Ole Olson, the man coach Johnny Ferraro calls "Iron Man" comeback for his Montreal Indians, was carried off the field with an injured knee. Hamilton Tigers and their classy middle wing, Pete Jokiva, out for the first practice, found that Andy Tommy was unable to work because of a ruptured blood vessel in his leg. Jokiva ordered the Rough Rider backfielder to lay off until next week.

Argos went through a brisk drill at Varsity, but started with running and passing exercises and launched into mid-field grappling. Coach Frankie Peterboro and his backfielders, furnished rallibird with the best displays.

McINTYRE AWARDED TITLE

Smith's Falls, Ont., Sept. 15.—(CP)—McIntyre Mines of Timmins, Ont., were awarded the Canadian Rod Champions today under an edict issued by E. J. Sutherland of Smith's Falls, president of the E.C.B.A.

The Timmins' team was named titleholder last night after the Green Valley Club, which chose the plans, refused to meet the Mines' team in the finals in the Northern City unless it was given an $800 guarantee.

The Gladmen McIntyre Mines representative, refused to accede to this proposal and Frank Bouchard, president of the District, would not accept any other proposal.

Little Benny's Note Book

This afternoon ma had the blues, just feeling heave with nothing to do, so I thought I'd just rearse about, and I had a idea, saying, how do you want me to read to you out of the newspaper to help to take your mind off your troughts?

For goodness sakes, yes, say ma, I'm willing to do anything for a change, I'm sure, ma said.

And I started to read out loud to her from the paper, saying, Mrs. Rumsy Rumsy, age 37, of 13 Rumsy Road, was arranged before Magistrate Krake yesterday charged with making an affray on the band with a pair of scissers. The woman pleaded guilty and got the deed when Smisker, age 42, of 19 Smisker Road ace within a pair lod of 20 minutes.

O be quiet, the idea of choosing such things to read when my mind is still freshly warm with memories of the lovely hour lunch bridge he ever played in his life. If such a thing is possible, I simply cant you find something cheerful to read in that whole big newspaper? ma said, in a voice of ma, here's something.

And I started to read it, saying, Wife running to the candy store for anything a half a dollar had been given to him for his birthday, little James Rook, just 8 years old, last night was struck by a truck and——

Stop, that's enough, how can you call such a thing cheerful when it's about a child and every week about trucks even when they're not hitting people, ma said, and I said, Well O, ma, dont it cheer you up to realize it was some other boy instead of you?

Nothing will cheer me up except your absence from the room, I'm not nollers that you're not stirring off the front steps this very minute, ma said, in my present frame of mind, and the slightest argument from you will be punctuated by a slap from me, now get out of my sight, ma said.

Wich I did.

A Winner in Essay Contest Names Mrs. Roosevelt as "The Woman of The Future"

New York, Sept. 12 (AP)—Withdrawal of former Governor Alfred E. Smith as one of the five judges in a nation-wide women's essay contest was disclosed last night after one of the papers describing Eleanor Roosevelt as "the woman of the future" was awarded second prize.

The New York League of Business and Professional Women sponsored the contest on the subject of the woman who has "contributed most to the development of the United States from 1620 to the present time."

The winner was announced as Miss Dorothy Taylor, of Brooklyn, N.Y.

Former Governor Smith, who in the days of their close friendship called President Roosevelt an "old potato", informed the committee that he would have to withdraw as one of the judges. Those remaining who made the final selections were Pamela Hinkle, the novelist; Anna M. Kross, New York City magistrate; Dr. John H. Finley, Editor of the New York Times, and Eugene A. Colligan, President of Hunter College.

A plan to transplant Czechoslovakia into a European nation capable of supporting a population nearly three times its present size has been published by Jan Antos Bata (ABOVE), head of Europe's biggest shoe factory. Bata made public his scheme in a book entitled "We Will Build a State for 40,000,000 People." The plan for making Czechoslovakia self supporting would be to develop the long, narrow eastern strip of the country comprising Slovakia and Carpathian Ruthenia.

MISSING GIRL

By Maryse Rutledge

"No," Jane admitted wretchedly. She hadn't thought of that.

"You are very pretty and silly little girl," the Princess murmured. "Adventure—romance—you know what they have brought you—and me. Mrs. Parks gave you 4,000 francs, mes! foolishly. Of that, I gave you back a thousand when we reached Paris. I will now add to me, to give you the other 4,000. Tomorrow morning you shall have it before you go."

"But you must have spent it!" Jane cried. "It was my share of things."

"You have more than paid your share, my child." Her gutturals held a tenderness of weariness. "You worked in the shop, did you not? As you say in English—we are quits. You will excuse me now. I have many arrangements to make."

Quietly she left the room.

Jane spent the rest of the night packing, her nerves too exhausted for emotion. Very early in the morning the maid came to tell her information about her train and a note from the Princess, enclosing 4,000 francs.

"It is better not to see each other again," she wrote. "On my grave shall be written that I desired to make a golfer out of the Ritz, and a Ritz out of the golfer. A few more years of life for me. And—tiedebye."

While Jane sped back to Paris with no plans and a deadness in her heart, Nalia Theriere sent a wire to the Comte la Paule.

Thus it was that when Jane arrived at the Gare d'Orsay, wondering dully where she would go, she heard a cheerful, pleasant voice on the station platform.

"May I be of service, chere Mademoiselle?" Unnervingly he had stood beside her, slim and blond, his pale blue eyes amused. Months ago on Park Avenue he had said almost these same words as a stranger, in a smoke-darkened room in shabby black poised on the threshold of adventure.

And just as she had done at that time, Jane looked up into his startled face. She was incredibly glad now to see him. "Henri!" Never before had she called him that. Mechanically she allowed him to lift her bag. "Henri!" she gasped. "Are you meeting anyone on this train?"

"You," he answered. And to her question, he waved his hand. "I, regret, but if you will permit me ... you have a trunk, yes?"

How delightful he had arranged everything for her! Only ... when she found herself in the small, pleasant hotel on the Rue des Saints Peres, where he had engaged a room for her, did she realize with greatness he had spared her. The Paris of Mrs. Anthony Drew seemed so very remote—a Paris that had glittered with Tony at her side.

But in Paule left her no time to mourn for lost love and forlorn delight. Tactfully, he swung her imagination forward, planning all that she might yet do and be. They dined together that night, talking quietly as old friends, veering away from dangerous subjects.

The next afternoon she had ten with him in his great house in the Avenue Foch, high above old roof-tops. Then only he escaped emotional that which he her heart she had guessed. With, Mrs. Parks and Tony and Lorna had dashed off on frequent motoring trips, returning now and then to Paris for a night's carousing. So it had been chance indeed that Mr. Henri had been able to make his contact with Tony.

Le Paule did not look at Jane as she sat on the wide gray couch, her yellow curls clipped to her head, her lashes black against her smooth, fair skin.

"Of what use to be unhappy?" he said mildly.

"But you!" Jane stared out of wide windows at the shrouded grey of the Seine. "You—and Lorna!"

Le Paule stepped nearer, clicking his fingers. "Nothing to me."

Jane got up in a slender relief. She could not keep still these days. "Don't let's talk of it any more." She tried to hide the stabbing hurt ever fresh, when she thought of Tony and Lorna. "Have you been doing? Portraits? Making love to women?" There was a fervent lightness to her voice that drew la Paule's pale, coldly compelling eyes around to her.

"Yes," he said. "Women—women who wish to be so beautifully painted and make love to. They learn me." For a moment he paused to forget Jane. His thin, charming face looked tantalizing, aided, and his lips twisted as if surfeited with insincere amatory. "Did I not confess to you in New York that I have not always been celibate? I am sorry to be so honorable? I can swear to you that since then it has been otherwise. There is only one picture I wish to do now."

He took her by the hand and led her to a corner of the studio, backed to the white wall a large canvas. He turned it around. "You recognize?" For the blond light flickered in his eyes. "You cannot accuse me now of wishing to sell your secret to your husband. You will pose for the never-finished head?"

"Yes," Jane said gravely. "I'll pose for the girl I was, Henri. I've changed. Look and tell me—"

They both stared at the poised, eager figure of the girl on the canvas. A slender girl in black against towers of stone, looking up and longing for all the magic she saw in the city of towers.

"You are beautiful, more beautiful now," he said gently after a while. "But—and he sighed, "this moment of—shall we call it dream?—has past. You are right. It must be another picture I shall paint of you." He was very close to her tall, young body now. There were thin, running flames from his eyes and his arms to his fingers. "You are and in your heart but I shall make you forget," he murmured. "It is not as with the other women. I have waited to love you—"

CHAPTER XXIII.

Days of Paris in September.

The arts, Jane took her place as the Comte la Paule's latest love. She wondered sometimes what these sophisticated people must say if they knew the true state of her relations to this man whose Mephistophelian charm did actually attract her and who was now her only friend. But it was not enough that he cared very greatly.

Hunger and hope in Paule's tight blue eyes these days. Almost ragged ambitions stirred again, inevitably he repolished his rusted armor. Once more he looked at the bedraggled plume of his helmet. But in the slim elegance of his body there lingered ancient knightly instincts, and when he lifted Jane's hang to his lips, he made her his Lady.

"I will paint no more portraits of women who ask me to pay in the gesture of love as their bondsmen pay in checks for their vanity," he said with a little grimace. "I will paint only you, sweet friend, and that which you inspire. If I cannot be a great artist ..."

"You can, Henri."

At that moment, Jane came very near to caring. She stood in the tiny living-room of her apartment, which she had made beautiful with books and flowers. Her lips were redder and darker in their winged line, and the hyacinth blue of her eyes wearier between the black silk of lashes. But the gold of her light, clustered curls kept the misty brightness of her 19 years, and her white skin held its bloom through hours.

"Let's forget the past, Henri," she went on. "Forget our scars—our love—what once we were. Oh, my dear, you can be a fine artist."

"The past?" la Paule said firmly from the armchair where he sat by the window. His narrow blond head edged out against a cluster of yellow chrysanthemums. He listened to the grave bells of Saint Germain swinging over historical stones. "We have a saying in French," he went on, "tout passe, tout casse, tout se remplace. That means everything passes, everything breaks, and everything can be replaced. Is it so with New York—a fashionable portrait painter—I may marry you when I get my divorce."

He sprang up and around, suddenly delirious to youth. "Can it be so, ma chere—my dear, oh, my very dear?"

With this promise to someone she felt needed her, a burden seemed lifted from Jane's spirit. Yet, as it had been with the Princess Tcheirez was opening one of her small, exclusive shops in Rome.

Must she then spend the rest of her life, divorced and adrift, at mercy of winds, perhaps to become the end like Nalia Theriere, who could make a gutter out of the Ritz and a Ritz out of the gutter, Jane glanced down at la Paule's blond head. So much that was weak about this man, yet so much that could earth be fine, fierce maternal yearning came into her.

"Henri, if you'll really work, and never again be what you were in New York—a fashionable portrait painter—I may marry you when I get my divorce."

face from Tony's world would pass on with no faintest smile or nod. The cut direct.

Then, one morning on the Place Vendome, outside the Ritz, she came face to face with Elsie Porter, slimmer and more willowy than ever.

Mrs. Forrest hesitated, and made one of her bird-like dashes forward. "I can't help it, you're always ... Alice-in-Wonderland to me," she said in her high voice. "Normal, mean saying. Its most dreadful things, of course, but none of us know quite what happened after Bertie's suicide. By the way, I hang Tony was awfully decent about it—covering the whole thing up." Her near-sighted gaze peered at Jane. "But you, my dear? I mean all these rumors about you and Nalia Theirs in Biarritz. And everyone says you're la Paule's mistress. Really ..."

TARZAN THE MAGNIFICENT

(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

As he faced the angry man, Tarzan said calmly: "Remember what I did to the panther!" Picturing the ape-man's remarkable victory over the ferocious beast, the Englishman shrank back, though he was armed with knife and club, while the Jungle Lord was unarmed.

"Now give me the knife, I may need it," Tarzan commanded. Accustomed for years to obey the voice of authority, Lord gave up the blade. Tarzan tied two cords around the engraved emerald and fastened it to his loincloth. Then he strode to the window.

The Englishman watched him sullenly. He knew Tarzan's prowess as a fighter; and he was helpless to prevent him from taking the emerald, which he craved for his own. Now the ape-man descended the wall to the courtyard, and soon disappeared in the shadows.

Lord opened the door leading to the throne hall, then hastened at a run to the guard room. He'd get even with that wily marauder. If he couldn't have the big emerald for himself, at least the stranger wouldn't get away with it. He had a plan to block Tarzan's flight!

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Sept. 15.—(CP)—The rise in the stock market was carried further in today's session. Gains were trimmed moderately when profit-taking made its appearance in the last half hour. Losses sustained in the first hour were not entirely recovered by the Industrial section but net changes were on the upside in the golds, Base Metals and the Junior Oil Group. Trading was more active in the afternoon although not on the first hour decline.

Sentiment of all groups responded to the morning weakness on the New York Board, Nickel, Nickel Preferred, some of the Steels and Papers dropping a point or more while domestic listings held their own. The slump was short-lived and in the second hour the whole list was in a firming trend. Brazilian's set-back was cut to about a half point and some of the Utilities, including Bell Telephone, B.C. Power, Canada Steamships, Power Corporation, Power closed with gains. Nickel closed down 1 1-4 and Noranda had a minor gain.

Golds were irregularly higher at the close. Dollar A. Weston, Canners A and Consolidated Bakeries added fractions. Implements recorded gains. Banks were higher and in the Steel Group the close was up for the Canadian Car and Foundry issues, Canada Wire A, Dominion Foundry, Steel of Canada, United Steel and Dominion Bridge.

Base Metals ruling higher included Falconbridge, Sudbury Basin, Ventures and Aluminum and in the Silvers Eldorado and Mining Corporation improved.

Among the Golds Little Long Lac held about 45 cents of a 60-cent advance and final sales showed Macassa, O'Brien, Pickle Crow, Teck Hughes, Bralorne, Read-Authier and Wayside holding gains of 15 to 35 cents.

NEW YORK STOCKS

New York, Sept. 15 (AP)— The stock market recovered from an early sinking spell today and closed up two or more points, practically to a point or so.

Advances were well scattered through the list with specialties favored. Motors and steels were dragged.

Brokers reported short covering and said the market owed some of its energy to reaffirmation by observers here and there of hopes for fall gains in business. Transfers were about 1,300,000 shares.

MARKET COMMENT

In the past, market prognostications have never been at a loss to explain the action of the securities, and right or wrong, have always come out with a plausible backing for their opinions. This, however, does not hold in the present instance as although the rise of the scale was given as a principal reason for unloading, it is hard to reconcile the fact that the principal stock exchanges in New York held comparatively steady, precludes the war reason as a factor.

The majority of New York statistical reports showed a favorable record advising the acquisition of the better equities on all sharp declines, but do not know why the sudden avalanche of selling should develop. In our opinion, it has been more a matter of technical conditions rather than real conditions, the decline gaining momentum with each break.

Irrespective of whether the market is going lower or not, many bargains are today available and investors and traders are being presented with the most attractive bargains in the last four years.

One indication that we are not in a bear market is that the market, after each of the last three sharp breaks, rallied the next morning. Accumulation of buying orders overnight no doubt has brought this about which indicates that there is still a considerable amount of capital seeking investment on all favorable spots. Although no one can accurately forecast the immediate trend, the opinion in the Street seems to be that a month or two from today, the majority of issues will be selling appreciably above current levels.

To analyse the merits of individual issues at the present time is useless for the reason that the market is acting to the law of supply and demand entirely. Those who have been caught short-impinged and have been sold out, did not have the privilege of considering whether their stocks were selling at very low levels. Their securities were sold "at the market."

London Has Been a Substantial Buyer of Stocks in Local Market

From an authoritative source it is learned by Financial Service that London has been buying Canadian stocks in a substantial way for several days. The issues that are favoured over there are— International Nickel, Brazilian Traction, Asbestos, Price Bros., Noranda and Consolidated Paper.

Cash Can Now Be Put To Use To Good Advantage

We think a person buying stocks at this time is making a more intelligent commitment than has been possible for a long while. We would say that this view applies to longer and longer term speculators alike.

ALICE ALDEN

It looks like another banner year for furs. Waiting for autumn is a handsome stole of silky blue fox, with a pointed tail effect and stitched end. Nice worn across the shoulders or twisted carelessly round the throat.

It doesn't matter if cool winds blow in Autumn, we must have something to go with the light summer shown in a handsome beret of black velvet. The brim is cut on the centre cut out. A jewelled clip holds the model to one side.

Plenty of time and thought when it comes to dinner dress should result in a "model that can be worn right through the season. Such a frock is a number in black silk jersey with round neck and short, plain sleeves. A girdle of gold lamé lends emphasis to the full, sweeping skirt.

DR. T. S. PHILP TENDERED DINNER; CANE PRESENTED

Picton Physician Honored by Medical Society Last Evening

ADDRESS BY DR. AUSTIN

Completing fifty-two years in the medical profession, Dr. T. S. Philp, veteran Picton practitioner, was last night tendered a Golden Jubilee banquet by members of the Prince Edward and Hastings Medical Association in the clubrooms of the Prince Edward Yacht Club, thereby members and guests were entertained.

Dr. Morley Currie, in a descriptive speech prior to the presentation to the guest of honor of a gold-headed cane reviewing the life of Dr. Philp over his fifty-two years of service, "A pioneer in surgery," was the theme of Dr. Philp's career, witnessed the remarkable strides made in medical and surgical science, from the time doctors made their own dressings and sterilized their own kitchen stove to the present time up-to-date hospital equipment. Many letters and telegrams were received from members of the profession from different parts of the country, regretting their inability to be present.

A beautiful gold-headed cane, suitably inscribed and symbolic of the early days of the profession was formally presented to Dr. Philp by Dr. Currie representing the members of the Hastings and Prince Edward Medical Association.

Dr. W. J. Austin, professor of Surgery at Queen's University, in a splendid address told the history and effects of the "Black Death" in the ancient days," the speaker stated, "just three states were allowed to carry this emblem, the reigning monarch, the heir-apparent and members of the medical profession. In the large head of the "Black Death" physicians carried their supply of herbs and other medicines which were used in those days."

An address of welcome was tendered the guest of honor read by Mayor Manley Scott of Picton. Dr. Philp's reply and Auld Lang Syne added to the evening's entertainment. Dr. J. J. Robertson, Belleville, president of the Association presided in his usual entertaining manner.

ulcers. It was also used successfully in the treatment of anemia.

Stimulates Blood Cells.

Now it has been found, the New York specialists said, that the dye temporarily stimulates the cells of some of the blood cells which fight disease, and that it also activates the mechanisms of the spleen, lymph glands and bone marrow.

In a series of experiments on mice, they transplanted a form of cancer which usually is rapidly fatal to a number of laboratories. When it was planted under the skin injections of Congo Red caused it to regress 50 per cent in size. However when it was transplanted into the abdominal cavity of the dye caused the cancer to be destroyed in 22 per cent of the animals infected. In the remainder the size of the cancer was reduced 50 per cent.

Going still further, Dr. Arons and Dr. Sokoloff re-infected the animals which had absorbed the cancerous growths and found that most of them had developed a complete immunity to them.

JEWS OBSERVE YOM KIPPUR

Most Sacred Day of Jewish Calendar is Spent in Fasting And Prayer

Jews in this community join their co-religionists all over the world in observing Yom Kippur, "The Day of Atonement", today. Known as the "Sabbath of Sabbaths" Yom Kippur is the most sacred day of the Jewish religious calendar and is observed with fasting, prayer, and repentance.

The service this year is lasting and will conclude the Ten Days of Penitence which began last week, with the second day of the Jewish New Year. Pious Jews will spend the entire day in the synagogue neither eating, nor drinking, but devoting it entirely to meditation and prayer.

The Day of Atonement is distinguished from most other holidays in that it is associated with no historical event. The day is purely an attempt at self-regeneration and atonement with God. Although its roots reach far back into primitive times and may have had their origin in an ancient equinoctial festival, the day received its present character in the Bible period.

Before the beginning of the common era, when the Temple in Jerusalem still stood, the high priest offered on the solemn occasion sacrifices of animal sacrifice, the common form of worship in the ancient world. Since the year 70 however, the central items of the service has been penitence, prayer and righteous action.

Remnants of the temple ritual are still found in the present-day worship for Yom Kippur. The beautiful concluding service for that day is known as "Neilah", "the closing of the gates." This custom doubtedly refers to the closing of the Temple gates although it has now taken on the added symbolical meaning of the closing of the gate of tears and supplication and the opening of the gate of God's mercy. In this is revealed the all-embracing message of the day: that God's forgiveness and blessing are bestowed on all who manifest a sincere desire to lead a good life.

Garage Owner, Municipality At Odds Over Bear, Monkeys

Richelieu, Quebec, Claims Animals Frighten Villagers

CASE TO COURT

Richelieu, Que., Sept. 15.—(CP)—Municipality of Richelieu and Leonide Gingras were at odds today over two monkeys and a good sized black bear.

For several years the animals were an attraction at a garage and refreshment stand owned by Gingras, but the municipality decided last year they should go and in June adopted a by-law prohibiting the keeping of live "wild animals" in municipality limits.

Yesterday suit was started in Superior Court by Gingras asking the by-law be annulled, on grounds it was ultra vires. Gingras claims the animals amuse the public and give the municipality a certain amount of publicity.

The municipality contends the by-law is for the public good and many citizens of the village on the south shore of the Richelieu River, a short distance from Montreal, were frightened at the idea that some persons have been slightly injured by them.

when he was eight years old and was marked by the starting of a riot at St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary, near Montreal, in 1932 and the alleged attack on McCormick in 1936.

"His life is nothing but a series of offence against society," suggested W. M. Nickle, K.C., defence counsel, Sullivan agreed.

"Dr. Crosley not demand 'pills, pills, pills and more pills' in the spring of 1935?" the defence lawyer asked.

Calls For Medicine

"Well, he called for medicine," Sullivan replied.

"Medicine, medicine and more medicine?"

"Dr. Crosley not demand 'pills, pills, pills and more pills' in the spring of 1935?" the defence lawyer asked.

Re-examined by the crown, the deputy warden and Crosley was not the only prisoner who had broken up his cell.

Frank Lee, instructor in the mail-bag department, said he believed he had captured Crosley's confidence. He had asked the convict in June, 1935, if he had a knife and Crosley produced one.

Says Knife Produced

Doyle identified a knife used in the shoe department as the instrument which came to the one alleged by the crown to have been used in the stabbing of Warden Jelinick. Only difference was the death knife was ground down to a sharp point.

"You admit there are knives in your department ground to a point?" asked defence counsel.

"Yes." Doyle added he didn't know if such knives were also used in the shoe department.

W. A. Blucher Testifies at Trial of Negro For Murder

Kingston, Ont., Sept. 15—(CP)—A convict testified today at the second murder trial of Clarence Wesley, squat Negro "lifer" that he saw Crosley plunge a knife towards the heart of Guard John McCormick in the special dining room of Kingston Penitentiary July 11, 1936.

It is for the murder of McCormick that Crosley is standing trial. His first trial ended in a jury disagreement.

W. A. Blucher, a convict, first witness for the crown on the second day of the new trial, said he was in the care of the prison physician on the day of the stabbing. Blucher said he was seated in the waiting room when he heard Crosley call for a medical officer from McCormick's upraised hand and plunged a knife toward the guard's breast.

Leg-and-Gall Knife Noticed

Under cross-examination, Blucher said he observed a "leg-aided gall" knife in Crosley's hand when he saw the stabbing. He had not known that this knife had been supplied from one of Crosley's feet.

Deputy Warden George Sullivan explained how convicts manufactured mail bags for the Canadian Postal Department. He denied Crosley was free to wander about the shoe shop alone. The Negro was a runner in the mail-bag department and had permission to go from there to the shoe shop for water for the Department. But he had to stay in view of the south dome officers.

In his capacity as disciplinary officer, Deputy Warden said he placed Crosley in segregation prior to July 11, 1936, for "creating trouble" in his cell. When Crosley was asked the reason for the disturbance, he told Sullivan: "Twomey refused to give me medicine."

Crosley called Nuisance

Sullivan described Crosley as a "nuisance" to prison authorities. After demonstrating in his cell in June 1935, the Negro was fed on porridge, potatoes and bread and water.

"Pirate" submarines have already received orders to return to their home bases, it was announced. "The impression here grows that the menace of piracy has been brought to an end," said the Manchester Guardian.

Fascists Reiterate Demand.

Rome, Sept. 15 (CP) — Fascist newspapers today reiterated the demand, made in a note delivered to the British and French governments last night, that the Italian fleet be granted parity with the naval forces of Great Britain and France in the anti-pirate patrol of the Mediterranean.

"Italy should have parity with all powers in all zones of the Mediterranean." Popolo d'Italia said. "Rome's response in this matter can be awaited calmly."

The Manchester Guardian made pronouncements on the double concerning the effectiveness of possible Italian participation.

"Apart from any revival of piracy," the paper said, "it would surely be in the interests of the Italy if pirates were successful in her zone. It would be a convincing proof that either her fleet is incapable of dealing with the submarine menace, or she is in league with the pirates."

"Study the past and you will see that the Congresses and the councils were always arguing irrelevant and unimportant issues while the real revolution was going on quietly in the laboratory."

Jack Deacon Sings Five Numbers, Leo Riggs Accompanies

The splendid voice of Jack Deacon, and the piano artistry of Leo Riggs delighted members of the Kiwanis Club yesterday at the regular luncheon held in the Queens Hotel. The program which was a distinct departure from the usual Kiwanian procedure of guest speaker formed a musical dessert to a highly enjoyable luncheon which was greatly enjoyed by the large number of members present.

Kiwanian Cliff Reeves who presided in the absence of President Eddie Logan proved that he is no stranger to the presidential chair. An enjoyable feature of the meeting was the description of the formation of the first Kiwanis Club in Belleville in 1922 and of the activities which featured the initial year of the organization. Kiwanian E. D. Pinkie described in humorous vein how members took unto themselves paint and paint brushes and decorated the hydrants of the city. Members smiled when the feat of Dr. Cronk in dipping hydrant chains in pots of paint to speed up matters and inadvertently the bars of a kiosk were used for the winning "paint" name was described to them. The Kiwanis Follies of that year were verbally revived as was the $400 which comprised the profits resulting from the first public venture of the year organization.

Introduced by Leo Riggs, Mr. Deacon sang five numbers for his audience of record hundreds and applause at the end of each number. His fine voice was put to test in "The Little Streams of Dunn"; "Sylvia"; "Water Boy"; "Loch Lomond" and "Danny Boy and You." The splendid mastery of Leo Riggs of his favorite instrument was shown in an outstanding rendition of Bartlett's "Grand Polka."

Announcement was made that the next meeting of the club would take place at six-thirty next Tuesday evening and would take the form of a complimentary banquet and presentation of prizes to members of the Kiwanis Junior baseball team who made such a creditable showing in the recent playdowns.

Appreciation of the club to Messrs. Deacon and Riggs was voiced by Kiwanian Harold Seldon and conveyed to the artists by acting President Marager. .

"MISS AMERICA" TUENS BACK ON GLAMOR

Publicity men, promoters, photographers and booking agents were thrown into a turmoil at Atlantic City, when Miss Bette Cooper (above), "Miss America of 1937," packed her bag and went back to her home town of Hackettstown, N. J. Miss Cooper refused a five-day contract to appear on Atlantic City's steel pier; an aeroplane trip to Hollywood; a six-weeks vaudeville contract and a $1,000 Persian lamb coat. It was the first time a beauty winner had walked out on the promoters. Miss Cooper, who is 21 years of age, claimed she was going to bed until she got rid of a slight cold and was then going back to school.

"The Marriage Bunk"

By GERTRUDE SCHALK
McClure Newspaper Syndicate
WNU Service.

"Take it from me, kid, it ain't no cinch. This marriage business is all to the bunk."

"Yeh, that's what I tol' Anna; but she's got this love stuff in her head and no amount of talking will get it out."

"Too bad; she's a nice kid."

"Yeh, she ain't known him long enough, either. I never seen him yet."

Strangely enough, the whole storeful of Mailhew's employees took a sort of sisterly interest in one another's affairs, and vouchsafed information and instruction on any subject whatsoever. They took double interest in Anna Quinlan's romance, because of the fact that Anna had never before been known to bother with the stronger sex. Now this mysterious "Tommie" met her every night.

"Listen, girls," Rosie, head of the Ladies' Underwear, attracted the attention of her co-workers as they flung their coats and hats on, preparatory to their homeward departure.

"We all know what marriage is; most of us have been hitched twice and all of us have been stung once."

"I'll say stung is right."

"I'll fix everything. You girls can do the heavy looking on. Tonight I'll take Anna to the movies."

That night at 8.30 many shadowy figures could be seen scattering in the same direction, their destination known to slightly dilapidated dwelling on the outskirts of the town. At nine o'clock Rosie and Anna were at the—the dim street.

"Is it much farther, Rosie?"

"Here we are now, Anna. It sure was nice of you to come so far with me. I kind of hate to have you see poor Alice; she's been having such a hard time since she joined her I'd come to see her and I haled to come alone.

They entered the dim hall. An odor of cabbage was there, mingled with the smell of fried onions. Rosie led the way to the rear of the hall and knocked on a door.

"Come in." A weary voice flutered faintly on the heat-laden air.

The door opened. More smelly soap-suds and steam enveloped them.

A little, thin, wispy woman came towards them, her pale hair-straggling across the thin face.

"This is my friend Alice." Rosie performed the introduction hurriedly. Alice bowed; Anna bowed. An awkward silence fell on the room. Rosie laughed nervously.

"I just—"

A loud banging interrupted her. Alice started nervously.

"My husband."

A man's angered voice rose noisily from somewhere upstairs.

"Where are you, you lazy, good-for-nothing?"

Rosie shrank back and pulled Anna with her. Alice began to weep quietly. The loud voice came nearer.

"Didn't you hear me? I said where's my new shirt? I want it now."

Rosie whispered to Anna: "He's this way all the time. Always going out and leaving poor Alice with the kids."

Anna said nothing. Her eyes glistened; she gazed eagerly at the door. The voice was very near. Rosie pulled her close into the wall just as the door swung open and a tall man stepped into the room. His hair was tousled, his shirt was among the missing, his face being taken by one of those rough and ready woolen affairs with cords at both sides running through it. Suspenders hung incgloriously from kahki trousers and —horrors! he was in his stocking feet.

"Where's my shirt?" he bellowed, and turned to face Anna. His mouth fell open.

"Tom!"

"Anna!"

"You . . . oh . . ." and Anna went off into gales of hysterical laughter. Rosie blinked; her mind was numb.

"Ha!" Tom turned angrily to Rosie. "What's the big idea making me make a fool of myself before my girl?"

Rosie found her tongue

"How did I know she was your girl? You never said you had one."

"A nice fix you got me in. Helping you save a poor nice girl from a bad egg! Go 'tis the bag cri. am I?"

"Aw, Anna didn't tell us who you was. How did I know you was who you was? Go drop in the sink!"

Anna, rather wan from laughing, stepped between them.

"Whoa, there. If there's any fussing to be done, I ought to be the one to do it. Don't you think so? It was my business you were butting into. Of course, I know you meant it for my good, but I think you for the trouble, but I guess I can manage better than 'poor Alice'."

Later, as Anna and Tom walked slowly homeward, they laughed again and again over the affair. Then a serious thought struck Anna. She stopped short in the street and faced Tom.

"Listen, Tommie would you ever about at me like that when you wanted a shirt?"

"Would you ever let yourself and your home get the way 'poor Alice' was?"

BELIEF GENERAL PIRACY MENACE IS ENDED

Mediterranean Patrol Proceeds Without Italy, But Door Remains Open

British Assure Italy Any Proposals Will be Fairly Considered

DELAY DANGEROUS

British Attitude is That Nyon Scheme Must Go Ahead

By GEORGE HAMILTON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Sept. 16.—(CP Cable)—The piracy patrol of the Mediterranean has gone ahead without Italy. If Premier Mussolini wishes to join in the door is open. But the next step lies with Rome.

That briefly sums up the British attitude towards Italian participation. In her reply the invitation to join the scheme, it is pointed out, Italy does not make any formal request for parity. She observes she is not granted parity, but makes no proposals.

Welcome Participation

If Italy has proposals to make, it is observed, she can be sure that they will receive most careful consideration. Italian participation will be welcomed.

But ridding the middle sea of submarine pirates is too urgent to brook delay. The Nyon scheme must go ahead.

Working in closest collaboration are the British and French fleets which are operating in all Mediterranean waters except the seas around Italy.

No doubt is felt in authoritative circles that the pirate menace is ended. If the seaways are again made safe for peaceful traffic, although no pirate submarine is actually caught, the purpose of the Nyon agreement will have been accomplished.

"Tied Digest a Pin"

"By her policy in relation to the Spanish civil war," says Lord Beaverbrook's Evening Standard, "Italy digested a pin.

"Now she has fallen into it. You cannot be partisan today. Great Britain and France have replied to Italian policy by entering into partnership. By that partnership they prevent piracy they are working together in closest concert. They control the Mediterranean.

"Italy has suffered a humiliating diplomatic reverse. She has been compelled to ask Great Britain and France to admit her to the anti-piracy patrol. She realizes that the policy she adopted in contravention would deprive her of any possibility of profit from her Spanish adventure.

Political Outcome

"Whether Italy is admitted to the patrol or not, the understanding between Rome and Great Britain has now taken such concrete shape that Italy's part to establish herself in the Mediterranean is very likely doomed in any case."

Rome, Sept. 16.—(AP)—Italy walked in silence today for Great Britain and France to make the first move to win Italian collaboration in the Mediterranean anti-piracy patrol.

The Italian attitude as disclosed by various reliable sources was that Premier Mussolini had stated his aspirations and desires are similar to ours and it takes no keen observer to find out that what aim is—it may be blindly, it may be unconsciously—but it is nevertheless the aim of society which will be unlike the present one and will do away with the evils of present day society.

He said that in his view no one who did not work with his hands or brains was entitled to consideration in sharing the abundance of nature.

"It is only by your movement and our movement and the movement in North America and other parts of the world having the vision of a better order of society that we have any chance for the working classes that we shall achieve public ownership and control of industry," he said.

Chief's Eye Gashed Badly by Pop Bottle

Brampton, Ont., Sept. 16 (CP)—Two men, who refused to give their names, were lodged in jail here today after Chief Constable Andrew Herkes, in which the constable suffered a badly gashed eye when struck by a pop bottle.

The men were found in a pool room by Constable Samuel Armstrong and the other, When Armstrong left Herkes alone with the men while he searched for others, police said a bottle was handcrafted pair threw a pop bottle and both closed with the police.

They wrestled for a few minutes until Provincial Officer John Gregory reached the scene and subdued the pair. Ira Hughey, owner of the pool room, said the loss has $2,000 worth of goods ready for Thanksgiving when, explained, Brampton is 25 miles north of Toronto.

Why the Weather?

By MAJOR A. H. THIESSEN
Science Service Meteorologist

Katabatic winds! This Greek-sounding word does not mean that the wind is terrific — although there are winds may be pretty bad. It refers to winds which are caused by air being cooled by radiation or other means. Then the air is comparatively very heavy and flows down the lower levels simply by gravity. It might just as well be called a high wind or gravity wind. Winds of this kind are found along the Greenland coast, having come down from the high glaciers over the interior, where they attain violent velocities. The winds that blow up a valley or mountain side are of a gentler nature and have a softer name: Anabatic.

THE WEATHER

Hog Callers, Shoe Pitchers Make Chicago Look Like Farm

City Herds Cows And Pigs In Its Front Yard

MILKING CONTESTS

Chicago, Sept. 16 (AP)—You won't have to smile, stranger, if you call Chicago a big thick town today.

For the windy city herded cows and pigs into its front yard, moved the years to Soldiers Field for the first United States Farm Olympiad and invited the strongest and loudest folks in the corn belt to compete.

The barn yard athletes, come Friday, will have a chance to win a measure of fame and a modicum of fortune in the hugo stadium hallowed in the memories of epic invasions including Tunney and Dempsey, Notre Dame and Southern California and the Army and the Navy.

The men will have their choice of three events—hog calling, horseshoe pitching and post driving.

On the dietaf side are milking, husband calling and rolling pin throwing contest.

Arrayed against the visiting farmers will be a team of Chicagoans selected in preliminary trials,

AIRMEN SINK JAP CRUISER, CHINESE CLAIM

Story of Successful Chinese Bombing is Unconfirmed

3 BOMBS STRIKE

Chinese Declare Airmen Put to Flight Destroyers

Hong Kong, Sept. 16 (AP)—Claim a Japanese cruiser had been sunk by Chinese airbombs off the South coast of China was made today to Chinese re...ts from Canton—unconfirmed from other sources—of two successful air attacks on Japanese naval units.

Three Chinese bombers and two pursuit planes, the reports said, attacked a Japanese cruiser, three destroyers and a torpedo boat off the port of Swatow.

"Three large bombs struck the cruiser, which was left in uncontrollable condition," the reports said.

A similar raid put to flight a group of Japanese destroyers along the coast between Swatow and Hong Kong, Chinese said.

Chinese at Canton asserted the Japanese have lost one cruiser, two destroyers and seven planes in south China while "there were no Chinese losses".

Ottawa, Sept. 16 (CP)—The goal of a better order of society through the trade union movement was held out today to the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada by a fraternal delegate representing the British Trade Union Congress.

Health Service in Ontario Praised by Dr. J. A. Faulkner

Tells Meeting in Belleville of Progress Under Liberal Rule

MINIMUM WAGE

"When politics get down in the gutter where the private business of man is exposed, then I am through with politics," declared the Hon. Dr. J. A. Faulkner, Ontario Minister of Health and Liberal candidate for the riding of West Hastings in the coming election to a large gathering of residents of Foster and Samson Wards at a rousing and good meeting in the South End Athletic Clubrooms last night. Dr. Faulkner was the speaker which he charged a whispering campaign had been inaugurated against him in this constituency.

"It is easy for scandalmongers who circulate stories along the coast between Swatow and Hong Kong," declared the Chinese.

Chinese at Canton asserted the Japanese have lost one cruiser, two destroyers and seven planes in south China while "there were no Chinese losses".

ACCUSED SOVIET BOATS OF PIRACY

Insurgent Regime to Inform Neutrality Committee

Paris, Sept. 16 (CP-Havas)—The Nationalist insurgent regime at Madrid, in a dispatch from Hendaye, on the Franco-Spanish frontier, today said the Spanish Insurgent regime held "irrefutable proofs" that at least three Soviet submarines had committed piratical acts in the Mediterranean and declared it would inform the London Non-Intervention Committee.

"The two submarines," the dispatch to Le Matin said, "which were operating in Spanish waters, and which carried 23 torpedoes, are said to have gone into the port of Alicante for refuge.

"A convoy accompanying them, reportedly under the command of Captain Yassiliff of the Soviet navy was declared to have left for Odessa to get new supplies of torpedoes.

Toronto Schools Opening Postponed

Toronto, Sept. 16 (CP)—Board of Health decided today to a fourth postponement of Toronto schools reopening, this time to Sept. 27, because of the prevailing infantile paralysis epidemic. Schools originally were scheduled to open Sept. 1.

PARALYSIS TAXES HOSPITAL STAFFS

1591 Patients in Ontario Since Early June Out-break

Toronto, Sept. 16—(CP)—Fifteen new cases of infantile paralysis were reported to Toronto health officials today, and Dr. Gordon Jackman, Medical Officer of Health, urged continued vigilance for symptoms of the disease.

Toronto's case list stood at 527, with 43 deaths. Only six new cases were reported yesterday.

Thirty-two officials today still faced a stern fight against infantile paralysis which continued to tax the efforts of hospital staffs throughout Ontario. Although the hoped colder weather would check the advance of the disease new cases appeared in a number of districts.

The province's case list recorded 1,591 patients since early June and yesterday the disease appeared in 23 theretofore immune. School fairs were cancelled and opening of schools postponed. Four persons suffering from the disease entered Hamilton General Hospital and five new patients were treated in Toronto where the total cases reached 313 since June 10.

An iron lung was rushed from Toronto to Hamilton to aid the victim who was in critical condition. Hamilton hospital also reported the Milton woman, placed in an iron lung two weeks ago, was still in serious condition.

School Fairs Cancelled

During the day authorities have cancelled seven school fair. Two St. Thomas children were quarantined yesterday and a 19-year-old youth from Tillsonburg was placed in the Thomas Isolation Hospital.

Total cases in Stratford reached 18 when a five-year-old girl was stricken. Thamesford and Tilbury East Township public schools were closed. In Northern Ontario, Long Lac School closed after Keith Taylor, 13, was rushed to Port Arthur with the disease.

Two new cases were Sudbury. The small mining settlement of Sturgeon Falls, 60 miles northwest of Winnipeg, contained six infantile paralysis victims. Mrs. Alfreda McGregor, wife of the Medical Health Officer, and her 18-months-old daughter were stricken in Dauphin. Throughout Manitoba 13 additional cases yesterday brought the total since early June to 148 with six deaths reported.

Galt, Ont., Sept. 16—(CP)—First case of infantile paralysis in Beverley Township was reported today by Dr. Seaton, Medical Officer of Health. The victim, Milton Redwood, 10, was taken ill at school Tuesday and died at his home here today. Later Dr. Easton, Hamilton, government consultant, was called and the case was pronounced a polio case. Paralysis so far has not developed.

Mussolini's Son Heads Movie Firm

Naples, Italy, Sept. 16 (AP)—Vittorio Mussolini, 20, his full face beaming, sailed today for New York and, eventually Hollywood, to find out what makes the movie business tick. With him was Hal Roach, his host in Rome and Italian motion picture company.

Vittorio's younger brother, Bruno, and many notables were on hand to see him off.

His friends told something about the new movie company which he heads.

Capitalization is $3,000,020 of which Roach is putting up $1,000,000. Vittorio and his friends are furnishing $800,000 and a Rome bank the rest.

10 IRISH YOUTHS BURN TO DEATH: HUT DESTROYED

Had Left Homes to Earn Few Shillings in Fields

OTHERS ESCAPE

One of Worst Fires in Scotland — Many Years

Kirkintilloch, Dumbartonshire, Scotland, Sept. 16—(CP Cable)—Ten youths from Ireland, who had to earn a few shillings during the potato harvesting season were burned to death today when fire destroyed the "bothy"——a rude hut for accommodating migratory workers who were sleeping.

Two men and 14 women of a party from Achill Sound on the west coast of Ireland, lived in the same building, escaped from one section by smashing windows.

One of Worst Fires

It was one of the worst fire disasters in the British Isles in many years. Not since the Glouna fire at Paisley in December, 1929, when 70 died when the dance hall was set on fire by a lighted cigarette at Tyldesley.

The dead: John, Thomas and Michael Kilbane, brothers; Gus Kilbane and Patrick Kilbane, brothers; Guy and Martin Kettaghin, brothers-in-law; Owen Kilbane (no relation to Kilbane brothers); Thomas Costigan and Patrick McGirr. The oldest was 22. Their average age was 16.

Three of the bodies were not ascertained. The fire spread rapidly and quickly enveloped the hut in flames.

ROAD PROGRAM CALLED POLITICS

Rowe Says Work Speeded up After Election Date Was Set

By CP Staff Writer

Sudbury, Ont., Sept. 16—(CP)—Campaigning in his most "vicious" form held away in Northern Ontario under the present Liberal government, Hon. Earl Rowe told motorists and pedestrians yesterday when he delivered his first address in the provincial campaign tour. He spoke at Sudbury, Espanola, Thessalon and Blind River.

Mr. Rowe who journeys to North Bay today, will speak at Kirkland Lake today, charged "the most vicious, flagrant political racket" he has ever got to show your heart that you have in the Ontario Road Association before you can get a road," he told the crowd at Keith Taylor, 13, was rushed to Port Arthur with the disease.

Dr. Platt certified Crosley was receiving fifteen grains of barbitone daily the early part of June, 1936, because his nervous restlessness was increasing daily. The doctor said he did not administer morphine or any other drug to Crosley under the Drugs and Narcotics Act.

Before he was committed Grant McCormick, Dr. Platt testified, Crosley was given two barbitone tablets (five grains per tablet) at 8.45 o'clock in the morning. He received two more grain tablets of sphedrine, for bronchial asthma, in the morning and seven half grain tablets in the evening.

New Disease Hits Farmers, Malady Resembles T. B.

Treatment Simple With Potassium Soda And Vaccine

RADIOLOGISTS TOLD

Chicago, Sept. 16 (AP) — A new form of lung disease resembling tuberculosis, which attacks only farmers, was reported today to the International Congress of Radiology.

Dr. Richard Fawcitt of Ulverston, England, said the ailment caused by breathing mold from hay or grain into the lungs, is similar to silicosis in the lungs of miners produced by breathing fine dust.

Apparently, he added, many farmers in Canada, the United States and other countries of the world have the disease but it has heretofore been diagnosed as tuberculosis or asthma. It is definitely an occupational disease, which appears in epidemics whenever mouldy hay or grain carrying the fungi of mold is handled.

Signs of the disease, which he urged all physicians in rural areas to look for, are difficult or labored breathing, progressive inability to do any work, coughing, slight fever, and evidence of tubercular signs even though no sign of the tuberculoid germ can be found.

Treatment of it is comparatively simple, he added, consisting of administration of potassium iodide and vaccines.

United States Invited By League to Discuss Appeal Against Japan

Sanctions Question is Automatically Put in Background

HEARING OF PROTEST

Committee Has Power to Recommend Credit Suspensions

By JOSEPH E. HARLEY
Geneva, Sept. 16 (AP) — The League of Nations Council put China's appeal against Japanese aggression in the hands of a revived advisory committee today and asked the United States to take part in its deliberations.

Quick dispatch of invitations to Washington and twenty-two other countries made certain that the United States must soon decide if she will co-operate with the committee, on which her representatives formerly served.

Sanctions in Background.

By its action the League also pushed into the background any question of sanctions against Japan—at least for a time. With China's appeal against Japanese aggression in the hands of a revived advisory committee today and asked the United States to take part in its deliberations.

Quick dispatch of invitations to Washington and twenty-two other countries made certain that the United States must soon decide if she will co-operate with the committee, on which her representatives formerly served.

Sanctions in Background.

By its action the League also pushed into the background any question of sanctions against Japan—at least for a time. With China's appeal against Japanese aggression in the hands of a revived advisory committee today and asked the United States to take part in its deliberations.

The committee which will now hear the protest may ask both Japan and China to state their cases ... something Japan is not likely to do. She has made it plain she will ignore any League mediation whatsoever.

The committee members will be empowered to recommend to their respective governments such measures as they may deem credits to the aggressor and stoppage of arms shipments.

Night of Appeal Reserved.

Dr. Wellington Koo, the Chinese envoy, accepted the council's decision but reserved the right to appeal again to the council direct and to invoke Article XVII of the Covenant which could bring sanctions against Japan—if he feels it necessary.

If Article XVII were invoked, Japan, a League non-member, would be called upon to participate in the council and answer China's charges that she is an aggressor.

The advisory committee will meet shortly after the election of new members to the council, which is set for Monday.

In the meantime invitations will be dispatched to the twenty-three countries which made up the former committee, including the United States. They will be asked to participate in the new consultations.

Washington, 16 (AP)—State Department officials said they had received no communication from the League of Nations concerning possible United States membership in any advisory committee to consider the Sino-Japanese crisis.

DOCTOR WITNESS IN CROSLEY CASE

Tells of Giving Tablet to Crosley Which Made Him "Very Nervous"

Kingston, Ont., Sept. 16 (CP)—A former guard at Kingston penitentiary, John Lamb testified today at Chester Crosley's murder trial he heard the negro convict tell Guard N. Gray it was better he was not shot, but still block July 11, 1936, the day the Crown charges Crosley killed Guard John Lamb and Guard Cormick.

Lamb was testifying as a Crown witness in the third day of the 35-year-old life-term convict's trial. The jury disagreed at the first trial.

Says He Heard Crosley's Words.

The former guard told of going to the "dissociation" cells where Crosley was confined on July 11, 1936. He remained at his end of the corridor while guards Putman and Gray went to the negro's cell. He heard Crosley say he "had the other two in mind".

Gray testified yesterday Crosley told him: "You're lucky it wasn't you at the east block end this morning, but I had the other two in mind."

Lamb agreed with Defence Counsel W. M. Nickle three guards took Crosley his breakfast because his life was considered dangerous and violent. Putman said to quit quoting the statement on paper, Lamb testified.

"If you heard Crosley make a statement on the morning of July 13, then there was no necessity of taking you from telling the court," W. F. Nickle, defence counsel, asked Guard Putman, who followed Lamb to the stand.

"No," replied Putman, who denied hearing Crosley say anything on the morning of July 13, or that he told one of the other guards to "shut down a statement."

Dr. Garfield Platt, prison physician, said he became interested in Crosley because of the story of his past life, and the Social Welfare Association before you can get a road," he told the crowd at Keith friend of mine."

Dr. Platt testified Crosley was receiving fifteen grains of barbitone daily the early part of June, 1936, because his nervous restlessness was increasing daily. The doctor said he did not administer morphine or any other drug to Crosley under the Drugs and Narcotics Act.

WORMS FEED ON MAPLE TREE LEAVES

An unknown worm has attacked maple trees in the sugar bush of S. Makely at Cherry Valley, and is stripping the leaves from the trees. The worm eats the green part of the leaf, leaving only the skeleton. It apparently ignores all vegetation except the maple.

The damaged trees were first noticed by Mr. Arnold Plaist of Picton, who has a cottage nearby. He stated the worm is grown to about an inch in length and hatches under a scale a quarter inch in diameter. The cocoon is long and trumpet-shaped.

A number of the worms have been bottled and will be shipped to the local Dominion Entomological Laboratory for identification.

MANY HUNTING — LICENCES SOLD

The lure of the duck on the wing is still strong in the minds of local hunters, according to George Finch, local issuer of licenses. Over sixty permits have been issued within the past two weeks to the hunters of the district, with applications increasing daily." The white button supplied with each license this year, which is a new innovation, is finding favor with the hunters," Mr. Finch stated this morning. "It is large, being one and one-half inches in diameter, bears the hunter's license number and can be worn on either has or coat, it is easily discernible at some distance."

American tourists are still buying fishing licenses, Mr. Finch stated, although the number has decreased over that of the month previous.

Leader, Organist Are Appointed at Holloway St. Church

Holloway Street United Church has appointed to take charge of the musical services of the church, two well known members of Albert College staff. Mr. Gerald Anglin, B.A., has been named choir leader and Mr. Franklin Styles, A.T.C.M., late of London, will be the organist. Their duties begin immediately.

Plenty Insilage Fodder For Winter Feeding

Marking the dividing line between the beginning of one agricultural year and the end of another, farmers of the district are busy sowing fall wheat and harvesting what is reported to be one of the heaviest ensilage corn harvests in years. While recent windstorms have leveled fields in some parts, making the work of harvest difficult, silos of the district will be filled to capacity.

Exceptional height of the corn in most parts has attracted attention while the greenness of the leaf at this time of the year is exceptional. "We will have more than we can find room for," a farmer stated this morning, "but it will not come amiss. Many cattle who thrived on straw last winter and in some cases very little at that, will dine in comfort off chopped cornstalks for the whole of the season."

TRAIN HITS TRUCK AT WELLINGTON

Douglas McFaul, Hillier, Suffers Internal Injuries

Extricated from the wreckage of the truck he was driving after it had been struck by an eastbound freight train at Morden's Crossing in Wellington, Ontario, Douglas McFaul, twenty-year-old Hillier resident, was rushed to Prince Edward County Hospital shortly after eleven o'clock today, suffering from a severe fracture of the pelvis and internal injuries. An unidentified companion, riding in the cab of the truck, was slightly injured. The truck was completely destroyed.

Driving the vehicle, owned by Charles Tice, Wellington transport owner, McFaul approached the level crossing about one-half mile north of the village on the Belleville-Wellington highway. Eye-witnesses claim that McFaul's vision was obscured by the nearby buildings of the Edmonds Canning Factory, and could not see the approaching train until too late.

The freight operating between Picton and Trenton, was running at a slow rate of speed, it is stated, as it approached the crossing. It's believed that while it neared the dangerous spot, was drowned in the noise of the truck's motor, it is believed.

The force of impact hurled wreckage for a distance of twenty feet while McFaul was buried in debris of the cab.

Dr. R. M. Saries of Wellington was called and immediately ordered the injured youth to hospital after rendering first aid.

Tweed Resident Is Charged with Reckless Driving

Michael Meraw, Tweed, was taken into custody and detained at the police station last night, following a motor accident on O'Brien's bridge late yesterday afternoon. This morning, Merraw appeared before H. B. Wilson, local Justice of the Peace, charged with reckless driving, under Section 274, of the Highway Traffic Act.

Motorcycle Policeman Sam Ervine investigated the accident and found that a motor car driven by Merraw, had collided with the rear end of another automobile driven by J. Campbell, Front Road, on O'Brien's bridge, causing considerable damage to both vehicles.

Mr. Campbell was proceeding south on highway No. 37 and had slowed his vehicle down while passing over O'Brien's bridge, owing to a number of fishermen on either of the bridge. Merraw, who is reported to have been travelling in the wake of Mr. Campbell's car, failed to notice the slowing car in time to avoid a collision with the rear of Mr. Campbell's car. The rear fenders, bumper and body of Mr. Campbell's car were damaged, while the front fenders, headlights and bumper of Mr. Merraw's car suffered considerable damage also.

Merraw was permitted his liberty, after appearing before the Justice of the Peace today, upon bail, to appear in local police court on Friday.

FLIGHT LIEUT. DIES OF INJURIES

C. W. Morrison, Trenton, Succumbs to Injuries Received in Car Accident

As the result of internal injuries sustained during a motor accident last Friday, Flight Lieut. C. W. Morrison, R.C.A.F., Trenton, died at the Belleville General Hospital last evening.

An inquest, following the death of the late Flight Lieut. Morrison, opened at Smith's Funeral Home, Church Street, later last evening, before Chief Coroner Dr. A. J. Ketcheson. Flight Lieut. Riddell, a personal friend of the deceased man, established identification before the body could be released for burial at the home of the deceased man's parents at Mount Royal, (Montreal).

Dr. Stevens of the Royal Canadian Air Force base, was called and told of attention Mr. Morrison following an accident near Trenton, last Friday night. "Following first aid and a rapid examination of the injured man, he was immediately taken to the Belleville General Hospital for further observation. We knew he had a severely fractured left arm and possible chest injuries", testified Dr. Stevens.

Dr. G. H. Stobie, who attended the deceased upon his arrival at the Belleville hospital, stated the deceased was suffering from a badly fractured left arm and shock. "I reduced the fractured arm and gave him a thorough examination, but owing to his weakened condition we were unable to x-ray. Later it was discovered the deceased was suffering from paralyzed bowels and punctured kidney, from which cause he died", stated Dr. Stobie in evidence when questioned by Crown Attorney B. C. Denman K.C. The inquest was then adjourned until Thursday evening next.

The Coroner's jury, summoned by Sergeant Arthur Booth, consisted of Herbert Aldman, George Hammett, Allan Schryver, J. W. Barlow, John Henderson, J. C. McCarthy, Michael McLaughlin and Thos. Cushing.

ward with a request for such improvement has been forwarded to the City Council. I would like to know what pigeon-hole in the Council this petition occupies. The time has come for action, and if I am elected this question will be one of the first taken up."

Referring to the Minimum Wage Act for men, the Minister declared that, "We have been passing through a great industrial disturbance due to strikes, etc. But Belleville is the first place where representatives of the Industrial Labor Board met with unsettled labor. I ask you to ask your Mayor as a lawyer and a man born in Foster Ward what he has done to see the Minimum Wage Law introduced here."

Board Met Here

"The Labor and Industrial Board met in the Hotel Quinte here, and the manufacturers also met in a body. I presented to the Board some of the complaints of the laboring people of this city, with the result manufacturers in this city stated they would be glad to co-operate and would meet this week to see what would be a fair minimum wage for Belleville. I know that in the near future the minimum wage will likely be settled to the satisfaction of all concerned.

"Mr. Rowe has said that the Department of Health curtailed its expenses some $600,000. Is there anyone here who can name me one service cut off in Belleville? He talks about 'mushroom hotels'. I am glad to say that Foster Ward has a respectable hotel and not one of the 'mushroom type'."

Ontario had in 1934, a number of Medical Officers of Health who spent their time visiting at a cost of $40,000 with no benefit to the province, he claimed. "Today you have 37 S. clinic conducted by Government $10,000 per year. Since 1934 the Government has made grants to this phase of hospitalization, of $700,000, a great difference from that time. Grants to hospitals from 1910 to 1934 which was $630,000. We have just turned over to the Cornwall Hospital a cheque for $38,000, on completion of grant for a brand new sanatorium."

Sanatorium For District

"Tell your friends in Trenton and Belleville," declared Dr. Faulkner, "that no matter whether the constituency goes Liberal or Conservative, and while I cannot tell where it will be placed, that you will have a sanatorium in this district and that Mr. Hepburn will go dollar for dollar to assist in this cause for 'the County of Hastings.'

Touching on the C. I. O. the speaker said that the C. I. O. has Communists from Soviet Russia in its ranks. If the people of Canada are allowed to let themselves be drawn into the ranks of such an organization, it will not be long before we are operating under another flag.

"But the Tories will come along and open their arms to these agitators," said the Minister, "and allow them to bring their ruthless methods into our organizations. If such a thing happens, the American subsidiary plants operating in Belleville would close within three weeks. If you want to preserve Ontario for Ontarians, Canada for Canadians, then take a stand against such an organization and prove yourselves British subjects.

"Rowe plays with the truth regarding such matters, hoping to befuddle the susceptible into voting for his candidate."

The Ballot Way

"I have every confidence in your judgment," Dr. Faulkner concluded. "We settle our differences here by that most sacred thing in British law, the ballot. Don't think of this election in the light of party politics, but in the light of the best service to the people of Ontario."

Mr. W. A. Fraser, M.P., in a stirring address of defense of the Hepburn Government eulogized the present Minister of Health, "Dr. Faulkner is one of the few men who have profited in Ontario in the last twenty years," he said. "He has placed the welfare of the people, the alleviation of their sufferings above his political interests. But in the coming election his political place must be considered because Mr. Hepburn again requires Dr. Faulkner. He has filled his job and filled it well as a member but as a Minister with the most fearless Premier that ever graced the Parliament of Ontario."

In defence of the present administration the speaker pointed out that the "Liberals under Hepburn have balanced the budget, reduces administration the province has ever known. It has brought into Ontario each department in such a way that revenues have more than balanced the budget."

"Pay as You Go" System

"The Government has inaugurated a roadmaking system in such a way that you are paying as you go; every year expenditure for the past three and one half years has been charged against revenue; debt has been reduced; a pay as you go system has been installed and the budget has been balanced," declared Mr. Fraser.

Notwithstanding Mr. Rowe's statements, the government has kept its promises to install a sound business system. It has reduced taxation, absorbed the Mothers Allowance, installed one mill to municipalities and reduced automobile licenses all signs of the line. Hepburn has collected more taxes because he has done more business and more business has been brought about by the Liberal policies in Canada."

Hydro Issue

"Turning to the Hydro question, Mr. Fraser stated that "Mr. Hepburn met with his cabinet night after night and hour after hour in an effort to persuade the power barons to re-negotiate the contracts. Cancellation of the contracts was not repudiation but forced negotiations because Mr. Hepburn had the intestinal fortitude to tell them across the table that if they would not show the people of Ontario how to get power, then he would. He saved the people of Ontario six million dollars. He gave the farmer power and on three occasions got reduction for commercial lighting and industrial power because he rewrote the power contracts. Only in one instance did he have to succeed in rewriting contracts and that was in the Beauharnois. But you don't hear the power companies yapping, because they are satisfied. And in my humble opinion the Beauharnois people cannot write contracts with the government. In other words they have got the letters that they might have to rewrite them."

Backs Hepburn as C.I.O.

"I stand behind Mr. Hepburn one hundred per cent on his stand on the C.I.O. question," declared Mr. Fraser.

"He never questioned the right of labor to join the union of their choice, or the right of organized labor to deal with collective bargaining with employers. What he did object to, was the paid agitatory of the C.I.O. coming from the United States with the same view and stated purpose of applying the same procedure which wrecked many industrial projects in the U.S.A. No one questions the right of labor to work, but we do question the right of those who say labor won't work and who beats men up if they do. Any dispute between labor and industry can be settled by representatives of labor employing and government with the Industrial Board.

"I repeat," said the speaker, "I am behind Mr. Hepburn's stand against the C.I.O., one hundred per cent because I feel it is detrimental, unsound and injurious to the best of Canada. Do not be carried away by mere words. Our liberty here is one of the most precious things we have and we got it at a cost paid for by our forefathers. If you devastate it, we as citizens will suffer."

Leadership is Save

"Look at the war-torn countries of other continents when you say that world wars cannot happen. Spain, one of the most civilized cultured Christian countries in the world has been torn with strife for nineteen months and the end is not yet in sight. People in these countries have lost their right as individuals, their sav new all for the state. We can lose our liberty here if we do not have the right leadership. I state again, Hepburn's stand on the C.I.O. question is right.

"Do not be misled by the so-called new Conservative party," said Mr. Fraser, "it is just the same old gang with a false face. Rowe sat for five years with the Bennett Government which met disastrous defeat. He voted for the labor camps at twenty cents per day, and the disallied political taint who in parading through Ontario is the man who voted against the United States treaty in an effort to deprive the basic producers of a market."

The Gov't. And The Riding

"The Liberal Party, provincial and federal, has done more for the city of Belleville since 1936 than the Tories did from the time of Harry Corby to that of Ora Porter. There has been greater benefits both, individual and collective than the Tories ever gave you," concluded the speaker.

Ex-Mayor George Tice who acted as Chairman for the meeting stated that "election chances between Belleville and Maynooth, look better than they did in 1934. The government has done you more good than the Hepburn Government? All you have to do is drive over the Faulkner Highway and see the fine work that has done there."

"The speeches you will hear tonight," he said in introducing the speakers," are not inflated for the sake of publicity as were those you saw in your daily paper tonight, they will be facts. The hospital talk included in those speeches you read was nothing but balderdash and were all dug up within the last seven days. They are all wrong."

"There is no power on earth can stop the Hepburn government from being returned to power," Mr. Tice said.

"I am going to spike the rumors that are going around about me being the city on Saturday never to return. I am campaign manager for Dr. Faulkner in this riding and will remain here until Oct. 6th."

Vision of Foster Ward

"While on this subject," continued the speaker, "I have a vision that Foster Ward can be made one of the most attractive places in the city to live in if you had the co-operation of your Mayor and City Council. There is a grave municipal responsibility resting upon them.

"The health and happiness of the people of this ward should be important to the city Council as to any others, and I understand that until certain facilities are applied here, how can you hope for health and happiness."

Sewage Disposal

"We have exercised the most meticulous care in securing for you a high type of water for consumption. We have erected a fine filtration plant for you, but what has been done to take care of the sewage? Why should anyone be deprived of these facilities which should be in every house before one pays rent.

"I understand," said Dr. Faulkner, "that petition signed by three hundred people of this

W. H. MORTON, PUBLISHER

A NATION'S CREATOR

To few men has ever come the opportunity for such a creation as a nation as came to Dr. Thomas Masaryk of Czechoslovakia. About twenty years ago he saw approaching the realization of a dream for which he had fought—the creation of a nation of people. He will be remembered as one of the outstanding men of the century. But like all men, he found life too short. At his age of 87 and at the time of his death, Czechoslovakia had been a nation less than nineteen years. What its future will be generations hence, he like all others now living could not tell. His last hours may have been a solemn thought on the future of his country. Like great heroes he has not lived and could not live long enough, so brief is the longest span of human life, to know what its final destiny will be.

He was the son of a serf, the offspring of a Slovak father and Czech mother. It was he who taught his father to read and made it possible for him to become a farm bailiff. He earned his own way through school, by working in a blacksmith's shop and to the end he bore traces of that severe schooling. He was a tutor in the University of Vienna. His fortunate marriage to the woman who became his associate in all his endeavors for his people was one of the events in a notable career.

He had always wanted to unite the two peoples represented by his parents. He fought the cause of all the oppressed nationalities in Austria Hungary. He was leader of the Czechs when the Great War ended and he fought for the rights of his people to be free. Before this he had carried on an organization for the freedom of his people and won attention of the Allies. He assumed the big task of merging the five nationalities, Magyar, Czech, Slovene, Slovak and German. When his dream was realized he assumed a big task of unification of the racial groups with success. He formed the Little Entente and won recognition from those nations which were unfriendly. Two years ago he retired from the Presidency of the Czechoslovakian republic. His work remains as one of the greatest practical achievements in statesmanship in modern history.

Such a task fell to this man long past sixty years of age and the burden he bore lasted until age caused his retirement.

He was beloved by his people and in his dying hours crowds of country folk stood in silence outside the castle which a grateful nation had given him. In silent prayer they knelt as news came that he had passed.

So passes one who lived to build up a people out of the broken wreckage of the Austrian Empire, the one great who had come to be greater in his own achievement than any of the line of Austrian emperors. In a few years and at a crucial time he appeared on the world scene to forward the principles of democracy.

ITALY AND THE PATROL

Italy has complained of the position in to which the Nyon Conference has forced her with consequent loss of prestige with the limitation of the duties to be granted her in the fight of the powers against the piratical submarines in the Mediterranean.

One can see the point that a proud people may very well feel that their prestige has suffered. But one has only to remember grandiloquent speeches made in Italy in which the glories of the mighty Julius Caesar and others who held sway in classical Rome were repeated to be emulated. Much of the western world has lacked the sense of appreciation the sort of glory which Italian arms won in Ethiopia. Then again today Italy no doubt does not relish the thought and the fact that here is the Mediterranean Sea, the great Italian lake as some have had the imagination to call it, filled with British and French ships to the number of capital ships, aircraft with airplanes, patrolling the sea with which Italian pride has been associated, and keeping down piracy against the merchant marine, while far at the east to the south of Russia the Black Sea is patrolled by ships of the Soviet Russians. There is besides the retaliature that within close range of the Mediterranean is the mighty power of the navies and air fleets of nine powers who have signed the death warrant of pirate submarines. Italy has complained that she is allowed, if she will, to patrol only the Tyrrhenian Sea, which is not representative of Italy's importance and so she claims a right to patrol that portion of the Mediterranean between Sicily and Libya in Africa. In the days of the great Julius and the emperors there were no such powerful navies in the Mediterranean except in the time of Hannibal and the Carthaginians who challenged Roman supremacy of the western world and fortunately lost to the energetic Roman armies and statesmen.

If the nations wanted to give Italy a gentle reprimand it could not have been more gently but impressively done.

Britain and France have shown a firmness when the situation called for action of a speedy nature. This has more than been a reply to the charges that they have not hitherto talked strongly enough to others with whom they do not see eye to eye.

Britain and Italy, Portugal and Spain have been friends for many years. Italy has always had a warm place in her heart for the freedom of England which has harbored many of her political leaders. Latterly relations were strained during the Ethiopian war over this Mediterranean but there is hope that now since some of the difficulties have been ironed out, there will be a freer sense of friendship between these two powers.

SALESMANSHIP IS AN ART, and it is beautiful to watch a real artist sell something to a person who did not know he wanted any such article—in most cases of expert salesmanship did not need it or want it until the desire was implanted by the artist salesman. A survey of salesmanship in New York City shops and shops of other cities was recently made by an expert, and the results as summarized by the Ottawa Journal are interesting. He finds that salesmen and salesmen in their twenties are the least efficient of all, those in their thirties begin to show some improvement, the forties are still better, but that the best selling of all is done by men and women who have passed fifty.

This is not so surprising a finding as it might see mat first glance. Salesmanship is a job that must be learned. The man or woman of fifty has acquired an experience of the world and a knowledge of people—the potential customers—that is not available to youth. The intelligent salesman uses this knowledge of the world to put himself in tune with the mood of the buyer. He knows whether the customer is most likely to be impressed by a brisk sales talk, or whether he is the type who asks only courtesy, the necessary information, and a minimum of conversation.

All of us have met the sort of clerk who says: "Yes, sir, I have a nice shirt in fact, I wear one just like it myself." Invariably the clerk with that sort of an approach is young—fifty brings a greater measure of tact, if it brings anything.

OTHER MEN'S OPINIONS ARE ALWAYS WORTH LISTENING TO, when they speak out of their years of experience and conviction. Three men, prominent in public life, each of whom had experience varied and interesting are quoted in the Rotarian Magazine as follows:

Norman Hapgood, author, editor and diplomat: "In the span of one life, we are passing from the conception of one man's gain being another man's loss to the conception that the best manner of profit is to make yourself responsible for the excellence of a product for which you receive a price that is fair and within your own control."

Vash Young, author of "A Fortune to Share": "For years I have been able to save myself a lot of frothing at the mouth by pausing long enough to say, "What of it?" when something has come up to bother me. Just try this yourself the next time you are inclined to get excited or irritated over things' and you will see how effectively it will work. Please do not think that I am attempting to give you an easy-going formula for shrugging your troubles away. It is not as simple as all that. Troubles, like seed time and harvest, will always be with us. But a change of attitude toward them will make a world of difference in their effect upon us."

George Ade, journalist and humorist: "It isn't always advisable to be satisfied with things as they are. It is all right to advocate optimism and smiling faces and serene confidence for the future, but sometimes it's a good idea to be a grouch and register an occasional kick. In other words, don't accept halfway results and compromises as an easy way to solve problems. Be the devil's advocate and try to find out what is wrong with your surrounding conditions instead of taking it for granted that everything is O.K."

"MY HANDS ARE FREE—MY DUTY IS CLEAR, AND I AM DETERMINED TO COLLECT EVERY DOLLAR OWING TO THE PROVINCIAL TREASURY"

—Hon. Earl Rowe

CONTRAST this clear-cut, forthright statement by Hon. Earl Rowe with the blustering, changeable promises of Premier Hepburn.

At the time of the East Hastings by-election, Mr. Hepburn claimed 20 million dollars in Succession Duties outstanding. A few weeks later, he changed his figure to 50 millions. Within the last few days, he raised it to 75 millions.

Will he call it 100 millions by election day?

Now Examine the FACTS

Ontario's collection of Succession Duties during the three years of Hepburn rule (on a tide of rising prosperity which has increased the value of estates) has been only $31,445,538.35 to date.

The previous Conservative Government, during the four years—1930 to 1934 inclusive—of the worst depression Canada has ever known, collected $34,952,198.00. In one year, 1930, when markets were thrashing in the plunge of the depression, this Conservative Government collected $11,229,438—practically the same as the Hepburn Government collected in 1936 when bond and stock values were booming.

READ THESE FIGURES

To refute once and for all the Hepburn attempt to stamp Conservative Governments as the elders and abettors of tax evaders, here are the figures of Succession Duty collections in Ontario from 1930 to date:

	Year	Succession Duties Collected
Conservative Govt.	1930	$11,229,438.00
" "	1931	9,504,814.00
" "	1932	6,136,514.00
" "	1933	8,081,332.00
" "	1934	8,515,071.00
Hepburn Govt.	1935	3,469,467.00 (8 months period)
" "	1936	11,981,780.75
" "	1937	15,991,350.80

Why Isn't Hepburn FRANK?

When Premier Hepburn boasts of collecting evaded Succession Duties, he should be frank enough to state that this has only become possible because of legislation passed in Ottawa by a Conservative Government in 1933—legislation that made it possible for the first time to check on the holdings of the large estates.

The previous Ontario Government, thus armed, as the records will show, had already started to collect evaded taxes.

THE FOLLY OF HOLLOW BOASTING

Thinking people will recognize Premier Hepburn's hollow boasting and misrepresentation about Succession Duties for what it is—an effort to side-track the real issues of the election campaign because he does not face the election on his record of betrayal of all classes and creeds, his forty million dollar tax increase and his one hundred million dollar increased public debt.

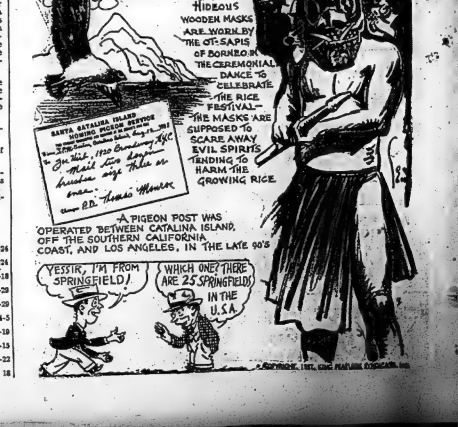
Little Benny's Note Book

After supper ma was pushing crooked things strate and strate things crooked and pop was smoking in himself in his private chair, saying, Let's see what's on the air. Benny, turn the dial to 4 hundred and 44 and let's hear what Croaks Barker is commenting on this evening.

Which I started to do, pop saying, By golies this radio thing is just about the highest achievement of the age. Imagine being able to lean back on your cigar and listen while a man in a distant city informs you of the very progress while it is still in the very act of progressing. By golies it's enough to redeem your faith in the future of humanity, he said.



Which just then Croake Barker came on the radio saying, And now let us see what is happening in Russia. His afternoon Gestrol is Soldecof of the regular army and 14 of his officers were executed 30 minutes after a picture of Trotsky had been found in the watch of Ivan Smulherff, General Soldecof's orderly. According to reports from Leningrad all the executed men confessed to having plotted with Japan, Germany, Italy, England and France to overthow the present government and hand it over to China.

Well, that's not so cheerful, ma said, and pop said, Better news is probably coming, and Croake Barker said, And now turning still further to the orient, we find a million Chinese and Japanese attacking each others throats and high sources on both sides predicting a war of at least six years duration. Now turning to Spain what do we find?

For Peet sake let him find it by himself, pop said, and ma said, Yes my landa let's have a little music.

Which we did, having The Eight Highwaysans playing Hoocha Koocha Koo on ukaslles.

Not right for any but the slender, statuesque figure is an exquisite gown of white silk mat jersey, lit in high-waisted and the bodice is embroidered with bands of gold, crystal and ruby stones. A similar band forms the inset girdle.

Ethiopian Spirit Unconquered Declares Former Warrior

Graphic Story of Sufferings of War-Torn Country Related by Emmanuel Tamarak, Famous Ethiopian Jew on Visit to Belleville—Claims Ethiopia Birthplace of Civilization

He is tall, very dark and distinguished looking. Behind his swarthy features there lies a wealth of knowledge of world affairs, of human suffering of a people of the high down-trodden countrymen and his native land which is being ground under the iron heel of Italian militarism and commercialism.

His dark eyes flash with a militant fire, then soften to black impenetrable pools as the subject of conversation changes. For this dark-young Ethiopian, he is only forty-three years of age, has passed through a crucible of suffering that few human beings have experienced. Not the type of suffering that the ordinary human being connects with the conquest of a nation but that kind which aids the spiritual and mental structure of one.

Served With Britain

He is Emmanuel Loukie Tamarak, scion of a famous Ethiopian family of Jews, a direct descendant of King Solomon and the Queen of Sheba. His family's history goes back to the days of imperial Monarchy. He served with the British Imperial forces during the World War, and at the cessation of hostilities left the cold of it for a new world. In America among white people he felt the atmosphere of western education. He graduated from the University of Southern California and got a job with the Twentieth Century Motion Pictures Inc. in San Diego, Cal.

Then came the fateful day that the Italian land marauders set on Ethiopia. In his home city of Harrar his wife and three children lived. Directly in the path of the onrushing victorious Italian army lay his home. His wife, four daughters and four sons between the ages of eleven and nineteen years. He flocked to the colors of the Emperor Haile Selassie.

Fought Against Italy

Hurriedly he dashed to the home of his forefathers to take up the sword in an effort to hurl back the Italian invader.

A few days after landing in Ethiopia he was assigned to the Ethiopian Intelligence Department. "And here," he said, in his flawless English, "is where my training in the British army stood me in good stead."

"On my first assignment, I was stopped by an Italian Native. He was a native child of some fourteen summers. I twisted the rifle and bayoned him through the gut as he lunged at me. I prevailed upon him the futility of his cause and within a short time extracted from him vital information which eventually resulted in the saving of thousands of Ethiopian lives.

But later the war took a terrific toll from the life of this simple devout man. Four of his sons and two daughters were mowed down before the Italian machine-guns at Adaws. His wife and remaining two daughters fell victims to the liquid fire and poison gas of the conquering Italians at the battle of Gigi-Gigi. Today he said, they rest in a mental hospital in Turin, Italy, hopelessly ill from the suffering incurred during the Italo-Ethiopian campaign.

All Fight War

"Everybody fought for the Emperor," he said. "Men, women and children followed the armies. Gen. Dr. Daughters was attached with the Swedish Red Cross and was killed with Mrs. Sandford, the head of a Red Cross Hospital in Ethiopia. My wife who boasted a hair nearly seven feet in length, and raven black in color, suffered terribly from burns. Her hair, now a few inches in length is of a reddish color. Her body was horribly torn with the effects of mustard gas. Today she is . . . ."

Mr. Tamarak is a devout Ethiopian Jew, "one of the dark Jews of the world." He is a descendant of the Falasha tribe which is in turn directly descended from King Solomon. We are the holders of the Pentateuch," he said in a representative of the Ontario Intelligencer Haile Selassie himself is a Jew but for political reasons he has been advised to keep quiet."

Intense pride in his tribes is evident in this strange man. "There are 70,000 of us in the world," he said. We have stretched as far as the United States. In the city of New York we have three synagogues while we have one in Vancouver in your country."

Falasha Strict Jews

The Falasha are very devout Jews and observe a severe strictness regarding dietary laws. They keep all Jewish holidays faithfully. We are, he said, the first people in the world to make pottery, or unleavened bread. We are the first people to give coffee to the world."

Mr. Tamarak has an undying faith in the past, present and future. "Ethiopia is not conquered and 11 tire of his country and his people, never will be," he said proudly. "Only about one fifth of his population has bowed to the yoke. Yet today many of her sons are studying in England, France and the United States."

"Ethiopia," he continued, "is one of the few countries of the world not imbued with racial prejudices. It is a country of individualists resembling somewhat the French Colonials. In our country you will find but few Communists not because we are denied but because we can get everything from the products of the country. The Ethiopian has all the necessities of life at his disposal. He will not dig in the ground, he will not fill an extra sleep for there would be motion wasted and wood available where it is not necessary. We are a God-loving people and ninety-three per cent of us can read and write in our various languages. We are the only Jews who use the Cane Aramaic language and Amharic and Hebrew. And most important we are the only Jews in the world who worship at the Wailing Wall of Jerusalem. While we are of negroid color and features, we are of Semitic and Arabian extraction."

Where Civilization Began

"We have always claimed that Ethiopia is the birthplace of civilization," said Mr. Tamarak, "because we have endured down through the ages, for six thousand years, troubles and tribulations and have come through practically unscathed. We live in the first country and the first Jewish country in the world.

Turning to modern times, Mr. Tamarak stated that "that it cost Italy billion dollars to carry on a useless war. Today progg Italy is so poor that she cannot pay the fares home of 60,000 Italians at present living in Ethiopia. Mussolini is using this as an excuse to ward off the depression in his own country."

"I travelled through the main cities of Italy," said Mr. Tamarak, "and there I saw Mentical Misery. I approached women still clad in mourning, weeping for the son who will never come back. I spoke to them and they spoke to me, not as a former enemy, but as a parent who has suffered the loss of loved ones through the ambition of war. The story was the same, everywhere women were weeping through a false sense of patriotism brought about by the bullying propaganda of Mussolini and his Fascist Government."

Looks For Revolution

"Ethiopia is not conquered and it never will be," reiterated Mr. Tamarak, dark eyes flashing with a strange patriotic fervor. "It has only conquered a part of my country." he said strangely and involuntarily repeating the statement made yesterday by the Emperor Haile Selassie. "You can look for a revolution, almost any minute, you can hear a general uprising," he said in his soft accents, "but intermittently and which will show the invader that Ethiopia is not defeated."

"Italy may have gotten a few ill concessions and coffee but she will not able is far from being acquired or crushed the spirit of our people."

In lighter vein, the speaker said that Ethiopia is the birthplace of the all-down strike, the new natural strikers," he said, "for we will not work for the Italian conquerors."

Empress Brilliant Woman

Another interesting fact brought by the speaker was that the entire cost of the Ethiopian campaign amounted to $2,000,000 and that Empress Victoria, "one of the most brilliant women in the world, and one of the four richest." She is a remarkably clever woman and can speak twelve different languages," he said.

Asked regarding the slave question, Mr. Tamarak stated there are no slaves as stated above by Ethiopia. "That is done from the Egyptian side," he said, "but what we really have is millions of serfs. These work for people for a mere pittance. Yet some of these were some of the finest soldiers we had. In one of our battles their generals was a former wage slave—while four other generals were members of the Falasha Tribe."

Likes of Jewish To Compare

Haile Selassie is one of the most brilliant men in the world today, the speaker maintained, "and one of the two men in the world who do not bow before the King of Kings. The Lord has not yet set conquer his enemies and reserved a place for him among the petions of the earth," he said.

Mr. Tamarak is touring the world, studying various conditions. He has already visited Europe with the exception of Spain where he was refused admission on account of the war now going on and is now on his way to California. Mr. Tamarak is at present the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Mercer and family, of South John Street.

Cattle Price Highest In Seventeen Years

Chicago, Sept. 16 (AP) — The highest cattle price in seventeen years — $19.10 per hundredweight — was established in yesterday's livestock market.

Packers paid this new top for 25 head of choice grain fed steers, most of which originated in Iowa. Not since $19.35 was paid in January, 1929, has any price like today's been known in Chicago.

Scarcity of well finished cattle and high prices from other markets combined to stimulate the demand for high priced steers.

Weddings

MACMULLEN—WHITE

Rawdon.—A very pretty September wedding ceremony was solemnized by Rev. J. E. Bechtel at Rawdon United Church Parsonage, on Saturday, Wednesday, September 15th., 1937, at 3 p.m. when Marguerite Nancy, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest White of Mount Pleasant, became the bride of Leon Keith James, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. William MacMullen of Aikin's community in Sidney Township, in the presence of over thirty-five relatives.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride looked charming in a regency gown of ivory bridal satin, fashioned on long princess lines with an ensemble coat of silk embroidered net. A finger-tip white silk tulle veil caught about her dark hair with a bandeau of orange blossoms and she carried a bouquet of Butterscot roses with maiden hair fern.

The bridesmaid, Miss Eileen MacMullen, cousin of the groom, was gowned in an ankle length tailored frock of blush pink flowered silk chiffon over taffeta with velvet trimming. A halo hat of Belgium blue velvet with a veil and white accessories. She carried a bouquet of pink gladioli, baby's breath and fern.

Mr. Lorne White, brother of the bride was groomsman.

The groom's gift to the bride was a beautiful set of silverware, to the bridesmaid a Stratton compact and to the groomsman a military set.

Later scenes of the wedding were taken and then the bride donned her travelling attire, a navy blue silk crepe ensemble with trimming of ashes of roses, a chic navy felt hat and navy accessories.

The happy bride left amid showers of confetti and good wishes for a honeymoon trip to Toronto, St. Catharines, Niagara Falls and other points. On their return they will reside on the groom's farm in Sidney.

Wife Confesses She Almost Lost Good Husband By Crying

A correspondent, happily married, writes me an interesting letter which she calls "The Man's Side", and she does not spare herself in giving "The Man's Side" of her marriage. Here's her letter:

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"I have a wonderful husband, much more wonderful than I deserve. Our marriage was probably the most hectic imaginable. Something was always in opposition. A continuous three-ring circus, sometimes dangerously exciting, but never a dull moment.

"You see I'm very temperamental person, dramatically inclined, and I do make mountains out of molehills. My husband is not demonstrative; I am, and this is the source of many arguments. If he fails to notice me or kiss me goodbye or say 'hello', I brood. And how I brood! I work myself into a 'Poor me', attitude to prepare myself for the onslaught when Mack returns, hungry and tired, from his work.

Poor Mack! He has stood it time and time again, while I let my uncontrollable temper send me into tantrums and hysterical spells. He has stood it with a kind tolerance which was natural to him. But too much proved to be too much.

"Let me see—what did he do the day that brought about the reckoning? Oh, yes; he called me on the telephone to ask if it would be all right for him to go to supper with his boss. When he asked me if I had supper prepared, I said 'yes'. This was a lie. It was only what was left from dinner. But with a note of self-sacrifice in my voice I told him to go ahead and have supper with his boss.

"He answered he would gladly come home if I preferred. 'No,' I insisted wearily, 'go with your boss'. Despite my protests, he came home first. I treated him coldly. He dressed and left. When he returned home, I was in my most depressed mood, and I turned on the tears with gusto.

"I waited for the kind and sympathetic words, but they didn't come. The harder I cried, the redder my husband's face got. I was beginning to fear, not only for my victory, but for some desperate explosion on his part. But try as I would, I couldn't stop crying now. When he shouted: 'What are you crying about?' I couldn't give him an answer.

"What was I crying about? I had a good husband who treated me well, I had plenty to eat and a good roof over my head, and I was in perfect health. What was I crying about? I finally gave up in despair. I wasn't crying about anything. I was just crying.

"I nearly lost my husband that time; lost Mark, my cherished home, everything which is symbolic of my happiness. I ALMOST lost both thank God. I did not. I've not spared myself in this telling. Because I want women to see the many side of marriage.

Permit Child Solitude In Home

Natural For Him to Want to be Alone at Times, Lisa Asserts

(By Lisa Grenelle)

Mother's heart ached for Albert whenever she saw him mopping about by himself. She would make a point of hurrying through whatever she was doing and run out to be with him. She couldn't bear to think of the poor child being lonely.

To be sure, Albert didn't always seem too glad to see her. Far from appearing relieved and grateful, he often would look at her a little impatiently as if he wished she would let him alone. But Mother was so sure that no one wanted to be alone that she put Albert's ungracious manner down to boyish shyness and reserve. Albert was too proud, she reflected, too self-conscious to seek her companionship or to appear too obviously relieved when his hur of solitude was broken.

Mother was always arranging things for Albert to do, suggesting that he go over and see so and so, call up Tom, Dick or Harry.

Should Be Active

Like a great many other well-meaning parents, Mother felt that all children should be constantly occupied and active, continually in the company of one, preferably several, companions of suitable age. It was the only natural life for children, Mother believed, especially boys having attained the age of 10 or more. It wasn't normal for a big boy of 12 like Albert to want to be about by himself. It meant that something was wrong with him.

The natural need for a certain amount of solitude, especially for a very approaching adolescent, never occurred to Mother. That most children, as well as most grown-ups, need regular periods of privacy would have been hard for Mother to believe.

Children need a certain amount of planned occupation, of course. They need access to congenial companionship. But they do not need, and should not have, every hour of every day active and social. Especially in summer, after the long winter term at school, many children, particularly the sensitive, imaginative, high-strung type, need a long period of privacy, unplanned hours, hours in which they can do what meets their fancy or nothing at all.

Means Nothing

If a child consistently and over a long period of time, for a year at least, avoids all contact with children of his own age, then perhaps he is unpopular, afraid, maladjusted, unhappy But because he prefers to muse about the stars by himself for a day or a week or a month, means nothing. Only if you try to force him will you make him unhappy, irritable, abnormal.

On the contrary, the child who cannot contentedly himself a moment alone that world hays me worried. What's the matter with him? Is he so shallow that he has no inner life?

And, as in everything else, children differ. We cannot and we should not want to make them all one pattern. Some children are naturally more gregarious, some need and desire more solitude. Unless either tendency is very extreme over a long period of time, let the child alone. In matters like these at least, he usually knows what is best for him.

SERIOUSLY ILL

Queen Alexandrine, of Denmark, who underwent an operation in Copenhagen for an intestinal obstruction, is reported to be in a "satisfactory condition as can be expected" according to a bulletin issued at the Skagen hospital. The Queen was stricken at her summer home in Skaw, near Jutland, and was rushed to Copenhagen in a chartered aeroplane. An emergency operation was performed.

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton, M.D.

VALUE OF SUGAR IN PREVENTING OR DELAYING THE ONSET OF FATIGUE

Some years ago Harvard research workers examined the blood of the runners in the Boston Marathon race. It was found that the blood of the runners who came in toward the last and others who finished in poor physical condition was very low in sugar.

They instructed these runners who finished low down on the list and those who finished in poor physical condition to eat more sugar whilst training during the following year, and also eat lumps of sugar during the race. Without exception all these runners who followed this advice either finished higher up in the race or were in better physical condition when they finished.

Another experiment of the effect of carbohydrate (sugar) in preventing fatigue or delaying the onset of fatigue from exercise is recorded in the American Journal of Diseases of Children. Chicago. Drs. F. W. Schultz and Eleanor Hilsh, Chicago, in order to determine the effect of the body's state of nutrition as regards fatigue studied the changes in the acid base balance and in the sugar content of the blood after exercise on sixteen children between the ages of 8 and 13 years.

The effects of the exercise were observed on the fasting state (no food being digested), and after eating various sugars. Fourteen of the sixteen who exercised during fasting showed an increase of acid in the blood after fifteen minutes of exercise. The normal child showed less acid after the exercise than did the youngster who was weak.

In regard to the use of sugar before exercise it was found that the acid condition of the blood—the evidence of fatigue—was delayed for some minutes in those who ate the sugar before exercise. It was found that the ability to store sugar in the blood improved with exercise and that training (exercising regularly) increased the efficiency or ability of the body to store sugar.

So you can thus see why giving a youngster (or an adult) some candy-bread, a banana, apple or orange, at four o'clock in the afternoon will help to prevent fatigue from play or work.

It also clearly shows the value of training or the taking of regular exercise in that there is an increase in the ability of the blood and tissues to store sugar, thus having a little surplus always ready for use and so delaying the onset of fatigue.

Fashion Flashes

(By Alice Alden)

Beet trick of the week is a cocktail and evening coat of silver fox done in vertical bands on a black sheer foundation. By now putting the seams through the sleeveless of the foundation, the coat becomes a cape.

Very doggy is a printed challis of hunting scenes in bright shades on a brown ground. The neck has a festive "dog collar" with metal trim, and there is a ruffled-trimmed license belt.

Gracious and lovely is a nightgown of pink sand crepe, the high-waisted skirt entirely knife-pleated. The short, sleeved V-neck bodice has inset bands of beige Alencon lace.

A good friend for the Autumn wardrobe will be one of those beautifully tailored, fitted jackets of gold lame done in rich Paisley patterns and colorings. Such a jacket will complement almost any style and color.

No matter how it is crushed when folded for packing, there is a hat of velvet so processed that it is wrinkle-proof. The hat is a casual sports model with a tall, cone crown that may be manipulated so any desired height and shape. The brim is bound in grosgrain to match the grosgrain band. The hat comes in black, red and fuchsia shades.

Dresses for Autumn Demand Slim Waistline and Trim Hips

(By Helen Follett)

Fashion Permits a curve below the waistline, but no "shelf". Skirts shaped like a tube of toothpaste don't have hip space, and the boutfant cone is out for a figure as slender as a reed. Those rotund ladies who must always pick out the big arm chair must get on the job of reducing sandshipe.

The foundation garment that is skillfully cut and fitted is a help. It holds fat up from one spot and packs it above or below. If you have cut for hip reduction, get a good corset; it will encourage you to go on with your twisting, bending and swing exercises.

Nothing will pull inches from the hips like squatting exercises. Place hand on hips, feet four inches apart; lower the body slowly, sending the knees out a little. Come up slowly. Ha! You took a tumble, didn't you? Shame on you. If you hadn't been so keen about the good things at the table, you'd be able to do that little trick with ease.

Lie on the floor with head against the wall. Lift the legs slowly without bending the knees until your toes touch the wall. Lower them slowly. That's a tough one, but it strengthens tummy muscles.

GINGER ROGERS

White hair calls for the most careful treatment. The soap for the shampoo must be melted, hair rinsed thoroughly in warm water, fairly warm and bluing added to the last rinsing water.

Moistening the hair and putting it on metal rods will often produce a yellow cast. Experiment with hair tonics, putting it first on a single strand, observing the effect next day. Tonics containing glycerine will discolor silver tresses.

Overfatigue often causes sleeplessness or troubled sleep. Get to bed before you are completely played out. Read your detective story, stop thinking about your troubles and relax.

How to relax? Relaxation begins in the mind, and the muscles follow suit. Close your eyes, visualize a long straight road. Pretend you are in a motor car, spinning along. Imagine seeing trees, houses, country vistas. You are on your way to dreamland. The sand man will catch you.

"Poor nights" bring lack-luster eyes, pouches under the eyes, sagging steps and general "good-for-nothingness." No woman can afford to endure them.

Lipsticks are getting darker as the season advances. American beauty is a good shade; it's rich and doesn't carry a purple cast like mulberry.

If fat is hanging on, try nasturtiums, a blend of red and orange; it is very fashionable at the present moment.

Maverick's Melody

By KARIN ASMLAND

McClure Newspaper Syndicate
WNU Service.

Maverick was old, so old that people were beginning to look at him with pitying eyes, and to lay their heads significantly as he passed them. The snows of many winters lay on his hair, but the dreams of many summers slept in his eyes.

Maverick had written songs in his day—songs that sang in the blood, yet over which none had become enthusiastic. But Maverick loved them. He hummed snatches of them over and over again to himself, as he sat in his big armchair by his daughter's fire, and watched his children go by. He called them over and over again himself, as he sat in the summer-house.

"Some day," he would say, "I shall compose a song which the world will love."

His daughter, Hannah, would sigh softly, and pat the coloring on her head significantly. Elsa, his daughter-in-law, thought he was the only one besides Rupert who knew that her heart was chilled at his feet like a kitten to listen to his tales of the good old days, of his romantic youth in the Civil war, to his snatches of love songs in his own composition. Elsa's tired old hands played with the cloth of gold, and she would bake in the sunshine of her smiles.

Very often Rupert, enamored of Elsa, would sit there also, and listen. All the world knew Rupert and Maverick loved Rupert and Elsa, and only themselves knew they were lovers, but because they were a part of himself. They understood him. Perhaps it was partly because Rupert also sang snatches of song of his own composition when he was young. Some day, perhaps, he would write a song that would set the world afire.

Hannah did not think so, however. She would have none of Rupert. A dreamer. A prodigal of time, who would never make enough to support a wife. So she sent Elsa of the understanding heart away to school, and a great void was cut in Maverick's life.

He became quieter than ever and drew into himself as an oyster draws into its shell. One day, however, he said very excitedly to his daughter, Hannah:

"Listen Hannah. I have found the melody. Listen!"

"Very nice, Father," she said, patting his blue-veined hand. Then she hurried on and forgot all about it. A pall of disappointment fell over Maverick's heart. He yearned more than ever for Elsa. It was because of Elsa that his melody had come to him, because of his longing for her.

He sang the song for his son-in-law, who said to him: "You must not bother your head about things like that any more. You don't need to. You have a good home, and everything you need."

He knew a music publisher of great renown, who spent his summers here in the town. Gravely he picked up his case, put on his hat and set forth for the publisher's house. At 12h. four a maid told him the great man was busy and could not be seen.

His mind worked very fast. The windows were all open, and outside one of the front windows he stood and sang his melody in his quavering falsetto. Then he paused. Evidently nobody had heard him. He tried again. Somebody raised a screen and thrust his head through the window opening. It was the publisher. Eagerly Maverick turned.

"Listen, my good man," he heard. "I am very busy and you bother me. Please take this and go somewhere else."

He handed Maverick a quarter. The old man threw back his head, flung the quarter into the gutter before the publisher's astonished eyes and, head still held high, set off down the street.

There were hurrying steps after Maverick. Rupert caught up with him, his eyes shining with joy.

"Listen, granddad," he cried, excitedly. "I've found out somebody I have the words to it. It's inspired. All about Elsa. You know—anybody's Elsa. I've missed her and I couldn't help write the words. Come to my room and play and sing music again and again. I'll write it up. We'll get Elsa to sing it for the publisher. Your name is made. It's a song that will melt the coldest heart, thrill the smallest child. Pathos, beauty, love. Come, grandad."

Feverishly, Rupert wrote the song and sent for Elsa.

"It is a song in a thousand," he said. "We will make it a hit. You wait sing it over the radio. Elsa, just as you have sung it to me. The world will love it."

And he made up a contract with them that quite overpowered them, both and made them glad for Maverick. Hand in hand, they hurried home, so that he, who had been too weary and weak to come, might sign on the dotted line.

In the summer-house in the garden they found him, asleep like a tired child, a smile on his thin, cold lips. They could not rouse him. In one blue-veined hand he held a paper, on which had been written in his fine old script:

"Maverick's Melody — I hereby dedicate and bequeath it to Rupert and Elsa."

The rainfall was general throughout most of the province as well as the central and northern United States.

Many places were visited by wild which reached hurricane proportions. Fortunately this section of the country did not feel the force of the wind. In the northern section in Tweed Forestry District many large trees were broken off or uprooted. Also in the telephone line in one place fifty-four trees were overturned in the distance of one mile, completely disrupting telephone communication.

BEARS DOWN CHIEFS 7 - 2 IN PLAY - OFF

Lazzer's Successor Found in Joe Gordon of Newark

(By The Associated Press)

It's 11 years, since New York Yankees went shopping for a second baseman. They were lucky then. They landed Tony Lazzeri from Salt Lake City and helped Miller Huggins' wrecking crew win their first of three straight pennants in 1926. A dozen years after Lazzeri broke into print by hitting a home run for Salt Lake, the Yanks are out shopping and again they're lucky.

For Joseph Lowell Gordon, who is doing his best to fill the shoes of retired Governor's Cup series between Newark Bears and Montreal Royals into a rout, is one of Col. Ruppert's hired hands.

The 23-year-old Californian hit his second homer of the series and added a double for good measure to lead the Bears' attack as they knocked off the Chiefs in the second game of their four out of seven series, last night, 7-2, and made it 3-1 in games.

That is cheering news for the Colonel and Manager Joe McCarthy of the team who play for New York, none is potentially more valuable in the Bronx than Gordon, who next year will replace Lazzeri.

In two games Gordon has stolen most of the story of the play-offs, for Baltimore and Montreal, twice talked out, have yet to get under way.

After Donald, the young right-hander, turned off a shutout, 3-0, 14 straight at the beginning of the season, stopped the Chiefs with nine hits.

Kingston Man Wants the Job At Reds' Helm

Names Given as "Mr. Edwards"; Many Apply For Cincinnati Post

Cincinnati, Sept. 16 (AP)—General Manager Warren C. Giles' problem of candidates for the Cincinnati Reds managerial post left vacant by the release of Charlie Dressen were complicated today by gifts of applications ranging from an 18-year-old boy to a man in Canada, who was confident he could get the Reds' owners out of the coal hole. Giles had a bid from a man identified as a "Mr. Edwards of Kingston, Ont."

Giles said a youth from New York had written that "from a business standpoint it would be a 10-strike to have an 18-year-old youngster to head the team."

Diamond veterans who applied included Norman Bell, one-time Big League hurler, Jim Bottomley, former Cardinal, and Max Carey, former Brooklyn pilot.

Giants and Cubs Continue Torrid Struggle for Lead, Both Win Handily Yesterday

Harry Downing Named as Player Responsible For Giants' Position

TERRYMEN LEAD

Yanks Split With Cleveland, Feller Shelled From Mound

By Gy Yoder
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

In the baseball business today, there's no use in the incident thing that happened to the Giants tnis year was the injury that put their leading slirtig catcher, Gus Mancuso, in the hospital back in July.

If Gus hadn't been laid up with a broken finger, the Giants never would have "found" Harry Danning —who had been warming the Giant bench for only six years.

And if Gus hadn't come across Harry, sitting there minding his own business in the after July 3 is doubtful the Giants would be up there sporting a 2 1-2-game lead for the National League pennant today.

Harry is the hero of the piece because of the way he has brought the right-handed department of the Giants batting staff out of the doldrums, and because he's been serving that big bat of his in rival hurlers' faces till they're scared to death of him.

When Mancuso went on the shelf, Danning had to take over. It was either that, or else. And from the moment he put on his mask and pad, the pitching began to look up.

For instance, there were Prince Harry Dean and Hal Schumacher who had been about as much use as a couple of bats with holes in them. But since Harry began handling them, Schumacher has started nine games, credited seven and won six, while Gumbert has taken half a dozen decisions.

Schumacher did it again with Danning yesterday. He turned in a neat three-hitter while his mates clobbed the Pirates 7-2. Since the Cubs also won their game, taking a 5-3 decision from the Bees behind Dick Ehrt's six-hitter, the pennant situation remained as was, in this form:

	Games	To Go	Won Lost Behind Play
Giants	109	52	2 1-2
Cubs	110	50	56 2 1-2 13

The Yankees had their American League lead shaved to 9 1-2 games over the Tigers. They split a twin bill with Cleveland Indians, taking the nightcap 3-1 with Monte Pearson pitching a four-hitter, while the lithe southpaw, Feller, was the 16-inning opener, although Bob Feller was the goat in the pitching. The Tigers won their single game with the Senators 4-3 on the strength of a three-run rally in the ninth.

The White Sox got to Lefty Grove and topped the Red Sox 5-3. The Athletics took their seventh in a row from St. Louis, but dropped the nightcap 2-1 as Bill Trotter won his first victory since July 3.

Cincinnati Reds routed the Dodgers 6-5 in the opener, and then dropped the afterpiece 4-0. The Phillies and Braves battled 13 innings to a 6-6 draw before darkness halted the proceedings.

MORE MYSTERY IN MONTREAL RUGBY CAMP

New Players Suddenly Appear, While Stars Vanish

The Montreal Indians are as mysterious as a magician's tricks.

First there was Pop Poplowsky, a native Montrealer who got away with his little scheme for two weeks of being known as Aloysius D'Espo. Pop told the officials of the Big Four he was a United States football star from "La Salle University in Utah".

Now nobody can fathom the disappearance of halfback Jim Allen. Allen, a Montreal boy who gained his football fame with Dartmouths University in the United States, has not shown up for practice during the last week and Indian officials are beginning to worry. All they know about the case is that Allen is reported "out of town".

Even the Indians wondered about Allen. Coach Ted Reeve had his eyes on the halfback's middle name when Coach Doug Kerr, faced with the task of finding a booter, tried out Cam MacArthur last night and seemed satisfied with the big McGill bonder's showing.

CANADIAN ENTRY 34TH

PORT WASHINGTON, N.Y., Sept. 16th.—(CP)—With the exception of Harold Haland of Montclair Bay on Long Island and Milton Wagenhorst of San Diego, Calif., 32 skippers hoped today for three days of fair weather, as predicted, when they prepared for the second race in the 15th annual star class yacht championship.

The lone Canadian entry in yesterday's race, C. W. Harris of Toronto, skipper of the Wah-Ben-O, managed to finish 24th but the 30-mile contest broke made for a choppy water that six yachts failed to finish.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

Ken J. Colling

Just what moniker the Belleville rugby team will adopt this coming season, we have been unable to find out. The club has been operating for the past three seasons and never used the same nickname twice. Coach Archie Duffield announced today the club colors would be Royal Blue and Gold, the body of the sweater being Royal Blue and the shoulders, down to the elbows, Golden. Perhaps we'll have to call 'em the "Golden Gophers," as the local golfers may have to dig in so far, to hold that line, the opposition will think they are gophers, if there's such a thing as a gopher.

Watched the local gridders work out the other night. Coach Duffield had a merry band of willing kids, who seemed to have the spirit and apparently are satisfied with their coach, but there seems to be a lacking of experience and also in the backfield. Hope you're wrong, but when we watched 'em Eddie Schermerhorn was the only seasoned backfielder in the lot. The majority of the candidates are far from last year's Collegiate interscholastic squad and there is a vast difference between the raggedness of intermediate O.R.F.U. rugby and the type of game played in our interscholastic union. Of course Coach Duffield says that team spirit is most essential—and we've got that team spirit. Watch us play on Wednesday when we open the season versus the "Flyers" at the Fair recreation," he predicted.

In years past O.R.F.U. football has been played locally on Saturday afternoons, eliminating any chances of creating clientele from Front Street. The rugby games this season are being tried on Wednesday afternoons, when the professional and business men are free to take in the games.

Glad to hear Wallie Hilton, former Belleville athlete, was awarded the I.O.D.E. scholarship. Incidentally Wally has returned to Western University and is being coached for as a regular backfielder for the Mustangs this fall. In his first year of Intercollegiate football Wallie received honorable mention on two occasions, but we expect greater accomplishments from him this year. Watch the lad go.

For those interested in sporting events and also desirous of seeing some outstanding aerial stunts, by kind permission of Wing Commander R. L. Godfrey, C.O. of the Royal Canadian Air Force at Trenton, the great annual field day will be held on Friday afternoon. There is no charge to witness the various spectacle, which is the third annual event of its kind to be presented at the Trenton base.

Directly upon the heels of the Kingston Penins being eliminated from the O.S.H.L. finals, comes word that Joe Daley has severed his last game as the manager of the old Foxy Quoits. This news comes rather hard as the grey-haired mentor and guiding light of amateur golf in Kingston has become tour dell in Kingston has become part of the Central League. His fighting spirit and willingness to whistle in the dark will long be remembered. We hope Joe changes his mind next year.

Of course there is another angle to Kingston. The Toronto Maple Leafs have long since been looking over the Limestone City as a possible farm for a pro. baseball team in the Canadian-American League. If a suitable enclosed grounds could be obtained, one would see pro. ball there next year with Clyde Eagle as manager — and Joe Daley trainer if need arises.

Due to wet grounds the Orillia at Point Anne intermediate O.A. A. semi-final slated for the Cement Village yesterday was postponed until next week. The encounter with the sudden death game at the Fair Grounds between the Napanee and Havelock clubs. Coach Frank Sedore slated his club had to play today in order to procure the return road game in Orillia on Saturday.

It's amateur wrestling night at the Belleville Arena again on Friday. Three amateur grapplers are slated, among the popular ones, three out, as they add plenty of the fan appeal to their shows. A direct contrast will be seen Friday when Ted Fielding, known as "Lion of the North", Ted Fielding, is on the same card with the popular Red Garner, who tosses two de not six matters in the ring. Garner, hailing Harold Standish, a newcomer.

Len Koenacke, Brooklyn Dodger outfielder, was killed in an airplane flight over Toronto two years ago today. Only a few days before he initiated the pilot, Koenacke was dead when the plane crashed but nearly reached it. The plane was enroute from Detroit to Toronto.

Elsewhere on the sport page today will be found a unique story carrying the byline of Biddie Brietz's name. It's really too good to pass up, knowing the type Bleacher reader we have heard ribbing Joe Daley, and the Ponies, for these many years.

The Giants retained their slim 2 1-2 game margin over the Cubs yesterday by taking the Phils 7-2, while the Cubs won 2-1 over the Boston Bees. Much praise is being given Harry Danning, who has warmed the Giants' bench for six years, for the splendid manner in which he is handling the Giant pitchstaff. Cy Mancuso would have been laid up. Danning is acclaimed as the man of the hour and just reports reach us the Giants' present position as tops.

Helen Wills Moody Loses

Queen of the world tennis courts, starts her long-awaited comeback in the Canadian championships at Los Angeles, while Fraser, who has reached finals at the Quincie Stading Club courts were defeated yesterday, losing in straight sets.

MIMICO DOWNS ORILLIA

Mimico, Ont., Sept. 16.—(CP)—Mimico and Orillia juniors were still in the hunt today for the Ontario Baseball Association senior title but must take two straight games from the champion Orillia Terriers to win the crown.

Mimico scored their first win last night in the best-of-five series after Orillia had won the two opening battles. The Mimicoites' 11-9 margin was well earned, the home team outplaying the Dominion title's most of the way.

FAULKNER OPENS T. B. SANATORIUM

Minister of Health Tells of War on Disease by Government

Cornwall, Ont., Sept. 16—(CP)—The Ontario Government "is most concerned in defeating tuberculosis," Hon. Dr. J. A. Faulkner, Provincial Minister of Health, said yesterday in an address opening the St. Lawrence tuberculosis sanatorium, five miles east of here.

Ontario had spent $788,000 since 1934 in aiding tuberculosis institutions, and institutions now under construction would provide 380 additional beds for patients by next summer. "We are interested in seeing that every person afflicted with the disease is admitted to sanatoria, where he can receive treatment which may, in time, fit him to return to society," Dr. Faulkner said.

The 108-bed institution which the health minister opened here was built and will be operated by the united counties of Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry. It cost approximately $270,000, of which the Ontario Government and the counties each contributed $135,000

Dr. Faulkner told of tuberculosis work being done by travelling clinics at Ottawa, Belleville, Toronto, North Bay, and said two more were being established at Timmins and Port William. It was expected 18,000 to 12,000 persons would be examined by these clinics in a year.

Moose Jaw Faces Need For More Sources

Moose Jaw, Sask., Sept. 16—(CP)—Water famine of indefinite duration today faced Moose Jaw residents as city council, sought sources to increase the failing supply.

With requirements approximately 1,000,000 gallons daily four sources provide only 850,000 gallons except. ed with capacity supply of 1,300,000. Nevertheless council has rejected proposals for rationing and decided to pump the available supply for as long periods as possible.

Drought is responsible and only copious rains can relieve the situation unless further water sources are found. City Engineer Hugh C. Ritchie estimated a four-inch spread over a week would be required to restore normal supply.

Downtown section of the city of some 20,000 persons has not suffered from water shortage to any extent for it lies in a valley but in the residential sections, on both north and south, slopes where more pumping pressure is needed, the water supply has been cut off frequently.

CHINESE PUSH JAPANESE BACK

Mechanized Attack is Broken by Chinese at Lotien

By JAMES A. MILLS

Shanghai, Sept. 16—(AP)— Chinese counter-attacked today from the centre of their Shanghai defence line and drove the Japanese from Lotien, 15 miles northwest of the international settlement.

Despite a steady rain, the Chinese troops were said to have broken a mechanized Japanese attack. Counter-charging, they drove out the Japanese who had entered the town with armored cars and tanks. Lotien has changed hands countless times in the five weeks of battle in the delta.

The Chinese spokesman said the heavy rain had slackened activities along the 30-mile front from Shanghai's north station northwest to the Yangtze River.

Major Operations Forecast

Major operations in the Shanghai sector can be expected shortly, a Japanese army spokesman said now that Gen. Iwane Matsui, has taken over the high command in the area.

HUMORIST-AUTHOR DIES -

Famed author of the famous story 'Pigs is Pigs', Ellis Parker Butler (above), died at his summer home in Housatonic, Mass., after being in poor health for the past three years. Well known as a humorist, Butler once referred to his face as one modelled along "the classic lines of an Irish bartender." He served a lengthy term as vice-president of the Flushing National Bank and was a past-president of the Author's League of America.

TIGER CATCHER SICK

Resting easily in his bed at a hospital in Detroit, is Rudy York, sensational catcher of the Detroit Tigers, who is fighting off an infection that resulted from a torn finger nail on his left hand. The Tigers will miss Rudy until he is back in the line-up. He made baseball history by smacking out 18 home runs in one month this season, thus shattering the record of the great Babe Ruth.

ELECTED LEAGUE PRES.

Aga Khan (ABOVE), spiritual leader of millions of India's Moslems and wealthy sportsman, was elected head of the League of Nations Assembly for the present session now in progress. The assembly has ignored Italy and Germany — both of whom have withdrawn from league collaboration — by recognizing the Spanish Loyalist government and by refusing to bar Ethiopia from league membership.

BOOTH ESTATE IS BEING PROBED

Premier Hepburn Says Gov't. Presses Claim For $3,500,000

By C. P. Staff Writer

Port Hope, Ont., Sept. 16 (CP)—Pursuing more millions in unpaid succession duties the Ontario Government is now pressing a claim for $3,500,000 against the estate of the late John R. Booth of Ottawa.

Premier Mitchell Hepburn announced here last night the government had appointed Albert J. Gordon, K.C., of Windsor to conduct a probe of the Booth estate under the provisions of the Succession Duties Act.

Mr. Booth died in 1925. A pioneer lumberman of the Ottawa Valley, he built up a veritable empire of timber lands, railways and lumber mills in his long lifetime.

Five Estates Under Review.

His estate, Mr. Hepburn said, was probated originally at some $25,000,000 and was one of the largest ever handled by the Succession Duties office. Payment of succession duties was settled after some discussions and the last payment was made in 1927.

The Booth estate was one of five large Ottawa estates which have been under the review of twelve officials in the Treasury Department for the past four months, Mr. Hepburn said. It is the first to reach the stage of a public inquiry. The officials had found certain gifts which should have been taxable had not been taxed and certain securities had been undervalued.

Hence the claim, for $3,500,000, jumping the Booth estate from the millions already under public scrutiny, the Byrnes and Laidlaw estates, Mr. Hepburn said, the Government expected to collect $7,000,000 from the three.

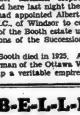
$8,000,000 Expected.

It was not 100 much to expect, he said, that from 6 estates settled under the former Conservative regime and on first look it appeared that from $50,000,000 to $70,000,000 would be realized.

Conservative Leader Earl Rowe had said he would collect this money if he were returned to office but he could not do it. His hands would be tied because whatever moves he made Premier Hepburn would involve the exposure of the maladministration of his own friends.

Mr. Hepburn took issue with Mr. Rowe's statement the collections of back succession duties had been made possible by a Bennett amendment to the Income Tax Act relating to disclosure of ownership of bearer bonds.

Liberals Reopen Estate.



The government had only dealt with one estate since the amendment went into effect. That was a London estate the Henry government had settled after a succession duty payment of $32,000. The Liberal administration had reopened the estate and collected $627,000.

Sir Edmund Henry testified on Provincial Treasurer when many of these estates were settled. He had been asked to aid in the present election by Mr. Rowe and was likely to be Provincial Treasurer again if Mr. Rowe was elected.

"If the Conservatives had done their duty when in office," said Mr. Hepburn, "all this work would not be necessary and the province would not be so far in debt."

Mr. Hepburn will speak at Beaverton tonight.

Picton, Ont., Sept. 16.—(Special)—Stricken suddenly with a stroke at his home in Kingston Wednesday last the Rev. Robert John Craig, M.A., one of Prince Edward County's most prominent Masons and churchmen, was rushed to Picton hospital, where he passed away yesterday afternoon.

Born in Kingston eighty-seven years ago, a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Craig, deceased spent most of his early life in his native city. Of devout tendencies and a section of sturdy Scottish stock, he turned toward the church and in his early twenties was ordained a minister in the Presbyterian church of Canada. His forceful eloquence and knowledge of things religious as pertaining to the well-being of his flock soon gained recognition for him in the church. Considered one of the foremost Presbyterians in Canada, he was for many years Moderator of the Synod of Kingston and Toronto. At the time of his death he was the Clerk of the Kingston Presbytery of the Presbyterian Church. He conducted services throughout Ontario during the course of his long ecclesiastical career and for the past number of years was in charge of the Demorestville circuit.

He also occupied the pulpit of the Church of the Redeemer at Descronto, for a number of years.

In the late Mr. Craig was prominent in Masonic circles and years ago founded the Craig Lodge of Deseronto of which he was a Past Master and member at the time of his demise. Honored by the lodge some years ago he was made Grand Chapalin of the Grand Lodge of Ontario.

He is survived by one son and one daughter. The funeral service will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. K. P. Alberson, Picton, on Friday morning, with the Rev. F. M. Scott officiating. From there the body will be taken to Deseronto, where it will lie in state from one-thirty to two-thirty p.m. before interment takes place in Deseronto Cemetery.

MISSING GIRL

By Maryse Rutledge

Jane looked back at her with quiet, blue eyes. "I've become an impossible person," she said.

On that brilliant October morning, Elsie Forrest took in Jane's simple blue suit, and the chic but inexpensive hat tilted on her golden curls. She hesitated. "Well, of course, my dear— You are being divorced, aren't you?"

"I'm doing the divorcing," Jane cut in.

"Lorna says she's engaged to Tony." Elsie Forrest's thin face sharpened, "I haven't the faintest idea who's paying her bills now. They say her creditors are backing her— Her stars loosened, and the parting hand she gave Jane was swift and limp, as if she regretted her impulse.

But this brief meeting roused in Jane the furious ache and thirst of things forsaken, calling out from the very depths of her being. Fiercely denying them, she dressed the evening to go out with Paula.

Waiting in the living-room, he gasped when he saw her. There were pink banners of rouge on her white cheeks. Her mouth was a crimson bow against the intricate black satin daringly moulded to the sweep of her body.

Jane laughed at his stare. "Do I look like an unprincipled lady? I don't care if I do tonight." She went very close to him, with a movement of her lovely hand. "I'm tired of being alone, and waiting for what some people call freedom. Perhaps I shall love you tonight, Henri."

Henri Lanier in Paula breathed, and would have taken her in his arms, but she pushed him away.

Dinner at is Cremiere, a play, and supper afterwards at a new cabaret lately opened near the Champs Elysees. He sat silent as a man in a dream. Once at their table by the dance floor of the long gold and black room, with an exciting orchestra playing, he sat back his champagne glass, and moved to touch her hand.

"You are not playing with me, my little darling?" and that voice that could be so light and mocking trembled on a deeper note. "You are everything to me. Do you almost exist positive on qualities? You love me? Yes," he added softly, "I love you, as may be a tragedy for me."

"Why should it be?" Jane stared down at the hand on which she wore the heart-shaped moonstone ring. In its milky depths she seemed to see her father old Tom Carey, who had worked the best for her. "I'll try not to fail you," she said but there was no vibrance to it. Then, as if someone were forcing her, she raised her head and stared straight across the room at Tony. He sat alone, his back against the wall. For a second their eyes were as chained. Marks on that dark, arrogant face of reckless living. Lines bitten in from the long, slanting nose to the cynical lips.

He leaned back and deliberately lifted his glass as to a charming woman whose acquaintance in a place like this it might be easy to make.

Something like a sickness surged through Jane's blood. La Paule had seen, too, and at the insult his narrow face grew savage. He pushed back his chair and hail rose.

"Jane" said, and she hardly recognized her own voice. "I'm going over there."

La Paule straightened his slender body. "You would do that—to me?" he said. "Then you love him."

"I hate him," Jane leaned forward, her hand over his. "I'm going Henri. Tonight will cure me forever, I shall come back. It's like a disease. I've got to go," and she rose.

La Paule rose, also, with a military precision. "If you go may be a tragedy for me."

"Why should it be?" Jane stared down at the hand on which she wore the heart-shaped moonstone ring. In its milky depths she seemed to see her father old Tom Carey, who had worked the best for her. "I'll try not to fail you," she said but there was no vibrance to it. Then, as if someone were forcing her, she raised her head and stared straight across the room at Tony. He sat alone, his back against the wall. For a second their eyes were as chained. Marks on that dark, arrogant face of reckless living. Lines bitten in from the long, slanting nose to face. A few more moments of this and she would hate him. Lead him on to where she wanted him, and then—!

She said: "Henri is very charming, but that doesn't make him my lover." In turn she raised her glass. "To anything that may please you tonight. If I happen to—"

"My C——, you have changed!" Tony's fingers tightened around the stem of his wine glass. "Am I to understand that if, in your new role, you do please me, I could persuade you to remain with me—a while?"

Jane allowed smoke to trail between them. "You notice that I'm not wearing a wedding ring," she said. "So I'm free, am I not?"

"You begin to intrigue me," he said abruptly. "Shall we dance?"

Jane, shrugged herself up, her heart racing. Yes, she would make him want her, and then she would leave. She dared not look towards La Paule. Playing with fire—with

CYCLIST KNOCKED TO PAVEMENT BY TORONTO CAR

Paul LaRue Suffers Head Lacerations and Shaking up

NO LIGHT ON CYCLE

Paul LaRue, Herchimer Ave., sustained head lacerations and a general shaking up after being knocked off his bicycle at the intersection of Coleman and West Main Sts., shortly before 8.30 p.m. last evening when an automobile driven by Harold M. Bloor, Toronto, collided with the cyclist. Young La Rue was removed to the surgery of Dr. G. S. Creed by Mr. Bloor where his injuries received medical attention.

Mr. Bloor was proceeding northerly on Coleman Street and was about to turn left into West Main Street, when the front of his motor car struck young La Rue's bicycle, hurling the lad to the pavement. P. C. Taylor and Motorcycle Policeman Sam Irvine hastened to the scene and upon investigating decided that La Rue was riding a bicycle without a lighted lamp attached, contrary to the Highway Traffic Act. Mr. Bloor stopped his motor car immediately after hearing the impact and rendered what assistance he could, later taking the lad to the doctor. Mr. Bloor contended he did not see the cyclist until after he heard the impact, as there was no light displayed on the "bike".

Young La Rue sustained two cuts on the right side of the head and suffered a general shaking up. The front wheel, forks and frame of the bicycle were badly damaged.

GOLDEN WEDDING IS CELEBRATED

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Ford of Frankford Observe Anniversary

Frankford, Sept. 16 (Special) — The fiftieth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Ford was celebrated at their home here in Frankford on Sunday, September 12th, 1937.

On September 12th, 1887, Mr. Arthur Ford, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Ford of Frankford, and Miss Aldora Hey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Hey, of Carnahan, were united in marriage at Trenton, the ceremony being performed by the Rev. W. Young, and the witness were Mr. J. B. Young and Olive McColl.

Except for about nine years' residence at Carnahan, where Mr. Ford was engaged at cheese-making their married life so far has been spent in the village of Frankford where Mr. Ford was employed for many years in the paper-making industry. He is now at the age of 76 years and Mrs. Ford is 73.

There were seven children born to them, two of whom died in early childhood and one son Albert who at the age of 18 years enlisted with the 155th battalion and was killed overseas on April 2nd, 1918 in the vicinity of Passchendaele. There are now living four daughters, Mrs. Harry Bush and Mrs. Wm. Pollard of Frankford, and Mrs. Walter Gainforth and Mrs. Geo. Little of Trenton. On Sunday, Sept. 12th they with their husbands and children, and Mrs. Geo. Wessel, of Frankford, a sister of Mrs. Ford, met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ford to celebrate the occasion of their Golden Wedding anniversary.

The festal table around which they gathered at the noon hour was very prettily decorated with gold colored streamers from each corner to a central roseate at the ceiling, under which stood golden hued candles in tall polished brass candlesticks. The dining room was also made resplendent by the beautiful display of gladioli and basketfuls and bouquets of other flowers which were showered on them by their many friends. Amidst this lovely scene and surrounded by their children and their family the bride and groom of "fifty years" enjoyed a delicious repast prepared in honor of the occasion.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Ford are at present enjoying good health and during the afternoon and evening received the congratulations and best wishes of many friends of the village who called at their residence.

Mr. and Mrs. Ford were the recipients of several gifts, including pieces of gold. Several times was the wish expressed that they might live to enjoy many more years of wedded happiness.

PLANES SALUTE DEAD AVIATOR

Impressive Military Rites Held For Flt. Lieut. C. W. Morrison

With three Royal Canadian Air Force planes dipping their wings in reverent salute, the funeral cortege of Flight Lieutenant Claude W. Morrison, R.C.A.F., officer, who died in the Belleville General Hospital last night as the result of injuries received in a motor accident, was held from Martin's Funeral Home to the Canadian National Cemetery here, with full military honors at noon today.

With arms reversed and muffled drums a detachment of men and officers from the Trenton base of the Royal Canadian Air Force, headed the funeral procession, with the R.C.A.F. band playing the Dead March in Saul, followed by a military motor lorry bearing the coffin of the deceased officer, draped with a Union Jack. During the funeral procession that was witnessed by hundreds of bare-headed citizens, three R.C.A.F. planes droned above and occasionally dipped their wings in salute to the dead officer of the Air Service. Four uniformed Motorcycle Police officers led the procession and lagged all moving traffic on Bridge and Front streets during the passing of the cortege.

Military Honors Paid

Local officers of the militia paid their respects and pronounced a farewell, they being Lieut. Col. A. B. Wrinble, Lieut. Col. B. C. Donnelly, M.C., and Major R. Alford with Inspector Frank Gardner representing the Ontario Provincial Police in the procession. The procession continued to the C.N.R. station where the body of the late Flight Lieutenant Morrison was placed aboard a train enroute to Montreal for burial from the home of his family at Mount Royal.

A brief service was conducted in the chapel at the funeral home by Major the Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne, Vicar of St. Thomas' Church and Chaplain of the 49th Light Infantry (Tank).

The bearers consisted of members of the R.C.A.F. funeral party, who paraded conventionally with each side of the gun carriage. As the C.N.R. train, bearing their late officer, steamed out of the Belleville station, a last reverent salute was given by the three aeroplanes, piloted by three members of Flight Lieut. Morrison's squadron.

ARRAY OF COLLEGE TALENT TRYING FOR BERTHS ON TORONTO ARGONAUTS

When the Argonaut football club takes the field for its first exhibition game on Sept. 25 there will be a considerable number of new faces on the line-up, prominent among them several former college stars. One of the best kickers in the eastern college group last season was Bob Lebster of Varsity, who is trying out for Argos this year and if he makes the grade will strengthen a weak spot of the last two seasons. When at top form he is a tremendous kicker and hoists the ball far and high. He is seen here as he lifted one down the field. Queen's University has three former stars trying out for the Argo squad. They are "Curly" Krug, top left, smart plunger and passer, Johnny Edwards, lower left, who will add power to both to the offence and defence, and Harry Sunshine, right. Sunshine plays on the line and probably be used to back up the centre of the Argo line, if he makes the grade. He is a hard tackler and rarely wears a helmet.

WHERE EUROPEAN WARSHIPS WILL PATROL MEDITERRANEAN

European powers, meeting at Nyon, Switzerland, on the "submarine piracy" crisis in the Mediterranean, have agreed on the allotted policing zones for each nation in an effort to track down the phantom craft. The map above shows the policing zones allotted to the various nations. British and French admirals in the Mediterranean have been ordered to put a formidable fleet of almost 100 warships into action following the signing of the anti-piracy pact by nine nations. The pact stipulates that naval forces of the participating nations will "counter-attack" any submarines attacking merchant ships, excepting those belonging to either of the Spanish parties now at war, contrary to international law.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Sept. 16—(CP)—Despite slow action the Toronto market displayed strength today and the indices were narrowly higher at the close. Base metals struggled along under the handicap of sharply lower metal prices, and were holding as many gains as losses at the close. Western oils had a sizeable rally on fair volume and a group of the secondary golds stepped up to new high prices for the current recovery. Aggregate volume was the lowest of the week.

Moneta rose to 1.77 for a gain of 16 cents. Other busy medium-priced golds showed advances were McLeod-Cockshutt, Pickle Crow, Sladen, Powell Rouyn, Hollinger and Lake, O'Brien, Central Patricia, Hard Rock Mines and Little Long Lac and among the issues under the dollar mark to move up a few cents each were Lapa Cadillac, Bankfield, Gillies Lake, Gunnar, Darkwater and Jellicoe.

Senior base metals were lower in the early session but later tightened up near the close to show fractional gains for Nickel, Noranda and Hudson Bay and about a point for consolidated Smelters. Sherritt, Castle and Eldorado were higher.

Early gains in the industrial section were trimmed but the balance was on the up side at the close in the food, steel, building and miscellaneous groups.

Paper issues were heavy, Great Lakes Pfd. and Abitibi Pfd. lost 1 to 1-2 each and the common issues were unchanged to slightly lower.

NEW YORK STOCKS

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—(AP)—Efforts to rally the stock market met with negative success today as copper issues, hit by growing production and waning consumption, slipped their moorings.

MARKET COMMENT

At this bewildering stage, when practically every issue is selling at a substantial discount from levels of only a few weeks ago, it is satisfying to know that several stocks were able to hold their own. To mention four issues, there are Bell Telephone, Imperial Tobacco, McColl-Frontenac and National Breweries.

Imperial Tobacco common is another well-seasoned dividend payer. Payments have been made to shareholders since 1912 and in recent years the company paid 6 3-4 cents quarterly plus 17 1-3 cents additional in the final quarter, making in all 44 cents. The current rate is somewhat obscure but it appears that an increase has been put into effect. The company is now paying 10 cents quarterly and 15 is suggested. Either 12 1-2 or 22 1-2 cents will be paid in the final quarter, which will make total payments either 57 1-2 or 62 1-2 cents. Earnings in 1936 amounted to 86 cents against 91 cents in 1935 and 86 cents in 1934 and 1933. The company's large surplus and very strong working capital make it feasible to pay out all or more than all, earnings for dividends.

ORANGE LODGE OF ONTARIO W. OPPOSES PREMIER

Manifesto Calls on Members to Vote Against Hepburn Candidates

VIEW IN EAST

Toronto, Sept. 16—(CP)—A manifesto issued today by the Grand Orange Lodge of Ontario West called upon Orangemen to vote against Premier Hepburn's Liberal candidates in the Oct. 6 election.

The document, signed by W. J. Miller, Grand Master, and C. H. Carrick, Chairman of the Legislation Committee, said:

"A vote for Premier Hepburn and those members of his government who supported the iniquitous Separate School legislation (Bill 136) is a vote for the Separate Schools. Beware a duration of the entire Act system that will place school taxes in so that be pilfered for the benefit of Roman Catholic schools."

Only reference in the Conservative party was-this: "The Conservative convention was pledged to the support of the public schools. That gathering rang with a clarion note for the protection of our school system."

View in Ontario East

Ottawa, Sept. 16—(CP)— Stanley G. Hudson, Deputy Grand Master of the Orange Lodge for Ontario East, said today he believed Orangemen in this part of the province would support any government that stood for the public school system, which would uphold its principles and guard its interests in the future.

He was commenting on a despatch from Toronto which said a manifesto issued by the Grand Orange Lodge of Ontario West, called upon Orangemen to vote against Premier Hepburn's Liberal government candidates in the Oct. 6 election.

Hudson said no definite instructions were issued by the Grand Orange Lodge of Ontario East as to what stand they should take on the forthcoming provincial election. He believed however, Orangemen in Ontario East would support only the government that stood for the upholding of the public school system.

Everet Mitchell, Lindsay, Ont., is Grand Master for Ontario East.

FREIGHTER CREW DEMAND BONUS

San Pedro, Calif., Sept. 16 (AP)—The China-bound freighter Wichita, laden with grain and flour, today was anchored in the roadstead here today and crewmen asserted her sailing would be disadvantaged before the craft resumed its journey.

Port officials and the American-Pioneer line refused to say whether the recent arms embargo by President Roosevelt would be applied to the Wichita.

In addition to the nineteen Bellanca bombers, all equipped with machine guns, the vessel has barbed wire and scrap metal consigned to China.

Crew members announced they would not proceed unless paid a war bonus of $1,000 each. Stevedores of the Wichita in the roadstead for refueling instead of at San Pedro docks was interpreted as a move to circumvent a possible sit-down strike.

The Wichita has been from Baltimore with an east coast crew. Clarence Hunt, executive secretary of the International Seamen's Union Council of the Pacific Maritime Federation, said local unions would not supply replacements if the crew quit.

The council is "prepared to carry out the financial wishes to the letter," Hunt said.

Oshawa Strike

During the session the General Motors strike the Premier played politics Mr. Rowe said at Sudbury. The government had failed in the matter of Oshawa during the strike.

"Premier Hepburn could not plead politics and left it for the union to settle labor disputes and, to put it roughly, minded his own business as Premier. I have reason to believe the strike could have been settled, could have been settled before Christmas last year and one week before it was," he continued.

"Premier Hepburn's leader, who said behavored collective bargaining and believed in the individually right to work principles, said he would not recall Canadian unions. However if Premier Motory could bring the Canada foreign exports and Mr. Hepburn could bring foreign capital to Canada labor should be able to engage any experts it wished.

"Let's get back to first tests

Ir. Rowe predicted the Liberals would not elect more than 30 members in the Oct. 6 voting. He reaffirmed opposition after a survey of th province, the Conservative leadership.

In support of the pulpwood industry would be forthcoming from a Conservative government, Mr. Liberals are a 14,000 square-mile timber limit to the United States and agreed to build a $250,000 road into th district.

Canadian workmen would cut the timber but it would be processed by United States workers at higher pres. Mr. Rowe declared if elected th government would investigate it's why Canadian mills were closed while pulpwood was exported.

TWO OCCUPANTS DROWNED IN CAR

Vehicle Plunged Into Louise Basin at Quebec at Midnight

Quebec, Sept. 16—(CP)— Bodies of Ovila Turcotte of Limoloni Ward, Quebec, and an unidentified woman were found in an automobile raised today from the bottom of Louise Basin, where it plunged just after midnight.

Edouard Laverdiere, a railroad brakeman, was the only witness as the car plunged over the south, wall of the slip basin on Quebec's harbor front. In more than 30 feet of water and partly covered with mud, the machine was discovered by Alphonse Roy, harbor commission diver who searched more than two hours.

DOCTOR WITNESS

Dr. Platt explained that ephedrine relaxed the bronchial muscles of the lungs, raised blood pressure and facilitated breathing.

"I have taken ephedrine for ten years," the doctor answered.

About 1:45 a.m. on July 11, Dr. Platt said he gave Crosley one dial tablet in two doses. Crosley was acting "very nervous" at the time and said he wanted something to make him sleep.

"People Bothering Him"

"Those people are bothering me behind my cell," Crosley said, and named "McCormick and Toomey" when asked who were "those people". the doctor testified. He also told the doctor that he (Platt) was aware McCormick and Toomey tried to dissuade him from giving Crosley medicine. Crosley, the doctor said, complained of rats, snakes and mice in his cell.

Dr. Platt told of Crosley showing him a letter he wrote to the Department of Justice at Ottawa asking for protection of his sentence. About two months before the stabbing, Crosley told Dr. Platt his plea for clemency had been refused, and said: "I don't care. I'll show them now".

Says Crosley Was Crew.

When asked to explain what he meant, Dr. Platt testified Crosley answered: "Those people that run things."

After that incident, Dr. Platt said Crosley was content and wanted more medicine. The convict expressed to Dr. Platt several times a disliking for Toomey, because he wouldn't give him medicine from the medicine wagon and the other prisoners.

The Toomey Dr. Platt mentioned was R. Toomey, a prison hospital overseer, who was stabbed and seriously wounded by Crosley before the convict allegedly attacked McCormick.

On more than one occasion, the doctor testified, Crosley indicated he would "fix" or get even with Toomey and McCormick. The doctor said this was on the stand when court adjourned for lunch.

TWO ARRESTS SEQUEL TO PICTON ROBBERY

Running Gun - Fight as Trenton Police Pursue Trio at 85 Miles an Hour

Fugitives Abandon Car, Flee to Woods at Brighton

POSSE COMBS DISTRICT

Two Arrests Made Few Hours Later by Provincial Police

Two men were under arrest at Brighton today while police aided by a posse of farmers searched surrounding bush country for a third after police and three gunmen in a stolen motor car exchanged shots in a 90-mile-an-hour chase along the highway between Trenton and Brighton early this morning.

The chase began at Trenton where police were advised to watch for three men who broke into Picton Brewers' Warehouse and got away with thirty to forty pint cases of beer.

Nine miles west of Trenton in the northern section of Brighton, the gunmen spotted their car into a lane and fled on foot.

One of the men was captured nearby. He was armed.

The second man, accosted with a wounded right arm, was captured at nearby Colborne. It was not known how he injured his arm, but police said it was not a bullet wound.

During the highway chase, the bandit car was hit by a flying bullet.

One of the arrested men gave his name to the police as Fred Sherratt of Toronto, Inspector Gardner, who was in charge of the search, stated this afternoon. The other man, he said, refused to give his name to the police.

The man who gave his name as Stevens was captured in the bush one mile west of Brighton by Police Constables MacBrien of Belleville and Cagne of Brighton. The unidentified man was taken in Colborne by Sergt. Harry Thompson and Constable Aldrich after he had drawn a gun to show fight, they said. During the gun battle between the officers and men, one of the two made his escape. The captured unidentified man stated a member of the group of canning factory employees who had rushed to the assistance of the police with the barrel of his gun before he was subdued by officers in a civilian who wounded him on the arm with a pitchfork, the police said later today.

Police are now combing the district for the second escaped and is thought to be in hiding.

No charges so far have been laid, it is understood.

Why the Weather?

Autumn coloring! The beautiful display of our autumn tints in the fall is due in part to a deficiency of light and heat for the plant world does leaves, however, die and wither after they have performed their function and before the autumn frosts. The leaves of evergreens do too, but only a few at a time and throughout the year. In withering many of the leaves like maple turn to beautiful and varied tints which are occasioned by discirculation in the leaves and the higher oxidation of the chlorophyll, which gives a green coloring matter of leaves.

Cast - Off - Clothing And Diaper Washing Cause Family Row

New York, Sept. 17.—(CP)—Diapers have no place in man's previous and yet wearing cast-off clothing is embittering to a wife, Supreme Court Justice Henry G. Wrong observed yesterday in granting separation and custody of two children to Mrs. Sally Mead.

Mrs. Mead filed action for separation charging she had to wear hand-me-downs. Her husband, Edward Mead filed counter action on the grounds that he was a diaper.

Attorneys warned jack-in-hat-and-party justified in complaining, "the husband in that he was called upon to do these things which mens and tradition allot as a duty of a wife," and the wife in that her husband failed adequately to provide for her.

REAR-END MOTOR CRASH KILLS ONE, INJURES THREE

Blythe Man Thrown Thru Windshield of Speeding Car

CAR BADLY WRECKED

Chatham, Ont., Sept. 17 (CP)—Leonard Davis, 34, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Davis, Blythe, was killed and three others injured in a rear end motor car crash occurring on highway eight miles east of Wheatley last midnight.

Roy Doherty, 36, of Blythe, suffered a fractured hip and was taken to Leamington Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Manson Gosnell of R. R. No. 1, Wheatley, were taken to the Leamington Hospital. Mr. Gosnell has a broken nose, and facial and body injuries. Mrs. Gosnell suffered a broken collar bone, cuts and bruises.

Davis received a fractured skull, multiple cuts and bruises and died in Leamington Hospital.

According to information obtained by Constable Jack Carpenter of Blenheim, the accident occurred close to the farm of Mr. Gosnell on the highway. Mr. Gosnell was turning home, with Mr. Gosnell at the wheel. Noticing a fast travelling car approaching in the rear, Mr. Gosnell hesitated to make the turn into the driveway. The car travelling at speed, decided to drive slowly along until the car had passed him. The car, allegedly driven by Doherty, smashed into the rear of Gospell's car.

Davis was thrown through the windshield of Doherty's car, the force of the collision ripped off the roof and the left side of the Gosnell car. The car driven by Doherty was wrecked.

Arrangements are being made for an inquest.

Hon. Dr. Faulkner Defines Measures in War on Disease

Minister of Health Speaks At Rally Held in Trenton

W. A. FRASER SPEAKS

Trenton, Sept. 17— (Special) — Hon. Dr. Faulkner, Minister of Health and Liberal candidate for West Hastings, asked Earl Rowe, Conservative party leader, to show also one munitions hotel in Ontario, addressing a gathering in the Capitol Theatre here last night.

"If we listen when he speaks in their statements to lead our province into ruin and ruin, young and women like a bunch of blind sheep." Disbanding of the government's film plant that cost the provincial government over one million dollars, has provided a community centre serving a greater purpose without any cost. It was a gift from the government," he said. Dr. Faulkner hinted that the provincial government would take over the portion of the Trent River Valley owned by the town if the Government was returned.

Larger School Grants

This year the school grants were increased ten per cent and both Public and Separate institutions benefited.

"Mr. Rowe says that I have curtailed relief expenditures. After I was voted into power in 1934, the district Medical Officers of Health were stimulated along the provincial government $40,000 annually and the money thus saved to the political heelers of the Ferguson and Henry regimes, is being put to a great purpose. It is my hope and intention to lower the contributions made in the municipalities. We have established clinics in Ottawa, Belleville, Napanee and Picton. This year approximately 12,000 patients were examined to 4,000 in 1933. Travelling clinics are maintained as a cost of $10,000 a year. From 1919 to 1934 $385,000 was given towards capital expenditure, building hospitals for consumptives, as compared with $768,000 including provisions for 380 new beds for persons still outside hospitals in this province spent since the Hepburn government took office. Dr. Faulkner promised that if he was returned on October 14th (Continued on page seven).

Freight Clears Woman Lying Between Rails

Train Crew Discovers Jean Bertram Too Late to Stop Before Engine and Two Cars Pass Over — Belief Held Critical Injuries Caused by Earlier Train

Oshawa, Ont., Sept. 17 (CP)—Critically injured about the head and chest, Jean Bertram, 35, formerly of Parkhill, was removed from beneath a Canadian Pacific Railway freight train west of here last night. She suffered concussion, a deep scalp wound and possibly a fractured skull. Said Dr. F. G. Rundle, attending, she were fractured and had pierced the lung. Dr. Rundle held hopes for her recovery.

The crew of a train saw the body lying between the rails as they approached Oshawa. The engineer tried to stop but did not succeed until the locomotive and several cars had passed over her.

The crew of the train believed their train had cleared her and that she must have been injured by a previous train.

Physicians from Ontario Hospital recognized her as a former patient of Ontario Hospital who was discharged three months ago.

She was boarding at a home in Whitby not far from the hospital.

Moral Issues Still Exist Between Nations, Says Kent

Queen's Principal Attacks Assertion of Rt. Rev. Dr. Roberts

RAPE OF CHINA CITED

Kingston, Ont., Sept. 17 (CP)—Dr. H. Kent, Principal of Queen's Theological College, today criticized an assertion by Rt. Rev. Richmond Roberts, former Moderator of the United Church, that there has been there be "no prayers for victory in the next war".

Dr. Roberts, pastor of Sherbourne United Church, Toronto, made the statement Wednesday at Hartford, Conn., in addressing the twentieth annual pastors' conference at Hartford Seminary.

"Dr. Roberts has no right to tell a United States audience that there will be no prayers for victory in the next war," said Dr. Kent. "Certainly prayers are offered are between the soul and God. Men's hands may be and have been tied and their mouths closed by violence, but not even Hitler can stop pious Germans from praying.

"Words such as those reported to have been used by Dr. Roberts are only possible in the mouth of some one who sits by while other people may be in agony.

Dr. Roberts' words mean that there are no longer any moral issues between nations. The brutal rape of China by Japan is the greatest outrage that has happened since the invention of Belgium by Hitler.

"In August, 1914, Dr. Roberts was one of eleven British clergy who sent a protest against the Germans in the name of Christianity against the wrongs done to Belgium. Are slaughtered Chinese of less value in God's sight than Belgians?"

SAYS ONTARIO'S FINANCES GOOD

Sound Business Responsible Hepburn Tells Electors

Beaverton, Ont., Sept. 17 (CP)—As a result of the financial policies of the present government, Ontario occupies a more enviable position than "any other province in Canada or any state in the American republic," Premier Hillcliff Hepburn said here last night.

He had no apologies for collecting revenue, he said. But there was a difference between collecting revenue and increasing taxation, with which Conservative Leader Earl Rowe had charged him. Ontario's budget was balanced simply by prudent business policies, Mr. Hepburn declared.

Industrial Peace.

Ontario, he said, was enjoying industrial peace and steadily rising export trade, in contrast to disorder prevailing in the United States which left American industry unable to guarantee delivery of goods outside the country.

Premier Hepburn warned the people of Ontario not to be misled into thinking the Committee for Industrial Organization had abandoned designs on Ontario. He claimed defeat of the Hepburn government would be a calamity and a moral victory for John L. Lewis, C.I.O. head.

He pointed to the recent move by Homer Martin, president of the United Automobile Workers of America, to purge the Union's ranks of Communists. Surely then Canadian labor should not be criticized for refraining foreign interference, he said.

Canadian labor organizations and "their recognized affiliation, the American Federation of Labor," offered ample scope for organization activities.

SKULL DISEASE WORRIES DOCTORS

Chief Symptom is a Great Thickening of Skull —No Cause Found

MOSTLY IN WOMEN

By STEPHEN J. McDONOUGH

Chicago, Sept. 17 (AP)—A new skull disease which is complete mystery to medical science was reported today to the Fifth International Congress of Radiology.

Dr. Sherwood Moore of St. Louis, Mo., said he had found the bone disease in the X-ray pictures of 220 persons out of 6,650 he had examined. He said there was no cause for its development and only partial treatment.

It is known as "hysterosis" of four kinds and its chief symptom is a tremendous thickening of the skull—sometimes five times the normal bony covering of the brain. Sometimes the bones of the face change, bones at the base of the skull and even a pressure on the brain.

This disease should always be suspected in any person who has abnormally fat, Dr. Moore told Radiologists attending the closing meeting of the congress, but this does not indicate that more than a small percentage of fat people have it.

The disease is found more frequently among inmates of insane asylums and similar state institutions, Dr. Moore said. Approximately 80 per cent of all the cases occur in women, he added, and this fact may furnish a clue to what the cause is.

"I cannot yet prove this," Dr. Moore said, "and it is only offered as a theory. But it may be that some women apparently being capable of bearing children cannot do so for one reason or another.

Dr. Moore made his solution available for building a baby's bones and teeth may be depleted and the skull and other surplus of other body-building materials may serve to upset the other glandular balance that may lead to the symptoms of obesity, nervousness, and other disturbances.

The only treatment now available, he added is relief of the fat condition and the muscular weakness.

MINING, FARMING PROMISED AID

Hon. Earl Rowe Addresses Meetings in Northern Ontario

By CP Staff Writer

Kirkland Lake, Ont., Sept. 17. (CP)—Northern Ontario farmers and the country's great mining industry could expect support from the Conservative party if it attains power, Hon. Earl Rowe told audiences at meetings yesterday. He made four addresses in the Haileybury, New Liskeard and Kirkland Lake.

Mr. Rowe spoke Tuesday at Huntsville and Parry Sound, said the farmers would receive a square deal "which you have not had for three years."

No New Mining Tax

He was opposed to any further taxes on the mining industry, he said at Kirkland Lake, if it would "defeat the purpose for which they (Continued on Page Nine)

CROSLEY TAKEN OUT OF COURT FOR INTERRUPTING

Negro on Trial For Murder Says "Guards Are Lying"

BREAKS INTO SOBS

Doctor Gives Opinion Accused Sane

Kingston, Ont., Sept. 17.—(CP)—Chester Crosley today cried out "these guards are lying" in the courtroom where he is being tried for the second time for the murder of Guard John McCormick of Kingston Penitentiary.

Mr. Justice Nicol Jeffrey ordered Crosley from the courtroom after a second interruption when the 26-year-old Negro leaped to his feet, crying, and turned towards the rest of the prisoner's box.

"I'm getting out of here," he sobbed. "You all know these guards have been plotting, plotting, plotting to try and get a rope around my neck. But they're lying. I'm a liar if the man knows me. They're swearing a man's life away."

Crosley broke into tears, court-room attendants said.

The Judge's Comment

Justice Jeffrey then reminded both defence counsel that any more exhibitions in court would mean trial would continue without the prisoner being present.

Dr. Garfield Platt testifying for the crown, was on the witness stand when court resumed. He said in re-examination by C. Snyder, K.C., no inmate of Kingston Prison or Quebec had pronounced Crosley insane.

Mr. Snyder read a report from Dr. T. D. Rockwood of the Ontario Hospital, Rockwood, submitted April 14, 1933, concerning Crosley's condition. Dr. Platt replied he supported Dr. Platt was asked if Dr. Cumberland had found Crosley sane or insane and he replied, "sane."

Jury Reports

The jury was asked to retire while Mr. Justice Jeffrey considered the admissibility of a report on Crosley to Dr. A. J. Riddell. When court resumed, no ruling had been made by Mr. Justice.

Dr. Platt said that when Crosley was admitted to the padded cell he told him he could not sleep. He had brew, made from rhubarb. His appetite was poor, but he continued having been consumed. Dr. Platt said he had no reason for the source of the home brew.

In the early part of June 1936, Dr. Platt said, he had seen Crosley. Crosley, the prisoner had told Dr. Platt he thought he "had trouble with McCormick and Toomey that afternoon if he hadn't been defended at Court."

Thinks Crosley Sane

Dr. Platt said he had come to the conclusion after the interview prepared by Mr. Snyder that Crosley was sane.

Crosley, silent and sullen through the trial, anxiously leaned over on to the press table and began (Continued On Page Nine)

Warships Withdrawn From Patrol of Coast To Sweep Pirate Subs

Nations However Stand by Non-Intervention Agreement

NEUTRAL OBSERVERS

Land Control Now Operating Along Franco-Spanish Border

By GEORGE HAMBLETON

London, Sept. 17 (CP) Dublin—The naval ring round Spain is ended. Great Britain and France, acting in concert, today notified members of the Spanish non-intervention committee that their warships engaged in patrolling the Spanish coast would be withdrawn. They will be employed in the task of hunting submarines out of the Mediterranean.

The naval ring round Spain was part of the non-intervention scheme to prevent shipment of arms to Spain. The Spanish coast was divided into sectors patrolled by General Britain and France and Germany, Britain, Germany and Italy withdrew leaving gaps. The withdrawal of the British and French ships ends the ring completely.

Agreement Carried.

Under the non-intervention agreement ships of signatory powers proceeding to Spain still will be required to carry a neutral observer, who will report that they are carrying no war material. The purpose of the naval patrol was to check up on the special ships so that they could have had an observer on board.

Non-intervention patrols being only along the Franco-Spanish frontier. Control along the Portuguese sector was suspended some time ago although the Portuguese gave assurance of full liberation to respect the non-intervention agreement.

Non-Intervention Still Policy.

British circles emphasize that the withdrawal from the Spanish naval patrol does not mean withdrawal from non-intervention. Great Britain is as firmly committed as ever that non-intervention in Spain is the proper course.

But the Nyon agreement presents a more pressing problem. Since the withdrawal of Italy and Germany from the Spanish patrol, it is felt, Italy may can be more usefully assisted in making the Mediterranean highways safe for merchant ships.

Destroyers withdrawn from round Spain will therefore be employed against pirate submarines from the middle sea. It is expected about 40 destroyers will be taken off and employed. France holds the same views as Great Britain and takes the same course.

Future Possibilities.

Now observing eyes will closely watch Premier Mussolini's next move in Spain. Will he, as frequently rumored, send sufficient large numbers to Spain to substantially remake victory for General Franco certain before winter. If he does, it is expected France will reply, by throwing the Catalonia frontier open to shipments of war materials," the last effective non-intervention control will be brought to an end.

CAUTION NEEDED WARNS M. O. H.

Toronto Officer Says Parents Fail to Keep Children Out of Crowds

Toronto, Sept. 17 (CP)—A dwindling case-total in the infantile paralysis epidemic brought public health authorities today warning that the end is not in sight and that vigilance and care must not be relaxed.

Epidemic largely in Ontario, the disease spread to 17 cases the past day and total cases for Canada stood today at more than 1,800 since early June, of which 1,410 cases have been in Ontario. The national death toll was 88 but no deaths have occurred since last week-end.

In Toronto, Dr. Gordon Jackson, Medical Officer of Health, warned: "There is a growing fear in my mind that parents are becoming a little forgetful of repeated admonitions to keep children away from crowds." He said the situation was not yet at the end, though "there are definite signs of betterment in the situation."

Of Ontario's total, 530 cases were in Toronto which reported fifteen new cases yesterday. Twenty-six of the forty-seven deaths in Ontario have occurred in the Toronto district. New cases also were reported in a half-dozen other Ontario cities and towns.

Percy Ford is Steward And Frank Hall Caretaker

Percy Ford was appointed to the position of steward and Frank Hall, caretaker of the Memorial Hall at an executive meeting of the local post of the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada, Post No. 301, held in the Memorial Hall last evening. necessitated his resigning from the position of President of the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada, a position he was elected to by acclamation at a convention meeting held in the Memorial Hall last week.

Mr. Ford's resignation leaves the position of president open for nomination, with his successor to be named at the next executive meeting of the Post, to be held the second Thursday in October.

Plans for the conventional monthly meetings of the Belleville Post of the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada will soon be announced at the next convocation.

Magistrate Butler gave sentence this time, 14 days in jail, was His Worship's reply.

Patrick Was Another Chance

Patrick McVeigh, another transient, appeared next with similar application and pleaded guilty. "He was drunk, another charge," Chief Kidd said, "and was very much disturbed when he was arrested," commented Chief Kidd.

"Wasn't this man in the court last month?" asked Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., as he scrutinized the list of names on the clerk's docket. "Yes, sir, but that was only a charge of vagrancy. He too, only got 14 days in jail yesterday. In this man was convicted of intoxication on Aug. 9th last, making this a second offence," added Chief Kidd.

"Give me a chance to get out of town, I'd like to get a job," pleaded McVeigh.

"That's what you said the last time you appeared here. I can find no alternative under the L.C.A. On a second offence charge the minimum fine is $50.00 and costs or one month in default of payment. McVeigh sat down with a sigh, demonstrating he had no intention of meeting the financial assessment.

Charged With Assault

Appearing for judgment on a charge of assaulting Burton Charlton, Raymond Bailey was given three months suspended sentence, providing he paid the costs of the court. In summing up the case before giving his judgment, His Worship remarked: "I think Charlton may have started this trouble, but the accused man had no business striking him." P. Pudding, local barrister appearing for Bailey, asked for time in which to raise the fine.

Had No License

Patrick Trambly, Montreal peddler pleaded guilty to peddling without a license. "I didn't know I needed a license," pleaded Trambly, but without effect. A fine of ten dollars and costs was imposed and in default of distress, one month in the county jail. The fine was to be applied in default. "This man was going from house to house trying to sell a disinfectant and because abusive when householders declined to purchase his wares," informed Chief Kidd.

After examining the goods Trambly had for sale, Crown Attorney Donnan remarked: "If you made very many sales of that stuff you should be a rich man. What do you make on the product, about 500 percent profit?" asked Mr. Donnan. A shrug of the shoulders was all Trambly returned as he was led from the court room.

EXECUTOR BOOTH ESTATE ANSWERS PREM. HEPBURN

$4,280,000 Paid in 1927—Succession Duty Was Considered Onerous

NO WORD FROM GOVT.

Ottawa, Sept. 17 (CP)—C. Jackson Booth, an executor of the estate of the late J. R. Booth, issued a statement last night in connection with a speech by Premier Hepburn at Port Hope last night in which the Premier said the estate would be investigated for $2,500,000 succession duties the Government claims are unpaid.

Mr. Jackson Booth's statement said:

In justice to the executors and heirs of the late Mr. J. R. Booth we feel the following facts should be made public in view of Mr. Hepburn's remarks at Port Hope on Sept. 15th.

The succession duty on the estate of the late Mr. Booth was settled with the Treasury Department in Toronto in 1927, and the settlement accepted as a most considerate one by the executors and executive. However, we accepted it and the succession duty, amounting to $4,280,000, was paid and the matter closed.

"Since May of this year the Treasury Department auditors have been investigating the affairs of the estate. Every facility has been afforded them and a recent letter from the Succession Duty Office accepted as satisfactory by our co-operation.

Our heirs and only intimation that the Government had any further claims on the estate was contained in the Budget speech. No demand or claim of any kind has been made on us to date and we are entirely in the dark as to the grounds on which the Government's claims are based.

POLICE COURT

THREE TRANSIENTS GIVEN JAIL TERMS

"He was released from the county jail only yesterday morning after serving seven days for the same offence, and we found him sleeping in the straw in the corner of the streets last night," stated Chief Constable Alex. Kidd when introducing a transient, who gave his name as William Magee, no home before Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C. at the opening of today's police court. Magee pleaded guilty to a charge of vagrancy.

Magistrate Butler gave sentence this time, 14 days in jail," was His Worship's reply.

Patrick Was Another Chance

Patrick McVeigh, another transient, appeared next with similar application and pleaded guilty. "He was drunk, another charge," Chief Kidd said, "and was very much disturbed when he was arrested," commented Chief Kidd.

"Wasn't this man in the court last month?" asked Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., as he scrutinized the list of names on the clerk's docket. "Yes, sir, but that was only a charge of vagrancy. Running Gun Fight

Trenton, Sept. 17 (Special)—Trenton police fought a running gun fight as their car sped at the rate of 90 to 95 miles an hour over the highway from Trenton to Brighton as they chased three men in a car containing some thirty to forty cases of beer stolen at the Picton Brewery warehouse early this morning.

The fugitives entering Brighton, could not make the turn and went straight through, and finding themselves in a side street, turned north, crossing the highway and, were forced to abandon their car and the beer some distance north of Brighton. The three men escaped into the bush where they were later sought by the member of the Provincial Police Force, headed by Inspector Frank Gardner of Belleville. Six men are in the search party. Two men were arrested by the posse.

About four-fifteen this morning the Trenton police received a telephone call from Picton asking them to be on the lookout for a car and stolen beer. Constable Frank Lozo with Constable Jack Taylor, driving the Trenton police patrol car pulled on Dundas Street on the highway at Trenton, as the wanted car came along the police accosted the occupants but the only response was that the fleeing car attempted to drive the police car off the road, and forced them towards the north. The bandits fled westward over the highway.

Shooting Begins

West of the town Constable Lozo pulled his gun with the intention of puncturing the tire of the car ahead. The bullet hit the right front fender. Then he fired a shot at the back of the car and all the trunk. It was not long before one of the three men in the fleeing automobile fired through the glass of the rear window at the police, the broken glass spraying the police window, hood and cowl of the Trenton car, but the bullet missed its aim. Two or three shots were fired from the fleeing car. Lozo shot back once at the car and the shot went into one of the cases of beer.

Car Fails to Make Turn

The chase continued at breakneck speed to the east end of Brighton where the fleeing men could not make the sharp curve. The car accordingly shot through the highway crossing over into a sideroad and then turned north, crossed the highway and fled into the road of lane to the north of the village.

Police jumped out of the car as they came close to the fugitive model and gave pursuit to the trio who had abandoned their machine and fled into the bush.

Search party was joined by the Brighton police who had in the meantime been notified by the police at Picton. Search of the woods was thoroughly made.

Provincial Police from Belleville also arrived, Inspector Gardner in charge. County Constables Jack Atkins of Brighton, and Constable Joe Gonyea of Brighton, also were in the search party.

The fugitive car with its load of stolen beer now markers "X" on the outside and inside were found a pair of plates "J".

The Dodge car was driven back to Trenton with its load of beer by police. It is considered the car was stolen in Toronto yesterday.

Robbery at Picton

Picton, Sept. 17—Forcing an entrance through the rear window of the Government warehouse in Picton, the men amassed a case containing out large staples in their efforts. Between thirty and forty cases of beer were taken shortly after four o'clock this morning. The police were made the discovery and immediately notified police depot in the district.

The thieves left the rear seat of the car they were using at the warehouse.

Phone Operator Heroine.

The fugitive car with its cargo of stolen beer bore the markers 99X73. A check of the car number 12923. These were late identified as being stolen from the car of Kenneth Andrews, proprietor of the "We Blew Inn" near Trenton.

It is believed that the markers were taken from the Andrews car by the bandits on their way to Picton from Toronto early last night. Mr. Andrews parked his car outside the inn where it remained until ten this morning at which time he discovered the loss of the license plates.

A quick thinking telephone operator Miss E. Bisnar, upon receiving a telephone message from Belleville to the effect that the bandits were tearing along the Belleville-Trenton highway, immediately called Jack Bowen, Trenton taxi driver and told him to notify the Trenton police who were guarding the entrance to the Picton-Trenton highway. The officers dashed to the main highway in time to see the bandit car flash past and they immediately gave chase.

Belleville City Police were notified at an early hour this morning. Sergeant Arthur Booth immediately despatched Constable Peter Thomson to the bay bridge. Constable Thomson arrived there in time to see an automobile flash past him and rear up the West Dundas Street hill and turn left toward Trenton.

Returning to the station, Constable Thomson via the Provincial Police car in charge of Sergeant Harry Thompson, and informed him of the direction the flying bandit car had taken.

HYDRANT CURBS RECOMMENDED

Public Utility Commission Will be Asked to Share Cost

Re-cantvening after an enjoyable summer's vacation, the Belleville City Council held its inaugural autumn committee meeting in the Mayor's office for the purpose of receiving reports and forwarding recommendations last evening.

One of the first recommendations received was one from the City Engineer recommending the immediate construction of additional curbing around the hydrants on Front and Bridge Streets. This recommendation was the result of so many motor accidents, since the introduction of the parallel parking system, the result of car fenders being damaged. The Public Utilities Commission will be asked to assume a portion of the cost of the proposed additional curbing. A recommendation providing for the erection of sewer laterals on Dundas Street was also passed, providing, however, the owners of property affected signify their intentions of connecting.

The City Engineer was instructed to advertise the intent of council to construct a sidewalk, on the west side of North Front Street from Ridley Avenue to King George School, after discussion.

It was also recommended to have the City Clerk immediately communicate with the Minister of Public Works Department of the Dominion Government, Ottawa, regarding an early visit to this city of Mr. J. L. Bisson, District Engineer of that Federal Department, regarding a study of the conditions of the Moira River in an effort to alleviate conditions that have existed in the river of late years.

The initial fall meeting of the council will be held in the Council Chambers on Monday evening.

The cheerful way you taught us to be useful and settled our difficulties, and oh, the sewing and baking and darning so unselfishly done for us; and tonight we have gathered here as an unbroken family to honor you and wish you a very happy birthday and may it please God to grant you many more.

"Our thoughts are best summed up in these lines:

"We love you for the simple grace
That adds its radiance to your face.
We love you for the gentle eyes
And for the speech that never lies.
We love you for the Christ-like way
That keeps you safely day by day.

Of how life's battle should be fought.

HE ATE ALL-BRAN AND IMPROVED WONDERFULLY

Read this voluntary letter: "In regard to your ALL-BRAN, it is marked on the package 'best as a cereal, best for cooking,' and, as far as I am concerned, you might add best for health. Since I have begun to eat it, I have improved wonderfully."—Mrs. H. E. Poole (address on request).

ALL-BRAN corrects common constipation, the cause in nearly low in "bulk." Within the body, it absorbs water, and forms a soft mass, gently sponging out the system.

ALL-BRAN also supplies vitamin B to tone up the intestines, and iron for the blood. Eat this food better than taking weakening pills and drugs!

Eat two tablespoonfuls daily, either as a cereal with milk or cream, or in recipes. In chronic cases, with each meal. Sold by all grocers. Made and guaranteed by Kellogg in London.

HYDRANTS VS. DAMAGED FENDERS

Last evening the council in committee passed a special recommendation that additional curbs be constructed around the hydrants to protect unwary motorists.

This recommendation is one that should be put into effect immediately to prevent further annoyances to car drivers.

The other day the wife of one of our young business men in the city was parking the family car along Front Street and while doing so very neatly tore a perfectly good fender from the car by coming too close to a hydrant. Now the car was a nice new one and it did seem a shame that it should be damaged so badly and we know it was expensive because the fender had to be replaced at a cost of around forty dollars.

Ever since parallel parking was instituted in the city during the summer hardly a day passes but some car driver is coming to grief because of the projections of the hydrants beyond the sidewalk curbs. It has been stated that more than forty motorists have reported such accidents to the Public Utilities Commission and police headquarters.

If the motorists of our city alone were concerned in this matter it would be bad enough but shoppers and tourists have had their share of woe. Their feelings can well be imagined and if the same thing happened to us in another city or town we would have few words of praise for officials of that place who would permit such a menace to cars to remain in place without doing something about it.

We do not know what it would cost to move the hydrants back from the curb or construct a sub-curb of sufficient width and length to prevent these annoying accidents but certainly the city council or Utilities Commission should take steps to make parking of motor cars just as safe as it can possibly be done. Undoubtedly, the cost of repairing broken fenders to car owners has been more than what the alterations would cost not to mention the wear and tear on their good natures.

THE FIGHT AGAINST POLIOMYELITIS

Infantile paralysis has reached epidemic stage in the Province of Ontario during the summer and the first of the autumn months. For a month past the situation has been serious enough to call for every possible precaution on the part of parents and children. Schools have been kept closed in many places where the epidemic has been holding its grip. The municipalities are thoroughly alert to the seriousness of the disease when it reaches epidemic proportions and every precaution has been taken.

In Belleville ban on bathing was put into force by the order of the Medical Officer of Health. Generally the people have been careful and fortunately so far there has been an absence of the disease in this city and in this immediate vicinity thought at some centres some short distance from Belleville there have been a few cases.

Parents look forward anxiously towards autumn and colder weather which have been held by medical men as barriers to the further spread of the disease, though there has been in some centres rather a disappointment that the disease has not diminished as rapidly as expected since the advent of cooler weather nearly two weeks ago.

Other measures taken include the use of nasal spray to guard the nerve centre through which the germ finds entrance to the spinal system. But generally the knowledge of the disease is restricted, a fact which makes the epidemic all the more likely to keep the people in an uneasy mood.

The causes of the disease and the factors towards its spread are still largely unknown. There is a widespread belief that about bathing beaches there is some factor which causes the spread of the disease but what that may be is not known, whether it has to do with warm stagnant water or whether it is due to the crowding about these places.

Generally there is a feeling among members of the medical fraternity the disease is slowly releasing its hold on Ontario, though there have been outbreaks in some quarters least expected. However when the time of incubation of the disease is considered it may be found that when sufficient time since the cold spell has elapsed, there will be a marked reduction in the number of new cases.

Meanwhile the public may rest assured that the war against the disease will be steadily fought in hospital and in research laboratory and that sooner than perhaps many expect science will get at the source of the distressing malady and the fight will then be largely won.

IN BRITISH GUIANA

("Let me show you some snapshots-vignettes of Bible Society work in the western tropics.... British Guiana itself has the distinction of being the only British colony in South America. At first sight from the sea it is not inviting, for all that can be seen of it is monotonously flat, with dykes to keep back the sea. The interior, however, beyond the dense bush of the littoral, is beautiful with mountains and rolling savannahs and with possibly the most beautiful waterfall in the world, the Kaieteur Falls. This fall is five times the height of Niagara and is the only coloured fall in the world. The water of the Potaro River which forms the falls is brown with vegetable matter. Tumbling over the edge the sunlight catches it and turns it into a stream of liquid gold round which dances the iridescence of broken rainbows."—From "West Indian Vignettes", by the Rev. W. J. Mowll, in The Bible in the World.)

From Trinidad across the southern seas,
The Bible-man his precious burden bears,
A voyage perilous, with little ease,
For long, slow days till welcome land appears—
A low, unlovely, unfamiliar land,
To homesick eyes an unlovely strand.

He journeys on across the deep, dense wood,
Till lo! the landscape widens on his sight,
A land of promise, beautiful and good,
Of flowery vales and vistas of delight,
Rolling savannahs, mist-blue mountain walls—
He hails, enraptured, by Kaieteur Falls.

Beauty unspeakable is here described,
Down you far height a flowing wall of gold—
Niagara by five times multiplied!
Its dancing sprays the iridescence hold
Of broken rainbows in the sunny air.
The handiwork of God is everywhere.

Below, the rippling stream reflects the sky,
The golden falls, the mountains and the trees.
How can man's spirit but be lifted high
Amid environs so divine as these?
Yet there are men who have not heard the Name
Of Him in Whose empire the stranger came.

Ever the Word goes forth; from year to year
The strongholds of our God are made more sure.
Such in his native tongue, the people hear
Glad tidings of the mercies that endure.
Hasten, O Christ, the advent of Thy grace
Until Thy light illumines every place!

WE EAT WHAT WE CAN AND CAN WHAT CAN'T, said a Southern girl when asked what was done with all the peaches grown there. The same thing might be said of the tomatoes of Prince Edward County where the canning season is in full swing now with many canning factories working night and day canning the succulent tomato which grows in popularity year by year. On a recent week-end Prince Edward County canners ran out of cans and as no cans are run on the Picton branch of the C.N.R. officials at Belleville to trace cars of cans en route and rush delivery, if possible. Thirteen cars of cans en route were located and rushed to Belleville where a special train was made up and the cans delivered at the Prince Edward canning factories on Saturday—and if that isn't service what is it? Incidentally it might be mentioned that the thirteen cars held over one million cans. One group of factories alone in Prince Edward used 26 cars of cans last week—over 2,000,000 cans.

SOUP MANUFACTURERS FEATURED MUSHROOM SOUP IN THEIR ADVERTISEMENTS—result increased demand for mushrooms, a demand which exceeded the supply until astute mushroom raisers turned to air-conditioning for providing the right atmosphere for mushroom growing. Formerly mushroom growing was at a standstill during the summer months in the vicinity of Philadelphia where a large mushroom industry has been developed but now with air-conditioned rooms cultivation proceeds all year. First August under air-conditioning produced 2,500 three-pound baskets a day, and the total yield will be about 250 tons with an average value of $750 a ton, none of which could have been grown without air-conditioning. Raising mushrooms is a highly specialized industry demanding experts, and there is so much of the culture of mushrooms such as right kind of fertilizer, atmosphere, etc., that it is no wonder that so many amateur mushroom raisers fall short of profit. The parent mushroom plant in Philadelphia uses 20,000 tons of horse manure each year at $$6.50 a ton, and according to a newspaper correspondent this manure "must be from horses which are working hard, and fed with grain and mixed feeds only."

Pop was smoking to himself in his private chair and I said, Hello pop.

At your service within conservative limits, pop said.

Meaning what, said I, I've got an idea how to make a fortune.

When the rite person gets the rite idea, the fortune is as good as made, pop said. So one question is, have you the relentless force of caracter and the unrewriting zeel necesserry to a Napoleon of finance grappling with the rite idea, and another question is, is it the rite idea? he said. I said, Sure, pop, go right ahead to hear it?

In one of my own petty desires or disinclinations, something tells me I'm going to hear it, pop said, and I said, Well you know how people throw rags away, don't you, pop?

Well I'm not sure, but I imagine they often throw up fingerly between thumb and forefinger and then employ a elite twist flick, pop said, and I said, No sir, I mean you know how many rags get threw away instead of saved.

O, the vast majority, I have no doubt, pop said, and I said, Now so my idea is to ask people to save me all their rags instead of throwing them away, such rags are valuable to make paper with, and if I get thousands of people to save me their rags I'll soon have millions of rags and all I'll have to do is sell them to a big paper factory.

You're talking in big figures. Isn't that rather an extensive venture? pop said, and I said, O, sure, but I'm not thinking of doing it all alone.

You're thinking of forming a big rag syndicate? pop said, and I said, It's formed already. Monty Judge is going in it with me.

He pulled his lip lip in suspendous, pop said.

And he got in back of the sporting page and blew smoke over.

MISSING GIRL

By Maryse Rutledge

Jane fumbled blindly for her away.

Again his hand detained her. "You're a strange girl. I think you really do live in a state-believe land. I gave you credit for being deeper than you are," he said. "It seemed pretty neat and clever to me the way you turned that trick of a mystery lady." His voice was quite gentle, and he ignored Jane's quick movement of protest.

"Kayestone must have scored like a fairy tale." He didn't sound sarcastic.

"I loved Kayestone," Jane said faintly, and a vision of the great stone house, ivy covered on its hill, with its sweep of lawns to the lake and its gardens, rose up before her.

Tony nodded. "I believe you did. I even believe you enjoyed at first our little plot to punish Lorna. It might have succeeded, too, if I hadn't been forced to marry you." The reckless light had come back to his dark face.

"Oh, what's the use of all this?" Jane's blue eyes were misting with tears. "You're doing this on purpose to keep me here when Henri may be—"

Henri may be—"

Tony's clasp on her arm tightened cruelly, and leaned close to him. "This time I am going—alone if you won't come with me. But I swear you! If anything—has happened, and they find me here, divorce or no divorce, there will be a scandal you won't like." Without waiting to see what he would do, she was on her feet, speeding to the door.

And then the tear grew sharp. Henri had said two, and it was past two now. "Taxi—quick!" she said to the advancing gold and black Unifarm.

She was getting into the taxi when someone pulled her back. "That's all right, Tony," she said quietly, standing beside her. He slipped a bill into the taxi chauffeur's hand, another into the Unifarm's palm. "You don't happen to mean to let you wander through Paris alone, do you?" But the gentleness was gone from his voice. "It wasn't your pretty little threat of a scandal, darling?"

He frowned down at her as he helped her into the long-nosed car. "Where to?"

Meekly, she gave him the address. Henri—Tony—Henri—Jane's drummed insanely in her ears as they shot ahead. They'd caught Michael, quite out of hand, but her once more. Intimate. Poignant.

"We're late, Henri."

"I don't know why I'm doing this," he muttered.

The Paris at night, hushed grey velvet in some streets, sparkling as white as day in others, came on the nose of his car. October stars seemed frozen in the sky, pale gold as Jane's curls. Grey fronts and pallid lights streamed by. How pale and sad Henri had looked when she walked away from his table! No matter what he had been, what he had done, he had given her his best.

"Hurry—can't we go faster?" And the thought of Bertram Cotter came to her. He, too, had given her his best. Bertram had shot himself last night. Henri.

"You realize this is definitely the end," Tony said grimly. "I shall not help you again. Henri differently tonight. But you've made your choice, Jane. I never too sure I'd marry Lorna. But if she wants a man like me, why she does not be Mrs. Anthony Kaye, I'll go through with it now. No illusions." But his heart knew better.

The car was open. Jane shivered in the chill wind. Dread of Tony's tell her this. There never could have been, she knew, for him or any one else for her. And happiness had incredibly almost touched her again tonight. To be left. "Here we are." Tony drew up in front of a garden divided by a stone path. Bushes huddled in the cold, but the smell of the leaves and piercing sweet. Many doors, many stairs, many studios. And tall elm in her back. Jane made for the right door and stairs. Tony's concierge to stop her, no elevator.

On the first landing, Tony caught her roughly by the arm, pinning her against the wall. "Every guide can you know what you're doing? I'm a fool, but I'll give you a last chance. And myself, too."

She wrenched away from him. These narrow wooden stairs seemed to hold Henri's slender figure, so full of hope those last few days. "You don't understand, or you wouldn't ask me that. Do I have to tell you that I still love you, but that there is such a thing as loyalty to others? I'm sorry, in the obstinate set of his chin that there would be no going back on his decision. If she went on up, he would marry Lorna. Calmly, cynically, as soon as he could.

She went on up to the top floor. The outer door was open, as Henri had promised. As she stepped into the little hall Rosalie's big dress studio, the ghastly hush she had expected was broken by a murmur of voices.

Instinctively she paused, feeling Tony's tall figure pressing up behind her. There were two people talking. One of them was Lorna.

Her voice rose high and shrill: "I came as soon as I could after you telephoned, Henri. Why are you looking at the clock, Henri?"

"I am looking at you, ma cherie," came in Henri's deep drawl.

Jane stirred at the grip of Tony's hand upon her arm. She was all so very clear now. La Paule had stayed with Gou Lorna, and no longer meant anything to him, to come here so that Tony might have what he had. Tony's love for her, Jane—! Yes, this was his mistake.

"How much you must care, little darling," the drawling voice went on in the studio. "I am glad you've come to me, not so?"

"Why, of course, Henri," Tony tried to get past Jane, but she held him back. And only La Paule, listening breathlessly in the hall, saw the stir in the little hall. He had left the studio door slightly open, and he stood facing it.

"What do I care for risks!" Lorna cried.

Jane felt Tony grow rigid through the carefully pencil; they could see the red of Lorna's hair tossed back as she clung to that slender blond figure, erect and mocking.

"Our affair has lasted a long time," la Paule said. "But you will marry Tony, because he is rich."

"Supposez'l do!" Lorna raised her voice again. "But if you I'm crazy about Henri. You know that. If you'll only listen—"

Then Tony swore under his breath and brushing Jane aside, strode into the studio.

Lorna's cry was stifled by her hand as she whirled around. Behind her, la Paule smiled at Jane, who stood on the threshold. His smile was indifferent and tired and weary. It said as clearly as words, "Adieu."

Heedless of Lorna, she went to him. "Oh, my dear!" was all she could say, and put her hand on it.

He didn't take it. He only looked at her as if he were gathering behind his brain for the last time.

Lorna had found her voice. "It's a lie, Tony! He means nothing to me—nothing. I may have flirted a little, but—" Then she turned on Jane, her green eyes blazing. "You planned this with Henri."

"You're lower than a snake, Bul—Bando, is it, la Paule?" Jane spoke for the first time. With a contemptuous glance at Lorna, and not looking at Jane, he walked out of the studio. His steps clipped on the wooden stairs.

Lorna rushed after him. La Paule caught her back, and nodded to Jane, his narrow blond face tragic.

But Jane was already out, lightly, swiftly following. Under the elm lamplight Tony had reached his car.

"Tony!" Jane called, winging down the path toward him.

He didn't answer. He climbed in, slammed the door.

She stood staring unbelievingly as the car ran through the grey mirror of the street. Long ago as a child in the garage of Fond du Lac she had watched such cars speeding around another curve and into the unknown.

La Paule's practice was useless then. It was all over. Slowly she started to walk away. She could of the October night settled upon her.

A lady in black satin wrapped in a silken cloak, and bodice clicking on the lonely pavement—but nothing ahead but streets of adventure.

She didn't raise her head at the sound of a car. Why should she? Or must she now learn to do that—especially when the car slowed down?

A moving shadow swooped down. She was caught and whirled in Tony's arms. "I give in," he said. "Are you coming home with me or not? I'm fed up enough, it is. Perhaps we can both stop pretending."

"Oh, Tony, I thought—you'd left me." Her voice was muffled against his shoulder.

His lips twisted in the crooked, boyish smile she had always loved. "That's one game I found I couldn't play." And as he had done once before on the Normandy, he suddenly lifted her and bore her back to his car.

What Local Theatre Managers Say About Coming Attractions

AT THE ELLIS

Bobby Breen in a New Idea in Musicals

The screen has not presented during the current season a more completely entertaining motion picture than "Make a Wish," the new Bobby Breen musical starting Vehicle which comes to the Ellis Theatre, Belleville, on Saturday, for matinee daily.

In no department of production has anything been neglected to make the picture a thoroughly enjoyable one, and it easily qualifies as the best in which the young singing star has ever appeared—a pleasing mixture of comedy, romance, tuneful songs and beautiful backgrounds.

Bobby combines real ability as an actor with a magnificent singing voice which seems even to have increased in volume and sweetness. He is heard in several haunting melodies written by the noted composers, Oscar Straus, the outstanding one of the group being the theme song bearing the title of the picture itself. Basil Rathbone, famous screen star, is his role, plays a truly romantic role for the first time in his career and contributes a performance which stamps him as a versatile actor of unusual talents. The leading feminine role is played by Marion Claire, famous radio singer, which gives every promise of future stardom.

The explosive Italian Henry Armetta, is vastly humorous in a characterization that is typically a comedy gem. Others in the cast who do outstandingly commendable work are Ralph Forbes, Leon Errol, Benny Baker, Ivan Lebedeff and Herbert Rawlinson.

Much of the action of "Make a Wish" schedule of the original story by Gertrude Berg, takes place in the summer resort in Maine where Bobby forms a warm friendship with a wealthy playwright's daughter. Rainbow becomes interested in the boys' lovely young mother, who is engaged to a count and develops between the two, despite the latter's efforts, a tender romance. Their tangled situation reaches a tensely dramatic climax in her first night performance and at the rehearsal of an operetta.

Director Kurt Neumann has maintained the action at a lively pace throughout, and associate producer Edward Gross may well be proud of a picture which stands high in the list of the season's best. Musical direction was in the hands of Hugo Friedhofer, and Paul Webster and Louis Alter wrote the lyrics for the Straus song. "Make a Wish" is a picture which is heartily recommended for every member of the family.

AT THE CAPITOL

Hopalong Cassidy in "Borderland"

"Hopalong Cassidy," hero to millions of outdoor action fans, is a villain in the latest of his film adventures, "Borderland," at the Capitol, Saturday only, with matinee at 2.30 and evening show at 8.15.

As a real dyed-in-the-wool villain, who hates ballet, horses with cattle rustlers, belongs to a gang of bandits and hangs out in the lowest joint in the border town of Mi Rio, "Hoppy" breaks up the band of his pal Johnny Nelson and completely bewilders "Windy" his lovable old side-kick.

But "Hopalong" has a reason for his villainy and it makes "Borderland" one of the most thrilling and fast moving of the popular series of Western films from the pen of Clarence E. Mulford. There's a bandit to be apprehended who is entirely too slick to be taken by usual methods of the Texas Rangers, so it is up to "Hoppy" to become an outlaw himself in order to run down his man. "Red Fox," and the best way he can accomplish this is to get himself arrested on a faked charge and to go "bed" in a big way.

Complications arise in getting the bandit in one of those hard-riding, fighting, thrilling jail breaks have made all the "Hopalong Cassidy" features exciting outdoor adventures.

Ton-Farty Tips

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have been invited to a tea party in honor of a girl who is going away to study. Please tell me what to do. The tea is from five to seven o'clock. Should I take a gift? If so, what would you suggest?

Reader

I.—You go at any time between those two hours that you wish . . . five-thirty or six is a good time. As you enter the room you will be directed by someone to the room in which you are to leave your wraps. Leave your coat, and your gloves if you wish (they are usually in the hand at a tea), but wear your hat. It is important that the first person you greet be your hostess. She will shake hands with you as she welcomes you, and you may say something like this: "How do you do, Mrs. Allen. I am so glad to see you and to come to your party." Then you greet the girl in whose honor the party is being given, and any other people who seem to be "receiving". There will probably be other guests waiting to be greeted, and so you don't tarry here long, but proceed to chat with other guests, greeting those you know, making a self-introduction if you wish. A tea-party is a splendid occasion for 'small talk'; so don't dwell on ovemuch. And often there isn't time for the hostess to make all the introductions.

Next you will enter the tea room in which tea is being served. The colors pouring tea will ask you "how you take your tea". You tell her in a non-committal way, how tea you like, and serve yourself to whatever you wish on the tea-table. Stay at the table for a while after having your "tea and cake". Before you go, say good-by to your hostess, thanking her for the happy time that you have had. Then say good-by to the guest of honor, telling her too what a nice time you have had, and giving her your best wishes."

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Young Men, Like Blessings, May Brighten as They Take Their Leave

"I never knew, till we broke our friendship, how much I cared for him," writes a correspondent in a story to this column that I often wonder why some sort of trial breakage hasn't been necessary to help a girl decide whether the boy friend she loved down isn't the only one after all.

We've had trial marriages, trial engagements, trial courses, in trial by publishing houses. Why, shouldn't we have trial quarrels, to help young people realize "I never cared till now?" Take this letter for instance: Dear Miss Fairfax:

"I'm the most unhappy girl in the world. Last week I was bride's maid at a wedding where I should have been the bride. Once the groom and I were engaged, but we were always arguing and quarreling over the silliest things. My best friend sympathized with him, and last week they were married.

I think neither of them guessed how much their marriage cut me up. I'm supposed to be hard-boiled and yet I've cried myself to sleep every night since their engagement was announced.

Now I never intend to marry, and I'm looking around for something to interest me. I'm the type that never love twice. I'd like to go to Honolulu and nurse lepers, but I'm afraid my friend would realize why I went. I'm 22 years of age, and desperately "Unhappy"

Young people have got to be a long way past that twenty-second milestone before they can be sure they can never love twice. And I'm glad you told me you would like to go to Honolulu and nurse lepers. Because—now please don't get angry with me—that proves conclusively it's the dramatic gesture which appeals, rather than having a broken heart by nursing the world's most terribly afflicted.

Innumerable multitudes of young people, girls and boys, have had that never-never attitude in regard to marrying, but later they have bravely lived it down and have come to smile over it in very happy homes.

Granted, for the sake of argument, that you'll never become interested in another man—some of the happiest women in the world are those engaged in impersonal work, those who work early and late for the good of humanity and get as much happiness out of life as it usually depended on a personal attachment. Romance and happiness are not wholly dependent on marriage.

There is a type of woman who gets her supreme satisfaction from working for the good of the race—for the blind, deaf, crippled, or for little children who have been bereft of their natural ties through misfortune.

Florence Nightingale was such a woman. She declined to marry, that she might establish field hospitals and save the lives of sick and wounded soldiers. Clara Barton, who did so much for the Red Cross, was another, and Susan B. Anthony, who put aside marriage that she might serve her fellow women, secure better education for them and open fields of industry long closed to women.

I hope that you will not join the "never-never" sisterhood, but if you do, there is a world full of interests open to women today, and no one need feel bored or unhappy who has the necessary determination to get start a career for herself.

Disobedient Child May Be Deaf

If Youngster Ignores Orders, Perhaps He Does Not Hear Well

(By Lieg Grenelle)

Mrs. F., of Indiana writes me of her little three-year-old son who is becoming quite a problem.

"When Father or I speak to him," Mrs. F. writes, "Sandy does not answer at all. But just goes right on playing. When his father tells him to go up and wash his hands, for example, he pays no attention. Then, of course, Father gets angry and shouts, and Sandy jumps and cries. It is the same thing when I try to get him to do something. I'll ask him three times and each time he'll pretend he does not hear me and go right on stacking up his blocks. Finally I'll go over and shake him and he'll turn on me and kick and punch me.

"Father has spanked Sandy a number of times for his disobedience, and I've scolded him and put him to bed, but it doesn't do any good. I tried to reason with him, too, but that didn't seem to make any impression either. Sandy seemed to listen at first, but with a scowl on his face, and then long before I'd finished, I could see that he was thinking of something else. He dropped down on the floor and began examining the pattern of the rug. I lost my patience then, and pulled him to his feet, as I think you would, too. And then Grenelle, if you'd been in my place.

Never Listens

" 'Listen to me,' I screamed; 'you got to listen to me.' Sandy cried then, and started to kick me. But he wouldn't listen. He never listens.

"I'm so worried I can't sleep for thinking that maybe Sandy's crazy, or one of these children that are deaf; or don't you believe in that idea, Miss Grenelle? Anyway, I'm crazy with worry and feeling that maybe I'm not doing the right thing, though I don't know what else I could do. Do you think you can help me? Does he hear me? Be frank and tell me the worst."

Very well, Mrs. F., I'll tell you the worst, at least what I suspect as the worst from your letter. I think that your Sandy is totally deaf. I may be wrong, but I would certainly advise taking the child to a good ear specialist at once. Even a reputable general practitioner could tell you whether you're right or not.

Reasons for Deafness

I think deafness in Sandy's trouble for the following reasons: He doesn't answer you when you call you or Father. If he were just stubborn, he might refuse to do what you tell him, stage a protest-tantrum, but he doesn't. He goes right on playing. When you lose your temper and shout or scream, Sandy has an immediate violent reaction. He cries—indicating that the shout was the first thing he heard.

For the same reason he turns on you when you go over and shake him. Sandy's unusual for a child to be done anything to annoy you, he is naturally upset, frightened and angry. This theory would also account for the fact that Sandy, when you try to scream him to stop, tries to listen, but cannot catch all the words. He understands a few and finally gives up and turns his attention to something else.

Fashion Flashes

(By Alice Alden)

Drama in color contrasts appears in many of the frocks created for late summer year. For instance an evening frock of delicate pink chiffon jersey has huge shoulder pads of red fox.

A good fling for Autumn wear is an ensemble made up of sheer black wool with sleeves and back part of collar fashioned of bark Persian lamb. The dress, of matching black woollen, has a sporting collar and inset of sequins.

It won't be easy to select new hats, for almost every model is attractive and noteworthy. A high turban of black velvet with a bird of paradise in front. A high, round collar of beaver continues into a fulllength front plastron of the fur, which is also used for the cuffs.

Tops for charm is an ermine cape with a little skullcap or calot of the same sheer fur. The cape is the three-quarter-length and has the

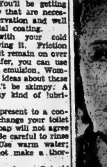
Hints on Correcting Dry Skin

(By Helen Follett)

It may not sound interesting—practical ideas always are—but one way to correct a dry skin that shows readily is to drink plenty of water and take 15 drops of halibut liver oil daily. You'll be getting vitamins A and D that are necessary for the preservation and well being of your facial coating.

Be generous with your cold cream when applying it. Friction is the well used list remain on over night. If you prefer, you can use a muscle oil or an emulsion. Women have their own ideas about these matters. But don't be skimpy: A dry skin loves any kind of lubrication.

If roughness is present to a considerable degree, change your toilet soap. The best soap will not agree with all skins. Some seem to rinse the suds away. Use warm water; cold water will not make a thorough job of it.



Select a light powder. Get old of rouge compact and use a creamy blush instead. The eyebrush will give it better than a dry pencil. But don't forget to take your "fish oil", as the children call it.

Have you ever heard of the "gobbler's neck"? It is a bag of loose skin which comes from gaining too much adipose tissue, then losing it. The skin becomes stretched. When fat cells atrophy, it falls into gullies and hollows.

Plastic surgery is about the only cure for such a condition. It costs money, and one must be careful to find a reliable, experienced surgeon.

The florid brunette finds the selection of becoming colors a difficult problem. She has to avoid red tones. Her best colors are found in black which ages her appearance.

If her eyes are gray, blue or hazel she can resita greens and grays with excellent effect. If eyes are brown, she can wear old rose, henna, or mahogany shades but never red, except as a trim-

When the teeth are discolored, brush them with common table salt. The tiny crystals act as a cleansing agent. They do more than that; they harden the gums. The friction acts as a stimulation treatment, stirring up lazy circulation and giving the gums a healthy color.

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton, M.D.

LEFT HANDEDNESS NOT A SIGN OF MENTAL DEFECT

I can remember sitting in class in my early school days and seeing a teacher come unexpectedly upon a youngster writing with his left hand. The youngster received a sharp blow on the pointer or other object. In addition the teacher took the left hand implement and the class in general that left handedness was physical defect, that it was spinal curvature, round shoulders, knock knees and flat feet. In fact, that there was something wrong with the brain itself.

In the main the above is true as saw the teacher sit down beside the left handed youngster and kindly but patiently help him to write or draw with his right hand.

You can see that whether the youngster was treated harshly or kindly, he was given to understand that there was "something wrong" with/him or he would not be writing with his left hand.

Thus when some of these youngsters were found to be epileptics, bed-wetters, or backward in their other children, these conditions and the left handedness were believed to go together; to be due to the one mental condition.

However, from time to time during the past 15 or 20 years, research workers have shown that left handed youngsters are at least as bright as other children, and have no more defects—epilepsy, bed-wetting than normal children.

Some months ago Dr. Joseph J. Michaels (Boston Psychopathic Hospital) and Dr. Sylvia E. Goodman (State Psychopathic Hospital, Ann Arbor, Mich.), in the Archives of Neurology and Psychiatry, recorded a study of 468 children of whom about 11 per cent. were left handed.

Their figures show that among these left handed children there were no more cases of bed-wetting, temper tantrums, sleep disturbances, stuttering and failures in school than among those who were right handed. There was, however, a slight association of stammering, thumb-sucking and nail biting with the ones who were left handed.

The results of these investigations would show that while left-handed children are as bright as those who write with the right hand, there may be a slight degree, more nervous because stammering, thumb-sucking and nail biting are definitely "let-ups" symptoms.

Friends Gather to Present Gifts to Bride-to-be

Rawdon—On Monday evening, September 13th, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Herb David was the scene of a happy gathering when Miss Phyllas David entertained last winter's skating group to another social evening so that all might say farewell to Miss Edna Thrasher before her departure to Ivanhoe. There were twenty-two young people in attendance and all enjoyed social games. At 11 o'clock an alarm clock tinkled and here the jollity ceased and the guest of honour hurried to the the table which had been tied up waiting for her to find. When all the parcels had been gathered the following address was read by Miss Vera McAdam:

Mount Pleasant, Sept. 13, 1937.

Dear Edna,—

We've gathered here at Phyls' tonight,
We thought it wouldn't be just right
To let you go away from us
Without a little bit of fun.
Pump Street will not seem quite the same
When you go off and change your name;
But Ivanhoe is not far away,
We'll all drop in on you some day.
These little gifts we bring to you,
Along with wishes fond and true.
May Happiness be yours in wedded life
As you are Milton's loving wife.
Signed on behalf of the Skating Crowd,

Edna then opened each parcel which revealed a kitchen article in cream and red with mirror attached to each and then she graciously thanked all her kind friends for their lovely gifts even though it was a complete surprise.

Mrs. David served the guests watermelon, cantaloupe, ice cream, cake and coffee and the guests departed wishing Edna every happiness on her matrimonial voyage.

Hon. Dr. Faulkner

ill, he would advocate free trade between the Dominion and Japan, pointing out if the province of Saskatchewan can take care of its 72 B. cases without any charge Ontario can.

Insulin and Radium

Dr. Faulkner went on: "Mr. Hepburn made the statement that I have refused insulin to the poor. There is not a person in the province who need go without insulin if he asks for it. Prior to 1934 it was confined to those who could afford to supply, from 2,400 to 2,500 persons with insulin. I find that in order to consulte that amount of insulin diabetic sufferers in adjacent provinces are advertising in the months unbeknown to the ratepayers of Ontario.

Cancer, a disease that claims a large number each year is being combated with the sincerest medical knowledge. By purchasing $150,000 worth of radium the Ontario government stopped paying six per cent interest charged by foreign countries renting radium to this province, annually. Ten thousand dollars were saved by that one transaction and now there is one half a million dollars worth of radium being utilized by provincial hospitals at present."

Dr. Faulkner said the Port Hope radium refinery owns its responsibility of being established in the Liberal administration. The speakers denied that the building or several health buildings in the province of Ontario were built during the election program. All the coal utilized by the Ontario government hospitals in Nova Scotia, he said, and when the Ontario Fuel Investigation would be opened to probe the extremely high cost of supplying the government hospitals throughout the province with coal during the past year.

Mr. Swords of Kingston, was the seller of the coal. Hydro reserves were thrown open to Ontario and Hepburn government took over the reserves.

Contracts

Contracts with Quebec's power interests were severed, and if the Liberals were in office, I'd do it again. Through the cancellation of the contracts, a saving of one million dollars was saved, sufficient to pay the interest on the province's bonds. Where it cost the farmer $5 a year, now the charges it now costs $1 a month.

Extension of power lines has increased by more than 1,000 miles, 2300 miles of new lines has been built, during the past year.

"What type of roads were leading to the north when the Liberals were led to believe by promises that the road to Oonsecon and Frankford would be paved. How long did you have to wait. The road was not even worthy hand. Now they are paved and it will be completed to Marmora, Sept. 18th.

The speech closed with, "I am afraid that W. R. Ireland who has hopes of being appointed chairman of the Liquor Control Board is known as one of the most progressive of the oncoming election now while his every endeavor is to return to the three man board plan."

Mr. H. D. Graham who was the guest speaker declared this contest was not one between the Conservative and Liberal parties or between Mr. Drew and Mr. Hepburn. It was the Ontario general public who had once opposed to a one man government.

There are those who will ask the question, "Is not Dr. Faulkner a member of the Cabinet more able to do things for this constituency than Dick Arnott as a mere member of the opposition?" To my answer to that question is this: If he can't then don't send him for Dr. Faulkner is going to be in a position to done nothing for the district which they him his support. He has given nothing more than repeat the promises that he has made. He has stated some time ago that there are several likely sites for sanatoria in Hastings County, but he has done that. He must be going to build a whole rash of them to accommodate the 5th of Oct. they'll need them".

Laughter, and cheers followed this being made here and there that unless the people vote Liberal relief will be denied. Relief was always established and the living of those now on relief reduced to a minimum existence. Such a threat as that is a disgrace to the good democracy like especially when he said they would all be fumigated. A measure of common sense is what we now be travels by special chartered planes but that stuff is all small potatoes and not many to the hill. We don't say anything about that. But on the 5th of October the people of Ontario will show Mr. Hepburn that good government is their desire and will elect Mr. Howe as Provincial Secretary," said Mr. Arnott, amid cheers.

The meeting closed following the singing of the National Anthem.

ARNOTT

as changeable as the winds; who comes to the country two years before his term is complete to ask Canadian citizens to return him to power on account of the threat of dictatorship. He claims that the school amendment act is not an issue on this election. The people of Ontario haven't forgotten his statement of less than a year ago "that the Separate School Amendment act was only half-way to the citizens of Ontario and he would stand or fall for it".

"After the by-election in East Hastings Hepburn stated that it was the greatest election ever held in the Dominion of Canada." Well if it was," declared the speaker, "it was Hepburn made it that way. With the loss of one by-election after another, Hepburn had to dig up an issue to go to the country on. So he posed as a noble hero and threw Liberalism to the wind, started a great wave of fear across the province. He posed himself as self opposed to communism and everyone who opposed him he rushed as a communist. He called on special police to Oshawa strike, where rioting was the result of anarchy and decent and the strikers' parade was headed by one carrying a Union Jack. Then added to that the fact that all were loyal British subjects. Communists were not behind the Union Jack. But Hepburn, with his cries of fear, has started a great wave of fear across the province. He has posed himself opposed to communism and everyone who opposed him he rushed as a communist. He called on special police to Oshawa strike, where rioting was the result of anarchy and decent and the strikers' parade was headed by one carrying a Point Anne Come from Behind To Win 6 to 5 Over Orillia In O. A. S. A. Semi-Final Game

Orillia Held Scoreless After Second Inning by Consentinos

STEALS HOME

Visiting Pitcher Checked For Alleged Illegal Deliveries

Coming from behind to eclipse a five run lead, the Point Anne "Consentinos" grew first baseman in the intermediate "B" semi-finals of the provincial O.A.S.A. playdowns as they defeated the Orillia "Waggs" 6 to 5 in Point Anne last evening. The visiting Orillia nine touched "Ding" Loffman, the Consentinos's mound ace for five runs in the first two frames, but were helpless from that point, as the boosters livened up and Loffman was soon to bear down as the game progressed to give the Consentinos thank the "Waggs" for the last seven frames. The second game of the provincial softball semi-finals is scheduled to be played in Orillia on Saturday.

Roger Wilkinson, the starting moundsman for the Orillia squad, turned the Sedore-led aggregation back in order in the first two innings, but in the third a concerted objection on the part of the Point Anne nine, paved the way for Wilkinson pitching illegally, namely side-arm, pitching in the opinion of Orillia, warning the visiting moundsman, who apparently could not deliver the softball in the recognized and orthodox manner. As he waded the first three batters in the third inning and was relieved by Davis, the rightfielder. Once the Orillia moundsmen were instructed to pitch according to O.A.S.A. rulings, the game became another story.

Trailing five to nothing the "Consentsmen" pushed over three in the third and early knotted the count in the fourth. Generous, the homsters embraceleder, opened the seventh with a single, stole second and went to third on a passed ball to Slater and scored as Dickey drew a throw to second, with the tying run. Dickey ultimately scored the winning run behind him on Murray's single in centre. The Orillia nine did not score after the second, as the Consentsmen gave a one man air-tight support for the last five

NEW YORK STOCKS

New York, Sept. 17.—(AP)—Stock market leaders were cheered down 1 to 4 points in today's market as weakness developed in rails, coppers and steels.

The list met reverses at the start. Extreme declines were shaded around noon but support was feeble and the attack was resumed later. A few specialties managed to do better, although gains were scarce near the final hour. Transfers were about 900,000 shares.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Sept. 17.—(Can)—After displaying hesitancy through the early trading, the Toronto Market turned a bit heavy in the afternoon action and closed with a moderate loss in the Mining and Industrial shares. Base Metals were chiefly weak in the senior issues and in the Golds the medium-price Mcleods were off. Two Junior Golds, Stadacona and Chibougamau, were sold in heavy volume for substantial losses. Stadacona hit 79 and closed around 80 for a net drop of 15 cents. Chibougamau was down about the same amount to about 36 cents.

Trading slackened off in the Industrial section and losses predominated in the Beverage, Oil Bank and Implement groups while the Steels and Utilities held to the up side. Along with traction issues for Imperial, British American and International Petroleum, final prices were heavy for Calgary-Edmonton, Homestead and Okalta. Texas-Canadian dropped an early advance.

Closing prices were up in the Utilities for Bell Telephone, Consumers Gas, Montreal Power, Union Gas and Shawinigan. Walkers common finished about 1-3 point.

Oro Plata was in active demand and the price moved up about 25 cents. Most of the gain was held. Senior Golds, Dome, Hollinger, Teck Hughes and Wright Hargreaves held to the up side and the close was strong at 1 to 10 cents for O'Brien, Pioneer, Dartwater, Caribou, San Antonio, and Premier.

Net loss were recorded for Macassa, Pickle Crow, Sylvanite, Read-Authier, Sladen, Preston and Coniaurum.

International Nickel, Consolidated Smelters and Noranda dropped back a point or more.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Biggar and Crawford by Financial Service

MARKET COMMENT

Brazilian Traction has given a good account of itself in the recent unsettling markets. The outlook for the company is now definitely reconforming. Improved business conditions in Brazil are reflected in the company's earning power for the first seven months of the current year, net earnings in this period showing an increase of 24 per cent. over the same period last year. Temporary rates, imposed by the Brazilian government, continue in effect, but the company is working for a final settlement of this rate situation on a more equitable basis. The external situation of the country has also improved. Brazilian exchange has shown considerable strength in recent months, and a short time ago the United States set up a $60,000,000 gold fund to be used to stabilize the milreis.

HOME OIL

The common shares of the Home Oil Company are currently selling at $1.30 which is approximately the same value as their holding of Government Bonds, Royalties, etc., work out to.

LAKE SHORE

The ticker plainly tells one that the bonus payments received by the shareholders of the Lake Shore Gold Mines during the last year or so are not to be continued indefinitely. The latest financial statement revealed that Surplus Account was down from $10,361,674 to $6,508,000. Unless an improvement in earnings is noted the $4 share per annum disbursement cannot be expected for long. The past year did little for the stock that taken care of this situation. As the yield to the investor is now less than 8 per cent, and that is a very satisfactory return, even under existing conditions on such a high grade issue as Lake Shore.

are intended." The Security Frauds Prevention Act would be revised with the provision preventing appeal to the courts abolished.

He promised a modern highway from Hertz Bay northward and the inauguration of a constructive highway policy. His government would not only complete work on trunk roads "but we will give the farmers on the back concession a square deal," said Mr. Howe.

Premiums under the Workmen's Compensation Act had been increased, said Mr. Howe and he wondered where this money was going. The worker who suffered illness should receive fair play under the Act but this was not forthcoming at the present.

Sees Political Bluff

In brief reference to the Oshawa General Motors strike, the Conservative leader said the Premier's attitude during the situation was the greatest "political bluff" Ontario witnessed. Mr. Rowe said at the time he understood "none of Mr. Hepburn's millionaire friends had threatened to close the mines in the north rather than countenance the C.I.O."

He also accused the Premier with playing politics in connection with legislation passed, and later repealed, to give separate schools a larger share of corporation taxes. This legislation, he charged, was "never intended to operate except for political purposes."

Before Mr. Rowe's remarks at New Liskeard regarding the school tax situation, Dr. J. K. Doyle of Haileybury, a French-Canadian, told the gathering that Conservative leader "will do as much or more than any Liberal" on the school question.

Right of Minority

"There is no newspaper in the city of Toronto and there is no organization of men and women in Ontario that I going to deter me from maintaining the play for the minority and a square deal for the majority," said Dr. Doyle. He denied "pussy-footing on the issue" but as leader of a great party he "must look for fair play to every class, race and creed."

In an address during the New Liskeard meeting, Hon. W. K. Gordon, former Dominion Minister of Immigration, charged the government within the last year and a half entered into nine timber contracts without competitive bidding. The contracts were completed timber cutting rights on 23,975 square miles of timber land in the north, he claimed.

Contracts on Timber

Five of the contracts were entered into within a week of the day the election date was announced. The nine contracts disposed of 72,500,000 cords of Northern Ontario spruce and contained no clause for the customary processing of the timber in the province.

At the present time there is not left, in the name of the crown, one single commercial spruce limit in Northern Ontario," he charged. The contracts were reached "behind closed doors and in defiance of the Crown Timber Act."

Northern Ontario was sold down the river, Gordon charged. Premier present Ontario Minister of Lands and Forest, said Mr. Gordon. Only lucky workers, cutting the wood obtained $35 a month. The United States processors got about that much a week.

PRESIDENT'S SON AND SOCIETY GIRL TO WED

John Roosevelt, youngest son of U.S. President and Mrs. Roosevelt, is shown with his bride-to-be, Miss Anne Lindsay Clark, pretty Boston debutante, at the Clark estate at Walnut, Mass., where young Roosevelt is a house guest. Announcement of the couple's betrothal was made public by Mrs. P. Haven Clark, mother of Anne. It is understood, however, that John, now a senior at Harvard, will not marry until he graduates next June. This was the engrossed wire of President and Mrs. Roosevelt:

ties, Mr. Hepburn said. "If Martin is justified in keeping the C.I.O. free from foreign interference, why should Canadian labor be criticized for asking the same right?"

Says 'Agitators' Allowed In.

He deplored as "unfortunate" the fact "foreign agitators" were allowed into Canada under the Immigration Act.

Turning to a challenge by Mayor Alex Hall of Oshawa to debate the C.I.O. issue, Premier Hepburn said, "when I start to fight, I don't fight in the lightweight class. I take my fellows my own size."

He reiterated his charge Conservatives were advocating strict liquor policies in dry sections, wet in wet districts. The Conservative Club in Kingston had a club license to sell beer. "All you have to do is look at their sales figures to see that the Tories of Kingston are not in the matter how dry they may be elsewhere."

writing vigorously on a sheet of paper.

Guard John Trotter was called to the stand, and the instant he was sworn in Crosley jumped to his feet, waved a sheet of paper and in a pleading voice, exclaimed: "Please me, My Lord, but I think you should see this before this guard talks."

"Sit down," ordered Justice Jeffrey.

Breaking into sobs Crosley cried out: "These guards are all lying. They have no use for us prisoners. They're trying to create a racial prejudice."

His Lordship reprimanded Crosley. "Stand up, Crosley," he ordered.

Crosley gripped the railing in front of him and stood up, while his frame shook with sobs.

"If you make one more demonstration," said Justice Jeffrey, "I'll have you removed from this court and the trial will proceed without you. If you have anything to say, say it through your counsel."

Crosley, mumbled: trying to create racial feeling." "Take me out put me in another room while these lying guards talk." His sobbing died away and he settled back in his seat tears streaming down his face.

Guard Trotter told how he and Guard Haylock had taken food to Crosley and Cowan on July 11, 1936, when the accused used very abusive language. Crosley threatened: If there had been any more guards in the hospital somebody would have knifed them.

Suddenly Crosley again leaped to his feet and turned towards the end of the prisoner box, where he was stopped by a guard and after the second interruption was ordered from the court.

INTERNATIONAL WAR-FLEET SEEKING SUBMARINE PIRATES. CRUISES IN MUSSOLINI'S "MARE NOST RUM"

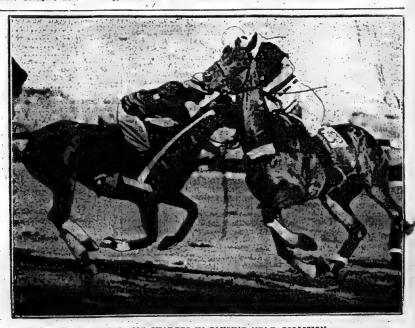
With blunt orders to sweep the seas clear of pirate craft preying on international shipping, and backed by the governments of nine nations, signatory to the Nyon pact, the greatest war-fleet of modern times cruised through the Mediterranean Sea—almost in flat defiance of Benito Mussolini, of Italy. Il Duce was boycotting the accord which sent more than 150 battleships into the waters which the Italian dictator has repeatedly referred to as "Mare Nostrum"—Our Sea. Britain, France, and Russia led the international hunt, the two former working in close collaboration to prevent the Soviet's flat declaration that Italian submarines were responsible for the piracy, which has developed from the Spanish war, from flaring into open warfare. Germany was supporting the Italian stand. Symbolic of his oft-repeated warning to all nations—and Russia in particular in this instance—to keep out of "Mare Nostrum", is the picture of Il Duce at top right, saluting a sea parade of Italian warships from the deck of a battle cruiser. But among him in this layout—as they are in the Mediterranean today—are the fighting craft of nations now engaged in the grim pirate hunt. In the centre is H.M.S. Renown, one of Britain's mightiest floating fortresses, as she led the fleet out to sea stripped for action. At top is a flight of Hawker fighting aeroplanes which are operating in co-operation with the fleet in the Mediterranean. The Russian cruiser, Maraa, is at lower left, illustrative of the Soviet's part in the international concentration and at right a scene on the French Ranle Berthis as a gun crew went into action on that cruiser during recent manoeuvres. Rumor had it that the phantom submarines which were the hunter's quarry had been ordered immediately to their home bases when the nine-nation fleet swung into action.

HITLER'S DOUBLE WAITS WITH PARTY LEADERS AT FESTIVAL

At first glance one would think is Ritter von Epp, who bears such that the man on the right of this striking resemblance to the "Fuehpicture was none other than Chan- rer". He is seen at the Nuremberg cellor Adolf Hitler but in reality he congress with party leader Goebbels and General Herman Goering (left) as they wait outside the Luitpolo Hall, for the arrival of Hitler to open the congress.

THREE PERSONS INJURED WHEN MONTREAL-BO UND BUS CRASHES

Three persons were severely injured when this Montreal-bound bus out of New York crashed into the rear of a gasoline tank truck on the Columbia Turnpike near Albany, N.Y. then collided head-on with a passenger car. Bus passengers are pictured running from the wreck in the heavy rain which had obscured the vision of the three drivers. The passenger car, which carried the three persons who sustained the gravest injuries, was completely demolished. None of the bus riders was seriously injured.



MANY TOP-NOTCH FIGHTERS TRAINING FOR COMING "CARD OF CHAMPIONS"

Right top-notch boxers are now hard at work in their training camps for the coming "card of champions" to be staged in New York. In this layout Sixto Escobar, Puerto Rican flyweight champion, is seen getting the once over and rub down from lightweight champion Lou Ambers, who strikes an unusual pose for the cameraman. Does the gleam in Lou's eye forecast defeat or victory for the "Herkimer Hurricane" in his fight with Pedro Montanez, the sensational Puerto Rican lightweight? Both fighters are training for their coming fights at Mme Bey's camp at Summit, N.J.

DIES SUDDENLY

In his 47th year, he had enlisted with the 10th battalion, C.E.F., at Valcartier, and in 1919 had been discharged with the rank of major.

"SCHOOLS HERE!"—BUT THIS TIME BY RADIO

"Something new under the sun!" That's perhaps what a lot of people thought when the Chicago board of education began using radio to teach 315,000 elementary grade school children their lessons while school opening has been deferred until the wave of infantile paralysis sweeping over the city subsides. The scene in above photograph shows the start of the radio-school lessons as they were broadcast by Robert D. Greer, principal of Mulligan school, Chicago, who teaches certain age and class groups. The photograph at the left shows two of the youthful pupils as they listened to their lessons via the loudspeaker. The boys, Albert Kaupas and his brother Adolph are in the fifth and seventh grades respectively, but they did their school work together and at home. While school opening has been delayed in Toronto and other Canadian cities, teaching school by radio has not yet been started or contemplated.

GIVES UP RIDING

The well-known cry of the British turf, "Come on Steve," will be heard no more. His retirement as a jockey winds up a riding career extending over a period of 30 years, in which time he has booted 1,840 horses to victory and won the Derby six times.

TARZAN THE MAGNIFICENT

(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

The ape-man increased his speed, but he was at a serious disadvantage. He had been over this treacherous trail only once—at night. And though the moon shone brightly, its light afforded small aid in those sections which dipped into deep dark canyons.

Behind him came the whole tribe of amazons and their warriors, stirred to bloodthirsty anger. They made no effort to conceal their pursuit, because they felt certain of success. If they overtook him, Tarzan knew he could expect neither victory nor mercy.

Nearer and nearer drew the excited cries of the warriors. The hard-pressed ape-man judged that he could not hope to outdistance his pursuers on this unfamiliar trail. He was encouraged, however, when he came suddenly to a wide plateau. He sprinted ahead.

But now he began to hear the shrill shouts of warriors to the right, to the left—then straight ahead. They had taken shortcut trails unknown to him to head him off, to surround him. Rapidly they were closing in. He was entirely exposed—trapped!

RUMOR PLANE CARRIER ATTACKED UNCONFIRMED

Report Says 100,000 New Italians Soon in Spain

Malta, Sept. 18.—(AP)—A secret naval inquiry aboard the aircraft carrier Glorious led today to belief British naval officials were awaiting details of a reported torpedo attack on the last unit of Britain's anti-piracy patrol.

No official information was forthcoming as a result of the inquiry, concluded yesterday.

Informed sources said, however, there was good reason to believe a torpedo was fired at the Glorious Thursday evening, narrowly missing her. The craft was warned of the attack by lookouts on an accompanying destroyer, the Comet, 15 was added.

It was virtually impossible to winnow the chaff of rumor from the fresh harvest of reports.

A news report from Insurgent Spain had General Franco formally accusing Russia of operating two "pirate" submarines in the Medi-erranean.

Malta blossomed with talk of Spanish insurgent submarines moving with Italian and German destroyers, apparently apparently founded on reports of the crews of two British vessels, the Endymion and Shark.

Hugo Wallace Army Ace Again?

Geneva, Sept. 18.—(CP-Havas)—Italy is dispatching to insurgent Spain an aerial squadron "ace ace" of the Italian forces already fighting for General Franco, Count Aguiri Negrin of Spain charged today in a speech before the League of Nations assembly.

Why the Weather?

(By Major A. H. Thiessen)
Science Service Meteorologist

Orographic rain! That sounds technical. It simply means rain which is caused by moist air being blown up slopes of rising ground, as a mountain side. The best examples in this country are in the Cascades and Sierra Nevada mountains. There moist air from the Pacific is blown up those mountains are cooled very below the dew point, the water vapor is condensed and clouds and precipitation range, but not nearly so much, because that type does not have as much elevation as the Cascades, and much of the moist air passes over.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Sept. 18—A disturbance of increasing intensity is moving rapidly eastward from the Rocky Mountains. Showers have occurred in Northern Ontario, in the Lake Superior district and in the Southern Manitoba. Showers have occurred in Northern Ontario, in the Lake Superior district and in the Southern parts of Quebec, also light showers in southern Manitoba, elsewhere the weather has been fair. It has been cool in Eastern Canada, but warm in the far west.

Sask.-Spasifon—Strong winds or moderate gales veering to northwest; cloudy with occasional showers; cooler tonight. Sunday, freshto strong northerly winds; cloudy and cooler; probably scattered snow flurries.

Manitoba—Partly cloudy and cool today. Saskatchewan— Mostly fair, cool in east portion. Sunday, mostly fair with stationary or a little higher temperature.

Alberta—Generally fair today and Sunday, not much change in temperature.

PUPILS' HEALTH IN CITY SCHOOLS IS FOUND GOOD

Scholars Remarkably Free of Disease Reported

MUSIC COURSE

Full Report on Playground Activities Presented to Board

That the schools of Belleville are remarkably free from communicable and other diseases was revealed in the report of Miss Elizabeth A. Harshman, school nurse, in her report to members of the Board of Education at the first meeting of the Fall term held in Board Room at the Belleville Collegiate Institute last night under the chairmanship of Chairman H. J. Allin.

Miss Harshman's report revealed that there was only one case of diphtheria, 1877 post-vaccination inspections had been made with only 16 pupils found to be suffering from minor ailments.

Prior to adjournment Chairman Allin told the Board that "the Board is powerless to act in regard to the postponement of the opening of schools in the face of an epidemic without the consent of the Medical Officer of Health. We have been in communication with Dr. Bentley with regard to the present state of affairs," Mr. Allin said. "It was the unanimous communication with the Health Officer and due to the fact that we were so fortunate could see no reason why the opening should be postponed."

Playground Work

George Laughlin, playground superintendent, gave the Board a graphic description of the work done at the Playgrounds during the summer months. "The programs of study, various activities and other planned work ahead," he explained, "and are arranged to suit the interests of children." He recommended that next year the season be one earlier and that appointments be made immediately after the closing of the grounds to give supervisors a chance to plan for the year.

Personality and leadership are two important factors in leadership," Mr. Laughlin said, "and are essential to the point that they are necessary in bringing out the talents of the children."

Mr. Laughlin presented to the Board a number of samples of the fine handicraft work done by the children during the year and explained the various procedures followed in the execution of this important work.

Free Night Classes

Going into committee of the whole with Col. A. E. Geen in the chair, the Board was told by Principal W. C. Middleton that Night School classes this year would be operated on a free basis. "Fees were charged before on a basis of attendance," Mr. Middleton explained "but the remuneration from this source was considered not to have been worth-while.

He thought free classes would eliminate a lot of unnecessary work.

A number of applications for positions on the supply staff of the schools were referred to the School Management Committee. Action was taken on applications for the position of janitress, there being no vacancy at the present time, being pointed out by Chairman.

Authority for advertising the use of metal safety signs to be erected at the corner of each school was referred to the city council.

Music Course

One of the features of the meeting was the proposal of the part of the Board of Control for the Collegiate Institute Cadet Corps to affiliate with the 43rd Light Infantry (Tank). A communication from Lieut.-Col. C. H. Cahoon, commanding the regiment, stated that regimental affiliation with the Collegiate Institute cadet corps of the province was a customary procedure and could be done upon with favor by the Department of National Defence. Col. Cahoon pointed out the advantages to be derived by the cadets by affiliation, and stated that many corps had already affiliated with the district regiments throughout the province, with success.

The matter was left for the action of the Board of next year.

Photographs of Col. W. N. Ponton, a member of the Board for thirty-three years were ordered purchased and hung in the public schools of the city. This action followed the presentation to the Board of a splendid photograph of Col. Ponton by his family and which now hangs in the Board Room.

Tribute to Industrial Pianis

"The splendid results achieved by the pupils of the senior classes of the public schools to various industrial and other centres of the city last year was explained by principals of the public schools. "We obtained more benefit from active observation than they did formerly," it was pointed out. "I am convinced that this is a fine work," Col. Geen told the Board and moved that this work be extended to other public schools under the by principals." The motion carried.

Musical Education

Some discussion followed F. C. McCuaig's plea that more interest be taken in the musical education of pupils. This work is being carried on at present by teachers, Mr. McCuaig stated, and thought that the services of a music instructor should be secured for the balance of the year.

"As it stands now the course provided by the Department is an end-out farce," declared Principal Willits. "At least a graduate of this course should be able to play a piano."

Rev. Beauchamp Payne agreed that the course was not of much use. "It has no musical background," he said.

The matter was referred to the Music Committee although Chairman Allin stated that certain financial conditions must be given serious thought and doubted that any action could be taken on the matter this year.

WALK ON BRIDGE IS RECOMMENDED

Proposed Additional Walk on West Side of Overhead Bridge Favored

Under the proposed plan to construct approaches and a pedestrian walk over the west side of the overhead bridge on North Front St., from Ridley Ave. by King George School, the cost of the construction of the approaches and sidewalks only is to be borne by the municipality of the City of Belleville, the Canadian National Railways having to complete the planking and side guard rails on the pedestrian walk on the bridge itself. Sketches and plans were produced at the meeting of the Board of Control on Monday, following Thursday night's recommendation.

Before work can commence on the project, however, the matter must be advertised for 21 days prior to the commencement of the construction, as under Section 8 of the Local Improvements Act. Prior to the recommendation to pass on Monday, we shall have to advertise the matter for 21 days and there is a possibility that by the time the three weeks' advertising is up, we might be too late to pour concrete for cement sidewalks, the board concluding that angle too seriously at this time," added City Engineer Mott.

As the overhead bridge on North Front St. now stands the structure was originally erected with space and requirements for a pedestrian walk on either side of the roadway of the bridge, but there is a pedestrian walk on the east side of the bridge, but on the west side, placed in position at the time of construction, are steel eyebolts to support the brackets and uprights of steel piping through which the smaller guard railing has yet to be placed. All the C.N.R. company would have to construct would be plank floors and the referred to piping for the horizontal guard rails, for the work responsible for the approaches and sidewalks.

The proposed construction of approaches and a pedestrian walk on the west side of the overhead bridge is solely for the purpose of the protection of human life, there being clearly the lives of the children who attend King George School and who must cross North Front St. from the west side, south of the bridge. Upon this statement the City Council had recommended the measure was not without favour by many local ratepayers, whose children attend King George School.

Subsidy Cheque Totals $10.148.46

H. B. Stock, city treasurer, is today in receipt of a cheque for $10.-148.46 from the Provincial Treasurer representing Belleville's share of the Government municipal subsidy. The amount equals one mill on the city assessment and the amount will go into regular city funds.

The subsidy, long anticipated by city officials will make no difference in tax collections as allowance had already been made. City Treasurer Stock stated this morning.

Woman's Purse Snatched in Store

Purse snatchers were reported active in Belleville today when a woman's purse was stolen from a local department store Miss Cora Bowerman, R.R. No. 2, Belleville, was shopping in a local department store this morning and laid her purse down on a counter while she examine some merchandise. When she went to recover the purse, it was gone.

The theft was reported to the local police for investigation. The purse, white in color, contained $16 in cash and a cheque made out in Miss Calvert's favour for services rendered at a nearby canning factory where she has been employed of late. Miss Calvert was quite anxious for the recovery of her purse, as it contained the greater bulk of her weekly cash possessions she informed the authorities.

Charged With Illegal Possession

Only one arrest was necessary in Belleville during the past 24 hours. A local citizen, who had apparently been imbibing rather freely, found himself in the clutches of the law when one of the illegal possession of liquor were preferred against the alleged offender today with the case being heard in Mona-key's police court.

A spectator was also apprehended and will be summoned into court for his misdemeanours later.

Cannery Workers Walk Out Claiming Shortage in Pay Checks

Manager Pfeiffer States it Was an Office Mistake Which Would Be Rectified

WORK RESUMED

Stating that the amount of wages paid them was short nearly seventy women employees of the Quinte Feeds Corporation branch on Albion Street suspended operations last night and refused to return to work until the mistake was rectified.

Promised that the shortage would be fully investigated and corrected by Mr. William Pfeiffer, manager of the plant, the employees returned to tomato tables and resumed their work.

"It was all a mistake," Mr. Pfeiffer told the Ontario Intelligencer today. "We issue a large number of cheques and the tickets may have been given to the wrong people. If it is a mistake in the office it will be rectified. We are not trying to beat anyone out of their wages. As far as we are concerned there has been no trouble and there will be none. Every week we have mistakes of this kind but they have always been rectified. It will be cleared up as soon as we can get to it."

Mrs. Cook, an employee, stated that her check was ten dollars short. "I was the only one paid while I was away and the error probably was unintentional. The mistake is being remedied and everything will be all right."

MR. GEORGE PERRY REACHES AGE 92

Birthday of Well Known Business Man Falls on Sunday

On the eve of his ninety-second birthday which will be observed on Sunday, September 19th, Mr. Geo. Perry, one of the oldest active businessmen, well-known, sign setterer, awning repair man and the only one since 1900 to produce man, a business he created nearly a half century ago, is still prepared to undertake any job of lettering or work of sign painting for local customers.

In spite of his advanced age Mr. Perry is active, mentally alert and possessed of the same witty nature that has characterized his lengthy residence in Belleville—fifty-seven years, to be exact.

To farmers of the district Mr. Perry was at one time known as perhaps the largest egg and produce exporter of this central district. "The Montreal connections enabled him to buy and ship thousands of eggs weekly. Of later years, however, this business has been modified to extent until it is no longer carrying on. The business of signs, lettering and sign painting has since claimed his attention."

Up to a few years ago Mr. Perry was active as his trade on lofty heights of even the city's tallest buildings, busily engaged in lettering windows while standing precariously on narrow ledges or cornices, or leaning from the rungs of a ladder, unafraid of heights or the risk of a fall. Latterly, however, he has confined his work to the first or second floor work.

"I don't climb like I used to, but I'm still in business and prepared to do any job," declares the veteran resident. "Work has got to be a habit with me, I guess."

Martha Entertains

By ADA L. HUNTINGTON
McClure Newspaper Syndicate
WNU Service.

Martha Bradley was beaming by four eggs in a mixing bowl. To use four eggs in one cake was an unheard of extravagance, but this was an unusual occasion. She stepped into the cool pantry for some butter to grease her cake tin. Her eyes just couldn't help turning toward the roasting pan, where the last rooster, which she had been saving for their anniversary dinner, lay with its trimmings of rich pork and gravy for one more.

It hadn't seemed right to kill that bird, with their anniversary so near. She hadn't even asked Henry what he thought of it. She just did it, and that was all there was to it. If she ever did ask his opinion it would be anything of the sort he would always say, "Do just as you please. Your judgment is better than mine."

When Henry had returned from town, the afternoon before, he had said, "Company tomorrow, Martha. I met Arthur Brown today. He said he hadn't seen you since we were married, and he'd like to come over. I urged him to come to-day and spend the night with us, and he accepted."

"I like his nerve," exclaimed Martha, flushing for an invitation, after going with me for a year, and then sending me a note, telling me he had decided we weren't suited to each other. Also saying he thought it was better for us to break off before I got to thinking much of him."

"The deuce he did! You never told me that, Martha."

"Well, I wasn't so proud of it that I cared to advertise it."

"The big stiff! I hope you didn't answer it."

"I certainly did, by return mail. I told him I agreed with him perfectly in thinking we weren't suited to each other, but I was sorry he'd been disturbed about my regard for him, as I gained my affections too highly to be so careless as to bestow them on someone who hoped me as he did."

"Good for you. When did all this happen, Martha?"

"A short time before I met you." Then Martha went to finish her work and Martha planned her dinner. She decided she must make all she could of the one hen she had planned for the celebration of their fourth wedding anniversary. Last year she was making the lightest of sponge cakes, but somehow Arthur had never been so at peace with the world as when he was eating lemon sherbet and sponge cake. In fact, he had always seemed a bit more interested in what went into his stomach than what nourished his brain.

The cooking dishes were washed and every scrap in its proper place when the telephone rang. Martha hoped it wasn't anyone who thought the telephone a convenience for making social calls, but it proved to be Clara Wood, one of her most loquacious friends.

When the latisfactory conversationalist finally rang off, a glorious odor of scorched food was in the air. Martha dashed to the kitchen and opened the oven door wide. Instead of the golden brown of healthy lightness, there was a scorched ruin that even a pig could relish. Just as she was taking it from the oven Henry came in. "Well, I guess I'll discourage a saint!" Martha exploded. "One of Clara's leaving visits was the cause of that ruin. And I put the egg in it, I don't care. I'm going to make another one, if I can't afford it. I think I shall put in the whole dozen when I put it in the oven."

The second cake was a success, and Martha felt assured that her dinner was going to be a most satisfactory.

Trouble with his car kept Arthur on the road for some time, making it rather late when he arrived at Martha's. Bradley's car was in with Henry. Martha greeted him very graciously. While Arthur was removing the effects of his auto repairs, she put the last of the dinner on the table, and then stepped back to get a stranger's impression of the result of her day's labor. How could one be otherwise than pleased at the sight of the snow-white linen, in the very old hand-woven pattern, the pretty china, dainty fruit salad, chicken roasted to a perfect brown, squash, onions and mashed potatoes?

Henry had served Martha and was just about to do the same for each of white meat on Arthur's plate when the guest said, "I'm not partial to dressing in the salads, and I haven't a salted nut in the house."

"Oh, that's all right," was the prompt reply. "I thought you might be out, so to save you embarrassment, I brought a supply in my grip."

As Arthur left the room, Martha, with a comical expression, exclaimed in a low voice, "My poor anniversary dinner! Pride forbid for me to make a splurge! Justice has dealt harshly with me, and my punishment is so complete I shall never be tempted to commit a second offense of this kind."

A SIGN OF BETTER TIMES

One of the signs of better times is the increase in attendance at a school like Albert College. Depressions affect colleges and universities adversely and the fact that Albert College has its largest enrolment in years is a proof of improved conditions which permit the sending of students to college.

Albert College has had a long association with Belleville and its progress is naturally to be desired, for while Belleville has its schools, public, separate and high which serve the city and district, Albert College brings students from afar to Belleville, some even coming from South America this year.

While co-education has virtually been in force in a sort of way for some time, this year sees the practical rejoin to the co-education of years ago. Now a fine residence has been opened for girl students. Students of other years recall the old Albert College of co-education.

SONG-COLLECTING

Eight hundred songs of the peoples of the U.S.S.R. are to be published. The book will include songs of sixty nationalities inhabiting the Soviet Union and also phonographic records of these songs and instrumental music. The collection will be in three volumes.

One does not require to look with favor upon Soviet Russia's political philosophy to see the advantage of such a collection. The songs of a nation are most potent forces which are clearer indications of the national mind than any other form of memorial or institution.

The songs of nations somehow come to possess and express the spirit of a people.

One thing is certain, a collection like this will have much interest for the future generations. One can see of course the possibility that the spirit of Communism may be in places brought in for there is much writing in all forms of literature along communistic lines. This in itself will prove of interest in future days when the Soviet may have passed away. There will likely be other song groups of a national character composed generations before Communism became the political religion of Russia.

In all nations there is a vast literature, some of which is uncollected and which lives only in tradition never having been put into writing, having passed from one person to another in oral form. Such are the songs of other nations, many of which ultimately are collected into enduring form though many doubtless are lost, for some peoples are very reluctant in bringing to type their songs.

It is expected that the 800 songs of peoples of the U.S.S.R. will cover the entire range of their songs on all themes, not alone politics of the Soviet form. Russia doubtless sees a great binding force in these songs of the peoples.

CONGESTION OF TRAFFIC

Traffic regulation and expedition will be the problem continually before the public authorities as inventions and improvements continue to be made in motor vehicles and populations grow. The modern car, truck and transport have wrought vast changes in the distribution of the people and will continue to do so more and more.

Congestion of traffic is the complaint of cities large and small. Mighty London, the metropolic of the orld, has its trials and tribulations in this respect. Toronto and Montreal wrestle with the same problem and New York and other great American cities are in the same category.

A method is in force in London in some firms, the "staggering" of hours of arrival of their staff of workers. The great Selfridge store has no fewer than five thousand employees. Staggering of hours has-here been possible with fifteen minute periods for arrival in the early hours of the morning while another firm with 13,000 employees spreads out the arrival and departure of these workers over a three hour period.

Here is evidence of British efficiency and it is working out well. It is said that other large cities are thinking of some such system of handling the coming and going of their employees.

In large cities where offices and plants close at the same hour the task of handling them creates a real problem.

There is a perennial nobleness and even sacredness in work. Were he ever so benighted and forgetful of his high calling, there is always hope in a man who actually and earnestly works.—Carlyle.

PROVIDENCE

So the lilies of the field,
How their leaves instruction yield!
Hark to Nature's lesson given
By the blessed birds of heaven!
Every bush and tufted tree
Warbles sweet philosophy:
Mortal, fly from doubt and sorrow,
God provideth for the morrow.

Say, with richer crimson glows
The kingly mantle than the rose?
Say, have kings more wholesome fare
Than we poor citizens of air?
Barns nor hoarded grain have we,
Yet we carol merrily.
Mortal, fly from doubt and sorrow,
God provideth for the morrow.

One there lives whose guardian eye
Guides our humble destiny;
One there lives who, Lord of all,
Keeps our feathers lest they fall,
Pass we blithely, then, the time,
Fearless of the snare and lime,
Free from doubt and faithless sorrow,
God provideth for the morrow.

THE WORLD DOES NOT OWE US A LIVING—we owe it to ourselves to go out and make a living—so said Hazel Hurst, 21, blind from birth, who has travelled 38,000 miles and made many addresses, demonstrating the result af the work of the "Seeing Eye", that organization in New Jersey where dogs are trained to guide the blind, and blind people are trained in the use of "The Seeing Eye". Miss Hurst's "Seeing Eye" is a German shepherd dog, two years old, answering to the name of "Babe", a very alert and clever canine, who never leaves the side of Miss Hurst for longer than ten minutes at the most, and who guides her in all kinds of traffic with uncanny wisdom. Even in Paris, France, "Babe" easily solved the traffic hazards and Miss Hurst-was able to traverse the busiest streets in safety. There are 460 "Seeing Eyes" at work now and Miss Hurst says that 10,000 blind people need them. That a training school for "Seeing Eye" be established in Canada is the objective of Miss Hurst, whose parents were born in Canada although she was brought up in the United States. She is a clever, educated young lady, a pleasing conversationalist, with a genial disposition which makes friends at once wherever she may be.

WALLS HAVE EARS, it is said, and so do hydrants, according to an irate Sidelight Fan who states that hydrant ears on Front Street have caused considerable monetary damage to motor cars. The two worst cases, says he, are oddly enough, in front of banks, and scarcely a day passes without some luckless motorist suffering crumpled fenders. So many complaints have been made about this hydrant menace to motor cars that something should be done about it. Either extend the no-parking zone on each side of hydrants or change the contour of the ears.

BUILDING MODEL RAILROADS AND LOCOMOTIVES IS A HOBBY which many people in the United States and some in Canada, no doubt, and several royal personages, it is said, including our own British King. It is an expensive hobby and it supports a magazine devoted to miniature railroad building and operation. Recently a convention attended by 200 hobbyists was held in Detroit and some beautiful models were shown. Average cost of this hobby is $250 a year but some enthusiasts spend thousands. The association sets standards for models and operation and parts can be obtained from a manufacturer who specializes in them. Featured at the Detroit convention was a railroad built on a scale of 17-64 inch to the foot. It is powered by an oil fired circuit, has 1,500 feet of rolled steel tracks, laid 1 1-4 inches apart, a 9-foot spot-welded steel replica of New York City's Hell Gate Bridge.

A HISS IN TIME

An "Uncle Tom's Cabin" company once started to parade in a small New England town, when a big gander from a near-by farm-yard waddled to the middle of the street and began to hiss.

One of the actors turned toward the fowl and exclaimed: "Don't be so quick to jump at conclusions. Wait till you see the show."

LOOKING BACKWARD

20 YEARS AGO

Sept. 18th., 1917.

Miss Emma Clarke of this city landed as fine a fish as anyone this morning as has been caught in this locality for some time. In company with her brother, Mr. J. D. Clarke, Miss Clarke was bowling in Mosquito Bay when she had a strike which proved to be a prize. After considerable difficulty the fish was landed and brought to the city. It was placed on exhibition at the store of Wallbridge & Clarke on Bridge Street, and attracted much attention. The fish measured 4 feet and 2 inches in length and weighed 30 pounds. It was a magnificent specimen.

Mr. L. G. Pearce of this city, who is a member of the Board of Education and Chairman of Queen Victoria School, has presented to the principal of Queen Victoria School a framed portrait of the Duke of Devonshire, Governor General of Canada. The portrait is a valuable acquisition to the collection now in the school.

Mr. and Mrs. Lansing are visiting friends at Clinton, Ont.

Mrs. J. E. Campbell, Coleman street, is spending some time at Rossmore, Muskoka.

Mrs. S. Leavitt, Murney Street, left today to visit friends at London and Detroit.

Mrs. J. A. Goodsell and daughter are visiting relatives at Grenville, Quebec.

Dr. Farley has returned to the city after spending some time at Frontenac Park, Sealne.

Mr. Irwin Wallace has returned to Montreal to resume his studies in medicine at McGill College. He was accompanied by his room mate, Mr. Karl Wilson of Madoc.

Mr. W. A. Anderson shipped two fine Percheron horses from here today to his home at Agassiz, British Columbia. The horses were purchased from Mr. W. E. Anderson and brought a good price.

The sporting season opened on the 15th. inst. It is now legal to shoot grouse, plovers, snipe, partridge, snipe, rail, plover, swans, geese or any other waterfowl (except game bird or animal) (excepting deer), including black or grey squirrels and hares. No one person must kill more than 600 ducks during the season. Persons not residing in the Province of Ontario in order to shoot game here must obtain a license from the Provincial Secretary and pay a fee of $25.00.

A prominent citizen hailed a trolley car on Front Street yesterday, but neither the motorman nor the conductor saw him and the car sped on. A farmer heard the citizen yell, "Stop the car!" and he grabbed the trolley rope, evidently thinking that was the ringing the bell. He gave a mighty pull and the car of electricity stopped. The farmer boarded the car and all was well.

The fishing industry is very good and many anglers are enjoying the sport. Yesterday afternoon Messrs. Alex. Tisdale and H. E. Smith caught nine beauties. Messrs. Tuttle and Thomas Mills also had a fine string of bass yesterday. Also the fish caught up the bay.

Mr. R. A. Cockburn has the honor of catching the largest fish in the Bay of Quinte this season. Yesterday in Mosquito Bay he landed a lunge which weighed forty-one pounds.

50 YEARS AGO

Sept. 18th., 1887.

The Octavia Street School was opened this morning with prayer by Rev. J. W. Burke, Rector of St. Thomas' Church. Besides Mr. Burke there were present Mr. William Ashen, Chairman of the Board of Education and Messrs. W. R. Campbell and J. Diamond, members of the Board for Murney Ward, Mr. Inspector Johnston, School Inspector, and Mr. George McCarthy. There were 180 pupils present, divided into five divisions as follows: Miss Jessie Jack 74; Miss Annie Symons 53; Miss Aggie Keith 47; Miss Richards 4; Miss Lucy Crail 36. The school building has been remodeled and enlarged since the close of the school last June and it is now the airiest, best lighted and best ventilated school building in the city.

Uncle Tom's Cabin Company of about twenty persons is quartered at the Albion Hotel. At noon there was a procession down which the mules and dogs in the play had a prominent part. It is evidently a strong company.

OTTAWA PARADE

Back Stage in the Dominion Capital with WILFRID EGGLESTON

William Daum Euler, Canada's "Commercial Traveller Number One" who has journeyed 50,000 miles in search of markets in the past two years, will be setting out again shortly, this time for China and the West Indies. The Minister of Trade and Commerce has spent nearly a quarter of his two years in office "on the road", negotiating new trade arrangements with Canada's customers.

The key to Hon. W. D. Euler's career is pretty well sized up in three words: ability, integrity, persistence. He started out in the world as a poor boy, the son of immigrant parents in very moderate circumstances, and almost entirely by sheer capacity he has climbed to a post which is very close to the summit in Canadian public life.

x x x

A recent portrait of Mr. Euler gives him a Mountain look, emphasizing the grim unbending will and tenacity of the man. This is the mask which he has shown to the world in his way up. The real personality behind is tender, generous, sympathetic.

The Minister of Trade and Commerce was born 63 years ago at Conestogo, His father owned a flour mill. When William D. was nine years old he was carrying the bucket of a brick kiln, throwing four-foot chunks of wood into an inferno as hot as hell, and helping his father's brown and the skin of his face in deep dye.

He had to borrow money to go to high school. He set out to get an education with the quiet firm determination he has displayed ever since. When he was through high school he scraped up enough money to go to normal school in Toronto. Later he received a teacher's certificate, he came back and taught in the public school at Berlin.

x x x

He had a disagreement with the school board — I don't know the particulars, but they are probably to his credit — and he resigned his post, though minus a job. He decided to see if he couldn't organize a school himself — a business school. He was associated with W. E. Gowling of Ottawa, whose business college in the capital is today a thriving institution. Euler he started a college in Berlin himself.

Up to this stage, everything in the future Minister's life seemed to point toward a pedagogical career. But — significant item — he always had printer's ink in his veins. As a lad he had had a job as printer's devil at Stratford.

His next connection was with the Berlin paper, the Berliner Journal, which he ran for a while. Shortly afterwards he purchased The Record, then just started. At that time there was opposition in the shape of the Daily Telegraph. The Record prospered under its new manager, and eventually it bought out the Telegraph.

x x x

Psychologists might argue that from his early experiences in fighting his way up from the bottom rung the Minister has a 'success' complex. When he wants something, he goes out after it and gets it. He cannot brook failure. He wins elections, because always and when the time came for a promotion, instead of seeking the post of vice-pres., as some of his colleagues did, believing it to be the natural stepping stone, he ran for reeve, and won.

He was mayor of Berlin in 1913-14. It is said that if he had been mayor in 1915-16, the name Berlin would not have been changed to Kitchener.

It is whispered that he once ran in a provincial election and didn't win. If so, it must be the only election in which he failed to poll the largest number of votes. Perhaps illness or high-jocose complex' he does not care to remember that one. He must be about the best organizer of campaigns in Canada. He sets about an election with the usual grim dogmatism and thoroughness. He won Waterloo North in 1917, in 1921, won again in 1925, when the tide was against the Liberals, won in 1926, won in 1930, when the Liberals were being thrown out of office, won in 1935. His average majority has been between three and four thousand. Not one election in twenty years could be considered really close. So, in from the beginning of the count, every time.

x x x

The Minister of Trade and Commerce is an ardent and skilful bowler. He has cups and trophies with which to prove it. He once represented Canada at the British Empire Games, and, with his partner, won the Dominion Doubles Championship.

He plays golf, too, though not quite so brilliantly as bowls. Hon. C. D. Howe, Minister of Transport, and Hon. J. G. Elliott, Postmaster General, occasionally accompany him on the links.

His bridge is said to be well over the average. He is a keen player, and his enjoyment of the game helps to tide over the tedious sea voyages which he has had to undergo while seeking new markets for Canadian goods.

He loves good music; dislikes jazz. Reads the best current books, such as the selection of the Book of the Month Club. Tackled "Gone With the Wind" recently, but didn't admire it greatly.

The Minister loves honesty in a man, and respects the British code of complete, unequivocal, frank honesty. He is, one gathers, something of a philosopher, a humorist and individualist. He is a member of the Lutheran Church.

Of all the members in the present House of Commons, he best typifies the Dominion of the future — Hon. Lord Boy who makes Good. Nobody, perhaps, has had less in his favor to start with and has gone so far.

Just a note on pronunciation, fix closing. The name is pronounced Euler — it is a German name, and in Germany it would probably be pronounced Oiler. People unfamiliar with German sometimes say You-ler. But the first of the three is the pronunciation he prefers.

CHINESE BOMB DAMAGES AMERICAN LINER

During the early days of the present Sino-Japanese crisis when actual warfare had just broken out and all the world was shocked to hear of the bombing of the United States liner President Hoover a few miles out of Shanghai, later investigation placed the blame on Chinese aviators, who apparently mistook the liner for a Japanese troopship. The Chinese government quick to make amends sent a check for U.S.A. took full responsibility for the bombing and offered to make reparations. In these, the first photographs to arrive in Canada of the bombed ship, are shown in the upper photograph, all the world will remember was aerial bomb penetrated through the boat deck and one of the inland rooms. The occupant of the room where the bomb landed had left his room a few minutes before the fatal shock. John Kulick, one of the injured sailors is shown in the lower left as he recuperated in the ship's hospital.

INSTALMENT 1.

"Next ferry," said the face behind the ticket window grill, "leaves in an hour. You just missed one."

Polly Markey raked her change from the shelf, said "Thanks," and started running.

A dark, pencil man was coming through the street entrance. When he saw Polly, he halted and his big mouth widened into an experimental grin.

"Fresh!" Polly thought, and in the same moment made the unpleasant discovery that the man's cheek was one big corrugated scar, grim reminder of some shocking experience with fire.

"Miss Markey,...."

But she passed him, running, and darted out to the wharf.

Two men were pulling in the gangplank of the 3 o'clock ferry. Polly cried, "Hey—hold it, mister!" But she knew her voice was lost in the first labored grind of the ferry's machinery.

Slim legs flying, she sucked her breath between her teeth, shoved two people into the crowd and blew, hard. The resulting shrill blast brought several heads up, including the one in the stern of the long sleek launch waiting for the ferry to ease out.

Polly saw only the two men hauling in the gangplank. She cried, "Wait!.... Wait for me!"

One of the men grinned. The other waved an arm in warning of the open water between the wharf and the ferry.

Polly saw the open water and, suddenly out the corner of her eye, the launch at the bottom of the ladder on her right. She spun around and hurried back to yell down at the preoccupied figure handing over the wheel to a uniformed engine, which just then roared deafeningly.

The bow of the boat was directly under the ladder. If she would only jump up. Something caused her to jerk her head around; the short, dark man in the corrugated scar. He was hurrying toward her. The next moment she was on the ladder. The propeller had begun to churn when she jumped. Her feet struck amidships and before she could gain her equilibrium she was by the deck behind rolling aft!

When the young man recovered sufficiently from his surprise he pulled the throttle lever back and helped the unexpected passenger to her feet.

"How was I to know you were coming aboard?" he said, soberly.

Seeing his startled expression, Polly suddenly burst into laughter. "I'm sorry," she said at last. "I yelled, didn't I? Thanks for—for—"

She noticed now that he was wearing white pants, the cuffs rolled up at the bottoms, and nothing else. From the canvas belt to the top of his powerful shoulders, he was coppery skin.

"Laughter," said Polly's eyes as she said, with flitting gestures, "Narrow in the middle. Nice at the top—bulging muscles. Who are you, anyway, Barnaby Macdonald?"

Reaching behind him, he caught up a white bathing top and pulled it over his head.

"Name's Jerry Brell," he said, meeting her eyes. "Who are you?"

"Known on the waterfront as Jerry the Beachcomber." He indicated the cushioned seat forward. "Better sit down and check up. You landed hard enough to break something. Come to think of it, you might let me do a little work on that once while frock."

Polly's smile vanished. "Oh, but I can't, Jerry. I sit down—I mean—I've simply got to catch that ferry. I must. I told Mr. Fordell I would be on the three o'clock ferry. If I'm not, I may lose a chance of getting a job. It's terribly important."

His head shook, gravely. "They wouldn't take you on the ferry in mid-harbor. It isn't done."

Polly went forward and sat down to gaze disconsolately at the receding ferry.

Jerry Brell leaned back against the engine housing. "I'd run over if I could. Be glad to. But it's impossible just now. I came over to take on cargo." His head tilted. "Nothing to do but take you back to the ferry wharf, I suppose."

Polly turned and her eyes fixed on the stocky man on the wharf. "You haven't time to see me ashore further up, have you?" she asked. "The Yacht Club pier would be all right."

He started the engine and came and sat beside her, a hand on the small wheel in the bow. "So you're one of the Yacht Club crowd," he said.

Polly smiled. "I'm a working girl. At least I was until a short time ago. And I might have been again, only I said, rudely, if I hadn't dubbed this appointment with Mr. Fordell."

Jerry Brell, eyes squinched up, was gazing off toward shore, Polly knew. Suddenly he gave a small speedboat just putting out from Algerin wharf.

"Fordell's?" he droned young man said. "You're going to Fordell's on the Island?"

She nodded. He swung around and shouted through cupped hands, "Garbrook....! Oh, Garbrook!"

The smaller craft swerving from its course and came skipping over the waves toward the launch.

Jerry Brell turned to Polly once more. "Better talk to Mr Williams before you take a job at Fordell's."

"Who is Nip Williams?" Polly asked.

"Mr. Fordell's social secretary—or something of the sort. You may think she's slightly screwy, but she's not."

The speedboat came alongside. The lone occupant looked up, smiling. "Ho, Brell. What's up?"

Brell leaned over the side. "This pretty lady is in a hurry to get to Norris Fordell's. You don't happen to be going that way?"

The fetching grin in the handsome face below then widened. "Right. Starting over. Delighted to have a passenger. Hold a moment until I get set."

"Why did you say I should talk with Nip Williams?" Polly asked quickly.

Brell might not have heard her, for he proceeded to pass her down to the waiting arms of the man Garbrook. Not looking at her, he said. "Sorry I can't make introductions, Garbrook. I haven't had time to find out myself."

Polly sat down in the stern of the rocking little boat and lifted her eyes to Jerry Brell's. "Pauline Markey," she said firmly. "Polly to Jerry the Beachcomber."

The grace of blue-green water grew yet until the launch were well apart. Polly thought, "He was nice. Jerry Brell."

The man beside her in the speedboat spoke. His voice was pleasant, but it was sober without being grave.

"I suppose all your life you've been told how lovely you are, Pauline Markey."

Polly felt her face grow warm under the direct and wholly unexpected compliment. She thought but did not say, "I was just thinking that while you are years older than I am, you're really young and terribly good-looking." She said aloud, "Do you always make such a pretty speech, when a girl passenger is thrown upon you?"

"Only when such a pretty speech is deserved," he answered, laughing.

Her smile held while she looked at him. His hair was jet black. His gray eyes were set in a long, well-proportioned face that ended in a firm, pointed chin. He was quite brown. Not the dark baked brown of Jerry Brell, but the carefully developed tan of a man who must be seen in drawing-rooms as well as on the beach. His hands were the long-fingered hands of an artist, a pianist perhaps.

Garbrook said, pleasantly, "I am Angus Garbrook, Miss Markey. My place is next to Fordell's."

"Oh, fine." Polly said. "I'm going to see Mr. Fordell about a job. If I get it, we'll be neighbors, so you'd better start in. Pauline to Polly if we prefer it. I do. And I hate Miss Markey."

He laughed, softly. "I'll be pretty much better myself. And even Fordell's young Ted calls me Angus, so...."

"So that disposes of the preliminaries," Polly said, smiling. "You play, don't you?"

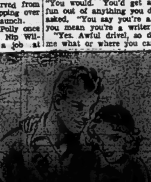
"Play?" His shrewd his long legs out, legs sheathed in dark blue slacks that were only a little darker than his blue open-neck sport shirt. "Not all the time, Polly. Occasionally I work. And very hard."

She saw the twinkle in his eyes and made a face at him. "You know what I meant. You play the piano. At least you have hands for it."

"A little," he chuckled. "Also the typewriter. I'm a far more proficient typist than pianist, but I get a lot of fun out of both."

Watching him, Polly thought, "He's nice. You'd get a lot of fun out of anything you did." She asked, "You earn a typist; you mean you're a writer?"

"Yes. Awful drivel, so don't ask me what or where you can find a copy."



He slid forward off the seat and dig something to the engine. Then he sat beside her again, he said, "Fordell is Evelyn's third husband. The first, father of Sheila and Julian, killed himself about eight years ago after there had been some scandal about Evelyn and her husband's younger brother-in-law. Later Evelyn and the youngest scandal were married and—" He gestured vaguely. "There's no point in going into unpleasant details. Evelyn was her second husband were divorced about five years ago."

A little cry escaped Polly's lips as a salty spray cut across her eyes. Quickly Angus Garbrook put a hand under her chin and mopped her face with a large handkerchief.

Polly opened her eyes. "Thanks," she said. "I was blinded." But though the hand holding the handkerchief had returned to the tiller, the fingers of his other hand still rested under her chin. She said, his gaze locked with hers, "Ugly past history. Let's talk about colored hair and gorgeous grayeyes. All I need now is a story for her to move through."

Gentle laughter was in Polly's eyes as she said, "I'd make a very poor fiction heroine. I'm afraid, Angus. Nothing interesting or exciting ever happens to a girl of my type."

But though she screened her feelings with words, the touch of his fingers had made her suddenly self-conscious. She had known this man only a few minutes, and yet she knew — and was shamed by the knowledge — that if he had kissed her instead of barely touching her with his fingers, she would have been no more moved than she was now.

Brell proceeded to hand her down to the waiting arms of the m an Gerrcrok. Not looking at her, he said, "Sorry I can't make the introduction, Garbrook. I haven't had the pleasure myself."

Polly's head lifted and left her chair under a beach umbrella and was coming leisurely toward them, a vivid, artificial blonde, she was wearing very full beach pajamas of silver cloth, sandals and dark glasses. She was rather large but well proportioned. There was a dead-white face of beauty in her round face; but there was a trace of hardness, too.

"What do you want?" Mrs. Fordell asked coldly. "Why do you want to see my husband?"

Polly said, evenly, "I have an appointment with Mr. Fordell. I told him I would come on the three o'clock ferry, but I missed it."

Their eyes clashed and seeing the blonde was about to open her mouth over her head. But the arrival of Angus and Jerry Brell saved them from that.

Angus said pleasantly, "Evelyn, this is Miss Markey. Norris asked her to come over on business. I believe Nip Williams—"

Polly said, gravely, "How do you do, Mrs. Fordell. And, quickly "Will it be all right if I wait in the study?"

"Study door on your left." Sheila volunteered, "as you enter the living room."

"If you will excuse me," Polly said, with a little curtsy, and was moving rapidly along the path with an interesting trio came around the house. A dog came first, a big intelligent looking animal with a high fine head. Then Sheila, on the dog's taut leash, appeared a large stooped man with a battered gray cap pulled down over his eyes. And last trailing the dark glasses fitted close over her handsome eyes. Last trailing the blind man, came a small boy in khaki shorts and white tropical hat.

Polly said to the youngster, "You're Ted, aren't you?"

The boy looked off, exposing the shiny, freckled little face to the sunlight. Frankly curious eye studied Polly's face. He said at last, "You're mam," and the "mam" seemed to come as an afterthought. "And that's the boy sedded, "is Mel Dysch. He's blind and he can't talk or hear."

"Oh, I'm sorry," Polly said. Her eyes followed Dyson and the dog as they neared the servants' cottage. Then she faced the boy once more. "And you're Julian. How's for you and me being friends?"

The youngster answered abruptly "can you play baseball?"

"You bet I can. Or any other boys' game you want to name. But I must go in and see your father now." She ruffled his hair and went on to the house.

Sheila had said, "Prak' door on your left as you enter the living room." Polly expected an entry hall and having opened the screen door, she stepped directly from the porch into the living room. It was a large comfortably furnished room but not until later did Polly note its details. Now she saw only the radio against the wall on her left, and just beyond it, the half open door. She knocked and receiving no answer pushed the door open and stepped into Norris Fordell's study.

A dark green flat-top desk was on the far side of the room. Behind the desk, its back to a wide window, was a green armchair. There were two of them. High shelves of well-lined three walls and directly to the left of Polly was a row metal filing cabinets.

Then Polly saw the bronze figure. It was on the centre filing cabinet, the figure of a very small girl with plaited hair, sitting down at a huge frog held in her fat little hands. Polly remembered seeing a similar figure at the Brookgreen Gardens, in the open museum there. "Frog Baby" was the placard on the museum piece had read. This one is smaller, but well made, and you knew, a copy; but it was very like the other.

Polly would not soon forget this particular "Frog Baby". For her the bronze figure would always be beginning and, curiously enough, the end of an incredible adventure. But now she turned with a long sigh, and was standing in the centre of the room, looking down at the broad desk when she became aware of the closed door to the right of the desk.

Closed the door was, and yet Polly knew she heard two voices there, so slowly that she could not be sure it was nothing at all, it began to seem that way to her. The next moment it was flung wide open, and Mrs. Fordell stood into the room. Seeing Polly, she grew suddenly rigid and her small dark eyes set in a terrified stare.

Polly's uneasiness vanished. She took a step forward. "I'm sorry I frightened you," she said, quietly. "Are you—Nip Williams?"

The girl's thin hands clutched at her throat and her lips moved soundlessly. She spoke at last, in an awed whisper. A shrieking wail in the distance, and the words were less startling.

"I know who you are. You've come to see about a job. But you must go away, at once. He may be back any minute. You must find you here. They'll break your spirit. They're all going to the mine. They're all plotting something terrible. I don't know what it is, but—"

The marble-like eyes flattened wildly in their sockets as somewhere in the house a door slammed.

Nip Williams was gliding through the same doorway by which she had entered when she turned and flung back in that strained whisper.

"It's too late . . . he's coming. You're trapped!" and vanished behind the silently closing door.

INSTALMENT II.

Polly shook herself, she was tense. Were they all mad, these Fordells and Cleaves and the nerve-ridden girl who was living in mortal terror of something, the more horrible because she did not know what it was?

A pleasing deep voice spoke behind her." So you decided not to take the ferry after all."

He was standing in the living room doorway, a tall straight figure with white hair and a wide kindly smile. Polly returned his smile and for the first time since she had stepped from Angus Garbrook's speedboat, she felt herself of a depressing sense of unreality.

"I'm sorry I've put you to so much trouble, Mr. Fordell," she apologized. "I was so sure I'd catch the three o'clock ferry."

"But how did you get here?"

She told him, laughing, of her clumsy leap to a stranger's boat and of her subsequent transfer to Angus Garbrook's craft.

Norris Fordell laughed with her. "And I thought you were supposed to be a nervous wreck!"

Polly liked this man. He would be a grand person to work for. The others of this household might be suffering from a variety of delusions, but Norris Fordell was delightfully sane.

She told him, "I'll never understand Aunt Jo. She writes you asking if you can give me a job and then proceeds to explain I'm not supposed to hold a job." Her voice grew grave. "There's nothing really wrong with me, Mr. Fordell. I took one tumble—but I'm over that now."

He nodded and said, "Won't you sit down?" He crossed the room and sank into the chair behind the desk.

"I'm sorry Aunt Jo gave you the impression I'm not well." Polly told him. "I'm as good as new. And I'll go mad if I can't have something to do."

"I understand," Norris Fordell said. "Josephine did say you had run into a little difficulty; but that she also explained you were much too restless to be happy."

Mr. Vernon Burtt left for Kirkland Lake this week where he has secured a position.

While perusing the records of the Shannonville Fair this week the Fair Board turned up some very interesting facts. According to early records the fair was first held at Matrow on the farm of Dan Morgan about one hundred years ago. The races were held on the dirt roads at this time with only running races being held as there were no trotting races. The Matrow Road, owned by William Ward was used for displaying agricultural products. Only agricultural products were allowed to be exhibited, fancy work, etc., being barred.

About seventy-five years ago the fair was moved to Shannonville and was held from the Kingston tray, now the 2 Highway south of the Salmon River. On these grounds the booths and all amusements were situated while the races were held from Millown to Shannonville a half mile. As the highway is now situated, the race started at Shannonville and ran to the present site of the Anglican Church.

Due to increases in both exhibits and attendance the fair was moved to the present location where the race track and one building for display purposes were built. Later this building burned and was replaced by the present building.

The Shannonville Fair has always held today and a record crowd is anticipated. Many improvements have been made to the grounds and the line of entertainment will be attended the crowd during the day.

Exercise Has Rewards

Iva Stewart

Her trim figure is the result of regular exercise

(By Helen Follett)

Sneak five minutes for exercises every morning and you'll put grand complexion rewards. There is nothing like a bit of muscle work to plant blooming roses in your cheeks and put glints in your blond wild flower". Make a vow, be determined to keep right on your your daily chores. Don't slip or be lazy for exercise. No woman can afford to do that.

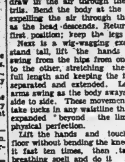
Stand erect, feet fairly far apart. Clasp the hands behind your neck, force the head and elbows back and draw in the air through the nostrils. Bend the body at the waist, expelling the air through the lips as the head descends. Return to first position; keep the legs rigid.

Next is a wig-wagging exercise; stand tall, lift the hands high, swing from the hips from one side to the other, stretching the arms full length and keeping the fingers separated and extended. Let the arms swing as the body sways from side to side. These movements will take tucks in any waistline that has expanded beyond the limits of physical perfection.

Lift the hands and touch the floor without bending the knees. Do it fast ten times, then take a breathing spell and do it ten more. Fine business. Get under the cold shower. You'll be as fit as a fiddle.

If the neck is still hanging onto freckles, spots of tan or the red glow left by sunburn, scour it with soap suds and a brush every night, rinse and pat dry, then sponge with a golden made of equal parts of peroxide and lemon juice.

Patting in mineral oil is a good practice. A towel wrung out of ice-water, placed around the neck and covered with a dry one will make the flesh glow. That exhilarating state helps to cast off discolored skin scales.



Keep in mind that your feet are the foundation isn't strong, there's bound to be trouble. There will be a strain upon the spine. To avoid painful locomotion, shoulders are thrown forward and the chest contracted.

See that shoes are fitted properly. They must conform to the contour of the feet. The arch must be supported, toes must not be crowded. If you have an inflared foot, don't select an outlared or straight shoes.

Go to a shop where you will come in contact with clerks who understand their jobs. They can give valuable advice.

Keep your hands out of cold water if you want the skin surface to be as smooth as satin. Use lanoline freely; it has a grand effect upon the human hide. Don't overlook the benefits of the hand brush. It naturally ends the cause of cleanliness, but it orders the blood streams to be up and about their business.

The cuticle cream freely. As birthdays pile up, the fabric of the finger nail is likely to thicken. That's no joy. Oiling keeps nails from breaking and cracking and discourages the appearance of hangnails. Two minutes of attention every night will keep hands and rosy tokens in form.

Advice to the Love lorn

by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Breaking Up a Home

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My children are all married and away from the old home, which is situated in a nice little town where we're all friends and neighbors. My daughter has been urging me to make my home with her for the rest of my days. She does not suggest my selling the home, but thinks it would be well for me to rent it for a year or two, and see how we make out. I like my son-in-law, who is very fond of me, and my grandchildren are fond of me, too. And, of course, I could be home with them, while my daughter and her husband go out of evenings. I have a little vacation now and then. What do you think of this arrangement? Does it work out well? You must have had many letters on the subject.

"Granny"

Your position in your daughter's home promises to be infinitely better than that of a penniless parent, who takes shelter under the roof of son or daughter. And the fact that your daughter is so anxious for you to sell the house and turn the proceeds over to her proves that she has your interest at heart.

If you would not miss your old friends and neighbors, perhaps the experiment seems worth trying. It always seems to me, when a mother goes to live with her married children, she should assume the role of a guest in the household, and never offer a word of criticism.

She Danced With His Enemy

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My boy friend took me to a dance. Everything went along smoothly, until he left me to see a friend. While he was on his errand a former friend of his (now his enemy) asked me to dance, and I did. But my boy friend returned before the dance was finished and became very angry not to find me there. I called him a "sore head" and he wouldn't speak to me nor look at me since.

He took me home, and seemed all right then, but the next time I saw him he acted indifferent and made no date for the future. I have begged his pardon, but he just ignores my apology. Now, Miss Fairfax, how can I get him back, as I really love him?

Emily

As you've apologized to your boy friend, and he continues to be indifferent, there's nothing you can do but wait until he gets over it. Just wait for him to realize what he's missing. In the meantime, don't mope waiting for him. Girls who show a little independence with the sex always have a better time than their meek sisters. Good luck to you.

writer how a divorcee signs her name when she is given court permission to resume her maiden name? We will assume that her name was Mary Brown, married and divorced from Arthur Smith.

1. How should she sign her name if after divorcing Arthur Smith, she marries David Peterson?

Reader.

1. If the divorcee, Mary Brown, resumes her maiden name, she resumes the title of Miss . . . Miss Mary Brown.

2. If, after divorcing Arthur Smith, she marries David Peterson, her formal name is Mrs. David Peterson, and her informal name is Mary Brown Peterson. A business letter would then, for instance, be signed:

Very truly yours

Reply to Thanks

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please tell me the correct reply to make when a person thanks you for a service rendered? I am an interested reader of your writings and I find in them truths of great value.

C.

Thank you for the friendly and enthusiastic things you say about my columns . . . I'm so happy that you find it helpful.

When a person thanks us for something that we have done for that person, we say in acknowledgment of this thanks, "Thank you for letting me do it. Jane I was delighted to be able to help." or "I made me very happy that you could let me do that for you." or "I had a good time doing it . . . thank you for letting me . . ."

In short, we shouldn't say in the unattractive remark, "Don't mention it," which implies that a person wishes to mention this service. . . . If he or she didn't, the omission would be ungracious politeness and lack of appreciation.

Butter Spreaders

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please tell me the correct use of butter knives and can they only be used with butter plates? Is it correct to use them at informal luncheons? Where does one place the knife and butter plate?

O

From the wording of your questions, I find by "butter knife" that you mean the small "individual butter knives" (sometimes called "butter spreaders"), and that by "butter plate" you mean "bread and butter plates". Is that correct? What is called the "butter knife" is the knife that is the serving knife for the butter that has not been individually served. This is for a very informal "family service" or buffet service.

But "individual butter knives" are the ones placed on the bread and butter plates which are at the left of the places, above the glasses.

This small knife is placed either parallel to the silverpiece at each place, or parallel to the edge of the table. These individual butter knives are used not only for the spreading of butter on bread and rolls, but for spreading such items as jellies, marmalades, and so forth. Items which are most conveniently set to the bread and butter plates. These knives also are most convenient for use in eating cheeses.

Individual butter knives are correct for use at breakfast, at both formal and informal luncheons, at buffet parties and supper, at tea (for butter or marmalade or cheese with toast, for instance), and for informal dinners. As a matter of fact, we find them used at all dinners except the most formal ones.

Child Needs Playroom In Home

Ought to Have Some Spot Of All His Own, Even if it is Small

(By Lisa Grenelle)

There was one thing about those Smith children—they were never under-food. You never saw any of their things lying around the living room. And yet, they weren't the repressed type; you never heard Mama Smith ordering or nagging them about it. They apparently all arranged beforehand. A truce signed, and there were no hard feelings.

"How do you do it?" I asked Mrs. Smith. "Your children are so beautifully trained, but not at all repressed, sullen or shy."

"Come and I'll show you the secret," Mrs. Smith said. And we went down cellar.

There was a play room, and such a play room! It was well worn and used and not too painfully neat. As for toys and trappings, there was nothing left out, from ping pong table to punching bag, train tracks, blocks, express wagons a doll house and two live kittens. The furniture was painted bright red and the walls were adorned according to the taste and moods of the children. There were bright gingham curtains at the little window, crookedly hemmed by Smity, and tacked up at a rakish angle by Bob.

World of Own

"A world of their own—to do with as they wish," she said.

"In which they make all the noise they want.

"A place in which they can play or fight to their heart's content.

"And no grown-up is allowed to cross the threshold without express permission."

"No wonder you don't have any problems," I said. "No wonder the children don't mess up the living room."

But some of us live in apartment houses, and we haven't any cellars, not by any stitles.

I know; I had that trouble myself—the living room had to go. And never has a dining room been more enjoyed, or used to more useful, not only from the children's point of view, but from mine.

The children, sometimes, but if we try we can usually arrange something, and it solves so many problems. Children need a world of their own, just as we do. If you can't give them a room, at least you can claim more privacy and consideration and get it. There's no excuse for the children to be bothering you, to be making a racket all over the place.

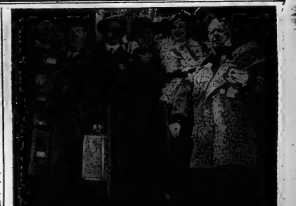
That Body of Yours

By James D. Barton, M.D.

MORE ABOUT THE DROPPED STOMACH PTOSIS

I believe it would be a good investment of time and money for those suffering with chronic indigestion to take a barium meal and have it watched by the fluoroscope. Only a few days required for it to pass completely out of the body. While not everyone can afford this examination there are clinics where, if cancer is suspected, this examination will be given without charge.



The barium meal X-ray examination will not tell everything about the stomach and intestines, nevertheless it will tell whether cancer or ulcer is or is not present which is worth much to patient and physician.

However there is a condition which is frequently found by this method that may be causing various stomach and intestinal symptoms which otherwise remain undiagnosed and not discovered; this is a falling down—ptosis—of the stomach and intestines.

A patient with ptosis usually thin and narrow in physique and is very nervous and irritable. Some one has described him as the automobile driver who finds that everybody is driving improperly except himself. This nervous, irritable condition of course removes most of the fat that should be supporting the abdominal organs and so stomach and intestine fall to the bottom of the abdomen instead of being up in their proper positions. Naturally there will be stomach distress from slow emptying of the stomach, gas formation, constipation with other intestinal disorders, and other symptoms of indigestion.

Surgeons have suggested a few weeks ago in talking about ptosis, in the building up of more fat in and on the body, the deliberate shortening of the abdominal muscles by exercise and thereby pull the abdomen so sag!, and the wearing of a properly fitted abdominal belt which will hold up the stomach and intestine until at least some fat has stored between the organs, and the abdominal muscles have been tightened.

Rest of mind and body, whenever and wherever possible, will build up the nervous system. Instead of allowing it to be spent needlessly or without purpose.

W. C. Fields in the hilarious comedy hit "The Old Fashioned Way" at the Capitol Sunday, midnight, and Monday.

Fashion Flashes

(By Alice Alden)

Quilts point the way to millinery style once more. Many of the newest hats have quilts for their sole trimming. A typical hat is of dark fuchsia antelope with matching quilts placed across the back and jutting out far to one side.

Smoke clouds appear on the evening scene as hot flame red and smoky grey satanie importance on the color card. An exquisite frock is of smoky gray chiffon over over flame-color crepe, with birdings of gray and flame-colored sequins. These beads appear as the dots decollelage and around the wide hem.

One more feet come to the fore as the shortened hemline is used for the smartest dresses. A charming dinner frock in black mat crepe has its shortened front hemline split up the centre front. Split and hemmed by a narrow piping of gold kid, as is the low V neck in front.

The last word in beauty is offered by a nightcap made of satin with sleeves and wide hem flounces of black Chantilly lace. Black velvet ribbon is used for shoulder straps and girdle.

New numbers in house coats are ready for the autumn shopper. A nice model is in woven checked taffeta and has skirt fulness concentrated at either side by long-fitted shirrings, giving a flat panel in front.

Get the tickets and be off, but have your travel cost first. A grand model is in dull blue and deep pink wool crepe with contrast of red for. It has wide, slashed pockets at the sleeves and a ripple flare back.

"SISSY" LAXATIVES

Fail to Empty the Lazy Colon

Chronic constipation is too serious a rule with but over "sissy" laxatives in place of a real medicine is proven thereby people value. "Sissy" laxatives only deceive because they do not reach the seat of the trouble—the lazy colon. There is a movement of the bowels, but still the colon or large bowel is entirely neglected, hence gas generated there which give rise to pains and aches, inflammation, lumbago and other serious and painful diseases.

To thoroughly cleanse the colon a real medicine is required and there is, perhaps, none more effective than Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This medicine had to prove its merits to the full before it was considered worthy to be offered to the public under the name of Dr. Chase. For over fifty years it has proven its superiority as a corrective for constipation and a regulator of the liver and kidneys.

For other serious diseases you would not be satisfied with a single treatment, then why trifle with constipation which is the cause called the "mother of diseases". It is a fine habit to use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills weekly as so to ensure a complete emptying of the colon and the healthy working of the liver and kidneys.

"Make a Wish"
Bobby Breen in a New Idea.

Bobby Breen's new musical starring vehicle, "Make a Wish", brings not only the engaging boy lyrics tenor to a characteristically lively screen role, but also the polished Basil Rathbone and Marion Claire, NBC singing star, as his adult romantic principals of the story. In the lavish scenic production are featured such popular players as Henry Armetta, Ralph Forbes, Leon Errol, Donald Meek, Herbert Rawlinson and Leonid Kinskey.

Many musical songs were written for the picture by Oscar Straus, famous Viennese composer who journeyed to Hollywood especially for the purpose and who collaborated with the late Paul Webster and Louis Alter, in the composition of such hit numbers as the theme song "Make a Wish", "Music in My Heart", "Birthday Furever", and "Campfire Dreams" which, have already achieved wide popularity over the radio. In Manager George Bobby is assisted by his 45 members of St. Luke's Choristers, the outstanding boys' singing organization of the Pacific Coast. Producer Joseph Pasternak's youngsters who spent several weeks on "Make a Wish".

In the story, Bobby newly arrived at a boys' camp, forms a fast friendship with Rathbone, as a composer, who enjoys the company of the lad because he himself had missed much of childhood. Through Bobby's letters from his young mother, Miss Claire, Rathbone becomes also interested in her but gradually becomes the inspiration for the singing of "Make a Wish" at the camp accompanied by her overhearing. Then a romantic complication develops between the two men, especially when Rathbone buys Miss Claire's song as his own composition.

The last act of the operetta almost but before it reaches the screen many more slightly mad amateur song writers endeavour to substitute their own music, to which end they establish themselves on Broadway. The climax of the story comes during the proceeding under strange circumstances, in the concert arrangements of that song. Various sore behind the scenes, it is here that a spectacular scene investing dignified Carnegie Hall any, forms the background for the entertainment.

"Make a Wish" was directed by Kurt Neumann, who has been in charge of the filming of all Bobby Breen pictures. Principal Production Manager Lee Marcus, screen play on a lavish scale. In addition to Bobby acquaints a boys' camp and in a theatre many scenes were filmed in richly appointed Carnegie Hall. "Make a Wish" offers a new idea in musicals, and will appeal to every member of the family.

Coming Attractions

Three good varied features are announced for exhibition on the same program including a clever and funny Walt Disney Silly Symphony cartoon, "Mother Goose Melodies," the Belle latest World News Events, and Buster West and Tom Dugan in a hilarious musical comedy of the briny deep, "Girls Ahoy."

G. F. CLAY WINS CHAMPIONSHIP OF R. C. A. F. MEET

Repeats Win of Last Year—Flyers Put on Fine Display Air Acrobatics

PARACHUTE JUMP

Sergt. Cameron Leaps From Plane at 2000 Feet

Trenton, Sept. 18.—(Special)—Diving, rolling and looping in a spectacular manner, four Silver Siskins and a Fairchild aircraft displayed the skill of two thousand feet above the airdrome. The jump was the first ever executed at the yearly gathering. The jumper fell seven hundred feet before his pilot chute fluttered open and the main chute into place. Uniformly skilful flying gathered many points as the jumper land as a shifting wind floated him a mile away to a position back of the landing field. Following, the big fellow monoplanes with Flight-Lieut. Vincent at the controls swooped low over the heads of the spectators on a number of occasions giving them a fine chance to see a large ship in action at close range.

Formation Flying

Formation flying by Flying Officers, D. Elane, Evans and MacBrien in Siskins was a thrill to the crowd. They displayed army manoeuvres with the greatest skill and precision, in the various aerobatic altitudes. Flying Officer Vincent, handling the monoplane of a Siskin, held those on the ground breathless with his exciting individual acrobatic performance.

Athletic Events

The grounds and weather were perfect for the athletic events. At the end of the meet, A. C. O. Y. Clay was the individual grand aggregate winner with 16 points and the T.T.S. took the unit grand aggregate honours with 49 points. Kinsella and A.C. Grey-Nobles while A.C. Fee, Grey-Nobles and Wylie in the sack race. Wives and children of the station service personnel were also given their share who make the meet more interesting. Comment on the air show was made by Air Vice Marshal W. O. ROWE ASSAILS

Weed System in Mine Area

Where Conservatives attained power, he told the Parry Sound audience, the municipalities would be assisted by a road system, and a larger apportionment of the provincial mines income taxes." Further, in assisting the north, an effort would be made to explore and develop "many thousands of patented mining claims which are inactive."

"A good main trunk line from North Bay to Kirkland Lake and Timmins and intersecting points will be one of our objectives," he continued. "We will also adopt a policy of building branch lines for the benefit of settlers and new mining areas. We propose to investigate the needs and the practicability of building access roads from Timmins to Sudbury."

His party believed mining taxes should be standard and no further increases made. Employment and prosperity would increase through a sound mining policy, one which encouraged the industry, Mr. Rowe said.

Before the Huntsville meeting, Mr. Rowe addressed a similar group of courses in outlying districts so residents could avoid the winter gasoline-freezing. From such work benefits could be obtained by selling "to the highest bidder."

If elected, the Conservatives would form a tourist department, Mr. Rowe expressed the belief. Recognizing and expanding the province's tourist industry could produce $200,000,000, compared with $60,000,000 obtained from mining, he presumed.

The proposed department would have charge of the handicraft branch of the industry, he declared by "a competent minister." The Conservative leader stressed that the Quebec province last year obtained $17,000,000 from handicraft sales.

HEPBURN DENIES

Says Rowe Refuses Free Assault

Mr. Hepburn declared Mr. Roe was to name the cabinet minister he said owed the province $50,000 as the result of a bribe during a Liberal on which $80,000 succession duties were paid.

Asked "What about Roebuck?" he said, "Roebuck is a member of the party which voted against the repeal of section 98 and section 98 is the section that is used to strike out the right of free assembly." "The premier said he himself had voted for its repeal.

Mr. Rowe's party was the party which introduced the Workmen's Compensation Act, the Mothers' Allowances Act and the Old Age Pensions Act, too, he said.

TWO SUSPECTS

P.O.P. Elane, who is being held in the custody of the Picton police, and Sergt. Edward Thompson, is under armed guard in the Belleville General Hospital, where Elane and Sergeant Thompson will meet today with Magistrate Ponton presiding. Action, regarding the charges to be preferred against the trio, it is being intimated that charges of robbery, automobile theft, carrying weapons and violation of the Highway Traffic Act charges will be laid.

Elane, who is married to Cecil Thompson, a brother of Edward Thompson, the injured man, and Fred Stevens, will appear separately before a Justice of the Peace and will be charged with theft of casody for a week, pending further investigation, Chief Ponton said.

Kingston, Ont., Sept. 18.—(CP)—Elane and a farmer pose rounded up three men suspected of robbery after gallant Trenton police officers engaged in a gun battle along the Montreal-Toronto highway near Napanee. Tipped off by the police automobiles in reply to the bandits' fire as the two machines raced by at one hour along the road near here.

Elane, who with Edward Thompson, 32, Hamilton; big brother of Cecil Thompson, Toronto. Inspector Frank Gardner said the men faced charges of robbing the Picton Farmers' Warehouse, car theft and carrying offensive weapons.

At the end of the highway chase, the automobile crashed and the only one man was captured once more later. He gave the name of Fred Stevens, but the police men did find into the bush which was surrounded by the police.

Story of Capture

A second man was captured when accosted by 18-year-old Alex Mackie, East Colborne lad who rounded up the man with a pitchfork. He jammed the fork in the right shoulder of the man who then wielded a crowbar.

Mackie says the man attempt to crawl into a hole in his barn with a policeman standing below. Then the man rushed him, Mackie grabbed the fork, pinned him to the side of the barn where the intruder was held until the officer arrived.

Edward Thompson was captured by Provincial officers on the railway one mile west of Colborne, near Lakeview with a wound in his right wrist.

'Rip' Collins Back with Cubs Inspires Team Mates to Win, Giants Hold Lead, Position

Giants Down Reds And Cubs Swamp Phillies 10-2

COLLINS LATE?

Cards Winning Streak is Stretched to Seven in a Row

By BILL PRYDER
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

The Ripper's back folks; the Cubs are looking up again.

Quantley, before the House now is whether Rip Collins isn't returning too late to do the Cubs much good in their world Baseball League pennant chase after the Giants.

Still 3½ games behind the New Yorkers, and with only 16 to go, the Cubs are afraid of running out of ball games. And the way those Terry-Terriers are hitting there doesn't seem to be an awful lot of hope for the Cubs.

Collins' return to active duty yesterday, for the first time since he broke an ankle-end Charley Grimm's heart—on Aug. 10, was marked by the best pitched output on the part of the Cubs in days. Both offensively and defensively they were a far different collection in knocking off the Phillies 10-3 than they were in the field in throwing out-four to the Bees just previously.

Four For Glenn

Although the big show was provided by Lanny Harris, with a five-hitter, and Gabby Hartnett, with three hits and five runs batted in, Collins was on hand as the always-dangerous spark that the Cubs have been missing since he joined the hospital brigade.

The Giants, well on the road to their most enjoyable western swing of the year, won their fourth victory in five starts in the Hinterlands yesterday and stayed well out in front. Harry Crumbert got away to a shaky start, but tightened up and allowed only three hits through the last eight innings as the Giants topped the Reds 6-3.

The Cardinals, doing their best to get back into the thick of the fight, stretched their undefeated string to seven games—including six wins and a tie—and they did it at the expense of no less a terror than Boston's Bees. Lon Peti gave Johnny Mize the high hard one in the eighth, and Johnny did just as expected with it—he drove it House Gang came through 2-0.

Pittsburgh's Pathetic Pirates had a big eight-run seventh-inning and slaughtered the Brothers 16-4.

Rain washed out three of the American League games, leaving the spotlight to the Yankees and Johnny Allen, who stretched his undefeated pitching streak from 12 straight with a four-hitter that gave the Indians a 4-1 decision over the Red Sox.

LEE'S COLTS LOSE SECOND PLAY-OFF

Gloversville Glovers apparently have their eyes glued on the championship crown they wrested so easily from the head of Perth-Cornwall's defending champions in the first round of the semi-finals in the Canadian-American Baseball League playoffs.

Gloversville have hung up two straight triumphs since the final series started with Ogdensburg Colts Thursday. The teams move over to Ogdensburg today and Colts are hoping their heavy sluggers, who have been kept practically hitless the last two days, will find their range within their home park and show they have ideas of their own concerning the 1936 bearer of the coveted title "champions." The final series is the best four games out of seven.

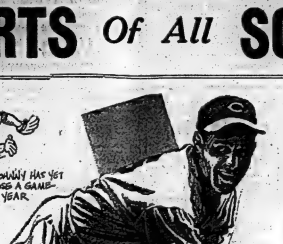
Duke Farrington's portside hurling kept Colts at bay with seven hits yesterday as his team mates pounded Revey and Smith for 11 safeties and a 7-3 victory. It was the "Duke's" second win since the playdowns started. Lefty Revey held Glovers to four hits until the sixth inning when a five-run tiv-vy splurge drove him from the mound.

Smith took over pitching duties for Ogdensburg but before the frame ended two more counters had crossed the plate. Colts got two more in the third inning on a single, a walk and a double.

BEARS MAKE IT FOUR STRAIGHT OVER SYRACUSE

Newark Eliminates Chiefs to Advance to League Finals

By The Associated Press



Those Newark Bears who have been performing amazing baseball feats all through International League season, still are giving ample cause for the boss to be happy.

The boss is Colonel Jacob Ruppert, owner of New York Yankees and their far-flung farm system. And he's the kind of a fan who never is satisfied unless his clubs win all their games.

Bears are winning in the International League playoffs just as decisively as they did in taking the regular race by a 25½ game margin.

Newark entered the final round last night by downing the Syracuse Chiefs 3-1 for their fourth straight triumph. And the headline figures in that victory were Joe (Flash) Gordon and Charlie Ketler, the kids who set the hitting pace during the regular campaign. Charlie drove in a run and Gordon hit a homer.

The Bears will have to wait a while now until Montreal Royals and Baltimore Orioles finish the other semi-final series, which stands at one-all after Baltimore's 9-8 triumph last night.

CHAMP DEFEATED IN LOCAL RING, GARNER LOSES

Ernie Hughson Wins Over Previously Undefeated Grappler

LOCAL LAD LOSES

Professional Wrestlers And Amateur Boxes at Arena Soon

"Red" Garner is no longer the undefeated International amateur lightweight wrestling champion, simply because he was defeated by a practically-unknown grappler who travives about the realm under the name of Ernie Hughson, an Indian lad, in the main bout of last night's wrestling show at the Arena. Hughson staged the heralded "ironman" act 45 he defeated George Semark, a local lad making his initial wrestling appearance, in the opening bout of the show.

As a matter of fact three advertised wrestlers and Semark staged the entire show last night, during which the management of the Arena announced the building would no longer be available for the Mickey A. G. amateur wrestlers, but promised the return of the more experienced and popular professional grapplers in the near future.

After winning the initial fall of the main bout with an Indian Deathlock, Hughson was declared winner, as Garner conceded the first fall in something like 11 minutes. For the first time in Belleville at least, Garner assumed the villain's role, and in so doing brought the wrath of the patrons upon his head. Hughson showed some fine judging in the early stages of the second round to finally gain a second deathlock and seemed to be headed for a two-fall victory, when he lost his balance and fell over backwards to pin the Nimble Garner pounce on his prostrate body for an easy fall, that proved magnificent. Hughson was the aggressor in the final round and had Garner groggy on the ropes as the result of a series of flying tackles. Finally Hughson gained his favorite "pinning hold" and by virtue of centering on the nerves of Garner's shoulders paralyzed the arm, forcing him to the mat for a fall and victory, to land Garner his first defeat ever registered in a local ring. The bout saved the show as the rival contestants proved agile wrestlers who gave a splendid exhibition of speed, science and ring ability. The bout was at catch-weights, Hughson outweighing the champ by some 30 pounds.

Garner was also in the semi-final bout, which he won in two consecutive falls over "Cowboy" Sullivan. Winnipeg Garner inaugurated his villainous attacks on Sullivan and won the first fall when the "Cowboy" was tossed bodily from the ring and was counted out. Although Sullivan tried a series of hammerlocks on the champ, Garner proved too strong for the youthful Sullivan and won the second fall following two hard body slams, that left Sullivan easy prey for a press and defeat.

Lacking in condition George Semark submitted on the preliminary bout and made a creditable showing against Hughson, the lad who ultimately dethroned Garner. For 15 minutes Semark matched strength with the muscular Indian as the local aspirant gave the pattern a chance to exercise their vocal chords, but he finally fell a victim to Hughson's paralyzing hold and was pinned. Semark was considerably out-weighted, however. Only two of the six advertised wrestlers put in an appearance last night, Garner and Sullivan, Hughson and Semark being substitutes and all four staged the entire three bout card.

During the evening the management of the Arena announced there would be ten all-star boxing bouts, staged through the courtesy of the R.C.A.F. at the Arena next Wednesday night.

There is to be a decided change in the sports or athletic program at the Belleville Collegiate and Vocational School this semester, George Laughlin, athletic director of the school informs us. First and foremost the B.C.I. & V.S. is not going to affiliate with the C. A. S. A. for the season of 1937-38. "In the Bay of Quinte group of the C. O. S. A. the Belleville Collegiate is being frowned upon by the smaller upper schools, some of them refer to us as "hog town". We have become a little more stuck-up to pick our various school teams from, while the smaller schools like Tweed, Marmora, Picton, Trenton or our own local secondary schools have not one-half of that material from which to select their athletic clubs from, so in view of that I am going to propose that the B. C. I. & V. S. does not affiliate with the Bay of Quinte group of the C. O. S. A. this year at least," stated Mr. Laughlin today.

In lieu of district sporting competition there is to be an extensive plan of inter-form sports carried out at the Collegiate this term. "We have over 1,000 students paying into the athletic fund, while in past years only a mere handful participated in the school sports. Take rugby football for an example. In previous years we sponsored a junior and senior intermediate team which meant that only about 30 students participated in the athletic fund. This year I am introducing inter-form football at the College field, and already we have twenty teams ready to commence our schedule next week. If we find we have more boys and girls participating in athletics under this new plan, I for one, believe it much better than having the selected few enjoying the privilege of obtaining whatever recreation is afforded in our school," pointed out Mr. Laughlin today.

Another innovation is the matter of all-man football, a game that is going over big in the United States, especially in the smaller colleges. The all-man football team is composed of three linemen and three backfielders. This type of game is to be tried in the second, third and upper school forms, while the conventional 12-man team style will be played in the first forms. Mr. Laughlin has a forty game schedule arranged, which means a game of football at the Collegiate almost every afternoon for six weeks or more. To show popularity the new system is meeting with approval from the student body, Mr. Laughlin has five first form boys, a second form, five third form and four upper school teams already organized and at practice.

"Of course if the boys of the school wish to have a school team and play exhibition games with outside schools, that is perfectly within their rights and they will receive assistance and if the Bay of Quinte group in the C.O.S.S. declares the B.C.I. & V.S. to affiliate and play off with their group winners, I see no reason why we should not enter a school team, but I am more in favor of the entire student body taking part in sports, for recreation, than the selected few for one school team," emphasized Mr. Laughlin.

Jack Doran, physical instructor at St. Michael's Academy, has a large number of candidates out trying for positions on the St. Michael rugby squad these nights. Hon Doyle is other back and the Fr. Mikes boys expect to affiliate with the Tri-Twi Valley or northern group along with Tweed, Marmora and other such centres. Just what the C.O.D. and Albert College interest is going to be is not known at this date, however, but it does look like plenty of football for the students at all local schools this autumn. Rugby football is paramountly a school game, as can be proven by the larger crowds that attend the Intercollegiate and College games all over the continent.

The autumn classic of rugby football is fast coming into its own in the Central Ontario zone. Yesterday Harold Bailey, secretary of the O.R.F.U. announced he had procured a fourth team for the Lake Shore group in the Inter-Varsities and if Ottawa finally decided to re-enter in the fold there will be five, namely: Lindsay, Peterboro, Cobourg, Toronto and possibly Ottawa.

Down in this section of the province the gridders are becoming anxious awaiting the opening gun in the "Big Series" which may turn out to be the "Big Little Four" before the wind is over. The local football curtain rises in Belleville next Wednesday with the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" clashing with the local "Golden Gophers" at the Fair Grounds. Coach Archie Duffield says he has a real surprise for the team when the books test out on the field. We hope Coach Duffield and his henchmen are not kidding, because from reports of the season's hinges on the showing the locals make here next Wednesday. It is a half-holiday and we expect to see a lot of strangers in Belleville on the scene, so gridders, let your conscience be your guide.

Along with a couple of thousand other sports fans, the writer and scribe we took in the Third Annual Sports Day at the C.N.E. yesterday. It was really quite a spectacle, but we, for once, were more interested in the flying contests than in the usual sports. The various athletic events were keenly contested in practically every event, thanks to Phil Levitt, R. W. Coleman and many others who assisted in the program. Saw some splendid formation flying and such is ever the case with the crowd seemed to enjoy the formation flying despite the fact we favored Carlisle-Kelly's efforts. But then we never favor one of the bloomin' things. Incidentally Squadron Leader Fonnyy Lawrence and he warmed up his "Flying Gridders" were considered down to Wallop the "Golden Gophers" next Wednesday. We'll see what we'll see.

Fails to Become Star Hockey Player, 'Goody Rosen' Now Is in Majors with Brooklyn

Toronto Lad Wanted to be a Second Aurel Joliat But Too Light

BATS .400 CLIP

Stars With Louisville And Moves to Major Week Ago

Pittsburgh, Sept. 18 (CP)—Goody Rosen, product of Toronto sandlots now starring in the Brooklyn outfield, started out in athletic life with the firmly established ambition of becoming a hockey left-winger—a second Aurel Joliat, no less. But today he finds himself the most talked of centre-field rookie in baseball.

In the times at bat in six games he has played since the Dodgers obtained him from Louisville of the American Association, Rosen has belted 10 hits, a .400 clip to date.

It was his lack of poundage— he scales 155—that decided the 26-year-old Canadian ace to swing from puckchasing to fly-chasing.

"When I was a kid in Toronto I always wanted to be like Joliat of Canadiens," he said, "but as I progressed from juvenile to intermediate the opposition got tougher —and those Toronto amateurs are tough. I found I was not powerful enough. Joliat's speed it was almost impossible for me to get through or around a defence without taking a terrific pounding, so I quit hockey."

Turned Back

His first disappointment in baseball came when he was given a tryout in 1931 with Rochester of the International League. He got two singles, he said, twice tying the ball in an exhibition game with New York Giants.

"After that I felt sure of being taken on but Warren Giles, who was President of the club then, came to me and said he was sorry but that I was too small. My weight then was 134. Two years later I joined Louisville."

Rosen said he hopes he can stick in the big league and Manager Burleigh Grimes is confident he will. Night baseball and "its terrible hours and dew-soaked grass" in the early days of baseball were tough he said, "and I hope I never have to go back there."

The Louisville fans, however, thought considerably of Rosen's work playing ability for they presented him with a gold watch two weeks ago in honor of Goody Rosen. Most popular player on the Louisville club in 1937."

NO 'HOMERS' HERE

Calgary, Sept. 18.—(CP)—Regina Rangefinders, bested 4-1 in their first game of the year against Calgary Stroud, will play Regina here today and will attempt to maintain the record of visiting teams in the Canada Senior Interprovincial Rugby Union. In two games played on this fall not a single home team has been victorious.

Rangefinders take the field here without their star plunger, Fred Ray, out with a pre-season groin injury. Brooks, who lost an 11-1 decision to Winnipeg here a week ago with a badly-crippled quilt, will be at full strength except for Larry Haynes' regular left end.

ORILLIA WINS TITLE DEFEATING MIMICO

Orillia, Ont., Sept. 18—(CP)—For the fourth consecutive year Orillia Amateur Lacrosse Association laurels decorate the shoulders of Orillia's husky Terriers who today headed for the all-Ontario crown and their fourth Mann Cup final.

Terriers, guided by that wily coach, Frank Carroll, ironmced Mimico 18-16 last night in the fourth game of a best of five series to grasp the O.A.L.A. title and the right to face Cornwall Indians in the first games of the provincial final Tuesday.

Terriers tallied seven times in the last quarter to thrill 2,000 fans. At the end of the third Mountaineers, who threatened to toss aside the great Orillia machine, held the Mann Cup holders to a 13-12 score. Mountaineers had downed the home five the first two sessions on scores of 4-3 and 5-4.

Johnny Allen and Rad Newsom, Indians—Allen stopped Red Sox 4-1 with four hits, fanning five; Rad hit homer with two aboard to win game.

Grid Gossip

(By The Canadian Press)

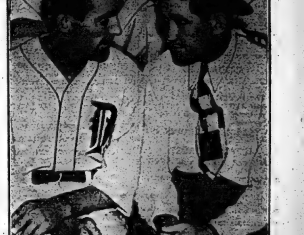
Coach Jack Hanlon led the Malloy Beach football squad into Ottawa today to lift the lid on the 1937 season in an exhibition game against the Roughriders.

Today's game, first in Eastern Canada this year, will give the youthful O.R.F.U. Club and the 1936 Big Four champions the jump on their respective league rivals who don't get into competitive action for another week.

Thirty Beach players, predominated by youngsters, made the trip to Ottawa. Veteran Ab Box was expected to bear the brunt of back-field work.

Roughriders, whose amazing drive to the top of the Interprovincial League last year was the highlight of the season, will field almost the same squad that bowed to Sarnia in the Eastern Canada finals last Fall.

Alex Trimble, succeeding the retired Bill Hughes as coach, and Stan (Windy) O'Neil, former-University of Pittsburgh half, banned from play last season by the residence rule, will make their how before Ottawa fans but otherwise there are few changes.



Eleven of the football front coaches planned to run their teams through light drills before the Sunday rest. Teams in all the Major Leagues, Intercivicial, Intercollegiate and Ontario, had long practices yesterday and welcoming a light day before early season bruises.

Montreal's Indians appointed Gus Ogilvie, a Cub official, coach last night succeeding Johnny Ferrazo who was elected field captain. This was to comply with a Big Four rule prohibiting the coach from playing.

MANAGER MICKEY TO LEAVE ON VACATION

All Monrovs heretohre had been solidly built, were born, grew up, married, died, quickly, with never an irregularity, to which gossip could cling. Judge then the sensation when Crete Monrov, aged seventeen, said comely: "I don't marry—not for ages yet—but when I do I think I shall take a divorced man. I simply loathe amateurs at anything."

Until twenty Crete was a storm-centre: all at once she changed. A summer of blistering drouth brought to pass epidemic fever, so deadly many fled before it. Those who could not go were, for the most part, panic-stricken. So when Doctor Mains came in to set up an isolation camp, nobody came to his help until Crete sent her fashion...

"All I know is that I am not afraid—of anything—and that I can do as I am told," the child said cleanly.

Maine, wrestling with a tent pole, didn't bother to look at her—merely grunted: "Well! That's something! Go back and round up a dozen men and women. Tell them nobody must skirk—we have got the fight of our lives before us."

The camp was pitched in a dry sunny meadow, fallen sloping, and flecked with spreading old apple trees. Water ran through it—a cold spring breaking high up in the face of a sheltering bluff, miles free from contamination. A mile away the black roofs of Monrov and Green Knoll rose with the railway. An auto-truck, a whole battery of ignition cars, were already to hand.

"Somebody about here has a head," Maine growled mysteriously. "Who is it?"

Silence for a minute, then Granny Jones, the midwife, piped up: "Mostly Crete Monrov, I reckon."

"Ho! Crete, Crete Monrov, step forward please—I'll make you next to myself in authority. Come from Maine."

He stared, and actually blushed when he saw a tall young woman, slender, dark, richly flushed, move with a pace toward him, saying: "No! Denny Fair will make a hasp better captain—I want to stay just a high private."

Maine received the voice—also he felt it. So Denny became captain of irregulars in the grimest battle ever fought in the country. Death won the first round—more coffins than convalescents came out in the first week. The next showed an even break—in the third life won all down the line. Thence forward to the end—which came with saving frost, there was steady gain, albeit the fever cases did not diminish in number. It took a real freshet, flooding rains, to wash away the pestilence—with sharp frost on the heels of it, to end all danger. Under this last strain there had been falterings, fallings away by workers hitherto most steadfast. Crete stuck—a wraith of her usual self, but still unbroken. So did Denny Fair, until the clouds were breaking that last day—then he collapsed, fell senseless as he tried to hold the one delirous patient left, safe in his arms.

"Pretty close to all in," Maine said to Crete, looking up from Denny still insensible. "But—we can't afford to lose him—not just yet. That I think would break—almost our hearts."

Crete looked at him, through eyes like black stars in her wasted pallor. "I—he pays," she said quickly. "I shall be—his murderess. I—I made him come here—when he might have gone away to safety."

"Why?" Maine asked.

"Because I've loved him all my life—I couldn't bear to have him think the man's past. He begged me to marry, and go straight away —but—afterward—when he saw me—he—he—I'm bitter now!—he was glad we had not gone.

"Tell you so?" from Maine diffidently.

"I—wanted—to stroke your hair—one more time,' he murmured. Crete lifted his fanciful tresses, laid her head beside his on the pillow, and said in his ear: "Denny—understand! You are going to stroke it—always. Never say good-bye."

He smiled wanly—deep was falling upon his eyelids. An hour she knelt; pouring heart, soul strength into his failing frame. At last Maine lifted her gently, saying: "Safe, now! Thanks to—the bravest woman in the world."

Little Benny's Note Book

Me and Sam Cross was standing around the letter box and Poda Simkins was standing in the middle of the street seeing how high he could make his golf ball bounce being pretty high, and I said to Sam that I'd ask him to swap that what's a use, every time anybody asks him to swap anything he always thinks everybody is trying to take advantage over him even if they offer him a real bargain.

Well Say, suppose I talk to him about it for you? Sam Cross said. I wont leave on that you know I'm asking him, but I'll tell him I bet you'll be willing to swap your tennis ball for his golf ball, and if he acts funny about I'll tell him but you'd even be willing to throw in your pencil stump with the red lead in it, he said, and I said, O, all right I'll talk over to him kind of careless, as if I didn't know anything about it.

Well Sam did, and pretty soon he came back with Poda golf ball, saying O boy it worked, and do you know what made it work, the part about throwing in the red pencil stump. Give them to me quick before he changes his mind, Sam said.

And I hurry up took the golf ball and handed Sam my tennis ball and pencil stump with the red lead and Sam went back to Poda Simkins and then kept on going, and after a while Poda came over saying, Hay, that was a pretty funny trick, getting me to throw in my 2 Chines coins with my golf ball.

MARKET COMMENT

Drury & Thompson, in their Market Letter, dated 15th, seldom occurs to the market commentators that the stock markets are as rhythmic as the tides although not always as regular. Bull and bear markets advanced, with reactions of varying length, ever since the middle of 1932 till last spring—a period of almost five years—rather a long stretch as bull markets go. All through the summer there have been indications that business in the U. S. and Canada has been slowing up with the trend still under way. As such business is always go to extremes, the recent slump may have overdiscounted this tendency just as stocks probably went too high previously on the upside.

Calgary & Edmonton

A moderate improvement in earnings was reported by the Calgary & Edmonton Corporation Limited for the year ended June 30th, 1937. Further headway along this line should be made as time goes on because of the agreements the Corporation have with Royalite and other companies in connection with the development of their property.

The management give the shareholders a considerable amount of data on all the wells that they are interested in, together with full information as to the ones that are now drilling. All of which will be perused by a large army of shareholders in the East with considerable care.

London Market Not Followed Closely On This Side of the Atlantic

American investors normally pay little attention to the trends of the foreign security markets. It is significant at the time, however, to note that the trend of stock prices in London has been irregularly downward since late in 1936 and that the sharp upturn in stock prices in the New York markets during the early months of 1937 found no reflection in London.

Transfers were around 700,000 shares.

Canadian issues again headed downward, Int. Nickel, International Nickel and McIntyre Porcupine with losses of around 1¼ points. Fractional drops were registered by Canadian Pacific, Dome Mines, Distillers Seagram and Hiram Walker. Canada 4s were inactive and Dominion funds were unchanged at par.

Bonds and commodities were uneven.

After a relatively quiet opening, offerings came out in large blocks, with coppers, steels and rails conspicuous for their lack of support. For a while the list was fairly well behind floor transactions. Dealings slowed up as extreme losses were reduced in some cases.

ITALO-GERMAN

"Today we carefully consider the significance of Mussolini's visit," Negrin declared. "We declare that Italy is sending her troops to Spain on the side of the force already there."

Hitler Patted Included

He demanded that the League recognize the aggression of which Italy is guilty, and provide for transferred to the telegrams exchanged between the prime Hitler, Premier Mussolini after the fall of Barcelona. In this exchange of messages Hitler referred to the presence of the part as a joint victory of Italian and German arms.

The premier called for an extension of the Nyon "anti-piracy" pact to protect governments against the shipping and application of measures to prevent the entry of foreign troops from the Spanish fronts.

He also demanded the withdrawal today on two battle cruisers for a visit to the Italian-occupied island of Mallorca.

Official Reaction

Official reaction in London ranged from non-committal replies to outright denials of the reports circulated. Of the report that the crew of the Gloriosa, which is convoying the Gloriosa, had seen a torpedo aimed against the carrier, one authority said:

"It might have been a torpedo or, on the other hand, it might have been a big fish."

Reports of the expedition to Mallorca were denied.

Says Fascist Escorts Seen

A lookout on the destroyer Impulsive reported recognizing the German destroyer Jaguar and an Italian destroyer convoying a pair of undersea craft. The Imperial was the first vessel in the party so closely that she dipped her ensign in salute.

The other report, credited to the crew of the destroyer Shark, was that a submarine escorted by two, accompanied by two Italian and two German destroyers were sighted fifty miles off Malta.

More Planes Leave

A Nova Scotia Force squadron of five planes roared away from Plymouth at dusk on the Italian Mediterranean patrol.

Squadron Leader A. F. squadron, at Plymouth dock, will leave in a few days. The planes are equipped with two-way radio and single-seat cockpits. They will be able to operate from attack destroyers over large areas with their 1,000 mile cruising radius.

H.M.S. Barham, flagship of the Mediterranean fleet, arrived at Gibraltar yesterday from Gibraltar, where Admiral Sir Dudley Pound, commander-in-chief, conferred with French naval authorities on the control of Spain patrol.

A copy of the nine-power pact was set up a complete system of defence against submarine attack on marines, surface vessels and planes in the Mediterranean.

Invitation Still Open

With this announcement outline of what the non-nations intended to do understood, went a reiteration of the original invitation which Premier Mussolini last Thursday had set up a complete system of with Italy's interests in the Mediterranean.

Reports from Salamanca, general headquarters of the Spanish insurgents, said General Franco had formally accused Soviet Russian, one of the Nyon powers, of submarine piracy.

The Anglo-French decision to withdraw from the Spanish non-intervention naval patrol, which Italy and Germany abandoned some time ago, will add to British dangers to the anti-pirate forces. Officials emphasized, however, the Anglo-French withdrawal indicates no change in general non-intervention policy.

Paris, Sept. 18 (C.P.-Havas)—The newspaper L'Oeuvre reported today advance contingents of an Italian fighting force of 180,000 men recently assigned to aid the Spanish insurgents in a drive against Madrid—already have arrived in Insurgent territory.

"Information has reached Geneva that Italy is preparing a decisive offensive against Madrid," Geneva Tribune, foreign affairs commentator, wrote in L'Oeuvre.

"On Sept. 4, 7,000 Italian soldiers debarked at Melilla (insurgent held port in Spanish Morocco. The advance guard of a new Italian army contingents, were en route and Seville, Burgos and Saragossa and sent to Insurgent Spaigio 100,000

This writer learned of one group of Italians who had been asked to volunteer. Twenty were required were drawn and 10 of the men told to get ready to leave.

In recent months, small groups of specialists, such as aviation, tank operators, artillerymen and so, also have been sent to the insurgent Army. There is, however, no official confirmation of departures of large contingents of troops.

Geneva, Sept. 20 (CP-Havas)—Great Britain is ready to contribute to world economic betterment by opening discussions with all governments looking toward a modification of preferential customs duties in British Colonial territories, Foreign Secretary Eden told the Assembly of Nations Assembly today.

He also said a broad-based agreement between Great Britain and the United States would be of capital interest to the entire world.

Eden spoke after the assembly had refused to grant Spain a seat in the League Council for the next three years. The Valencia government, defeated by nine votes to obtain the two-thirds majority necessary for the new term on the council. Her previous three-year term expires this year.

The British Foreign Secretary appealed to Italy to join in the Mediterranean anti-pirate patrol by stressing the Nyon powers did not want to eliminate any Mediterranean nation from their collective action.

He said the Nyon accord contained clauses providing for consideration of new proposals at any time, with the door open to other participants. However, he stressed that the accord had to be pushed through rapidly since the present system is

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Climate changed several hundred thousands of years ago the climate was so cold that in the sheets of ice covered a good part of the North Temperate Zone. Gradually as far south as Long Island and England. It is believed that from 3000 to 1500 B.C. the climate in northwestern Europe was warmer than at present, and at about 850 B.C. cold, rainy weather began. Again, later in the 12th and 14th centuries, there was great alternation and rain. The evidence for this: In Europe, fluctuation of the Alpine glaciers; in Asia, variations in the level of the Caspian sea and in North America, variations in the growth of the bristle cone pine redwood trees. There is at present no generally accepted explanation of the causes of change in climate.

CREW IS RESCUED BY DARING WORK

Goderich, Ont., Sept. 20 (CP)—Hemmed between a heavy fog bank on Lake Huron off this port with very wavy smashing wave against her wooden sides, the package freighter Gilly lay abandoned today, her crew saved by the amazing daring of two lake captains.

Loss of the ship, her engine and cargo was placed at $23,000. Those rescued were: Capt. Patrick Mikula (Father Mikula), Percy Jones and two wheelsmen, Oscar Haywood, Clifton Fisher (names not available) and Edward Cambrelle, London, Ont.; Engineer Charles Ward, Toronto, and the cook, Alex Charrington, Samia.

The steel Gilly cleared Southampton, Ont., Friday with 2,500 eight-foot pulp wood piled at Manitoba Island and van into a severe storm. She was battered about for sixteen hours before being taken in tow by the freighter Superior, commanded by Capt. Hallen Hudson, early Saturday.

The Superior towed the Gilly almost within the confines of Goderich harbor when the backwash from a breakwater snapped the steel towline and carried the Gilly out to sea.

The raging southwest winds quickly blew the Gilly into water unnavigable by the Superior. Seeing the plight of the stricken vessel Capt. Bert MacDonald put out in his 30-foot gasoline launch and succeeded in taking the crew to shore.

30 Foot Ten - Ton Shark Tows Dinghy 100 Miles in Wild Death

Glasgow, Sept. 20 (CP)—A wild ride in a little dinghy towed by a shark over a 100-mile stormy route from the Firth of Clyde Channel to the Irish Sea for twenty-four hours, provoking airplane searches and causing fire in an attending motor boat, today provided the week-end's saltiest tale from the sea.

Three shark hunters — Captain J. R. David, H. Webster, and Harry Smith — left the parent ship Myrtle Saturday in Carmella Bay, Kintyre, and harpooned a 30-foot, 10-ton shark, which rushed around and about Arryllshire waters in a violent dash for freedom.

They were members of a group attempting to find out whether a new Scottish industry could be built up from the distillation of shark liver oil.

It was 11 a.m. Saturday when the shark took the dinghy in tow. After it had been driven back by tide and wind in an attempt to reach the open sea, the shark neared the mothership and Tony Hamilton grabbed the line. Becombe Heit, scientist, effected a perilous transfer to the dinghy, relieving the three crew men, who scrambled aboard the mother ship.

As the shark continued its merry course throughout the day and Saturday night several attempts were made, but at dawn, when Wathins and Webster, were manning the dinghy, the Myrtle caught fire and was unable to keep up with the fast-travelling shark.

While mothership's occupants fought the flames, shark and dinghy disappeared. The coastguard became alarmed. Three planes set out and eventually located the dinghy. The shark was almost exhausted but still alive. Watkins and Webster, weary but victorious, boarded the shark and cut adrift.

Police Allege Illegal Operation Ring in Operation

London, Ont., Sept. 20 (CP)—Dr. Charles Wilfrid Ellis was remanded to Sept. 25 when he appeared in court today on a charge of murdering Lucille Winifred Dyer, Aberdeen school teacher, whose body was found in the Thames last Tuesday and who according to police, died as the result of an illegal operation.

Lauchlin Jack Robertson, 50, facing a similar charge, was remanded for eight days when counsel was asked to plead or make any statement.

Mrs. Margaret Robertson, wife of Robertson, held on a nominal charge, will appear in Chambers here today as well as an unidentified prisoner, held since late Thursday, whose name was not given by authorities.

London, Ont., Sept. 20 (CP)—Charges of both murder of abortive 27-year-old Mary Wilkinson, police school inspector, Dr. Charles Ellis and Lachlin J. Robertson were scheduled to appear today before City Magistrate Donald Menzies for a formal remand.

Arrest of the 27-year-old physician and Robertson, a 50-year-old stoker on a gum-manufacturing plant, on Saturday was announced by Crown Attorney Norman Newton last night. He said because of "unusual circumstances". of Miss Wilkinson's death—attributed to an illegal operation—a murder charge had been laid against both men.

The body of the Aberdeen school teacher was found in the north branch of the Thames river in Delaware Township east of the city last Tuesday. There was no water in her lungs, an autopsy showed, and she is believed to have been dead three days before finding her river.

Dr. Ellis and Robertson were held without bail and Mr. Newton said disclosing the arrests that while they are held no further inquiry will continue. Two other arrests have also been made, that of an unnamed man and Mrs. Robertson, wife of Jack, 50. The man was arrested Thursday on a charge the nature of which was not disclosed.

Tariff Board Resumes Sittings on Automobile Industry

Ottawa, Sept. 20—(CP)—Demand for steel throughout the world has reached wartime proportions, the tariff board was told today.

The Board resumed its inquiry into the automobile industry, a subject under consideration at various sittings since 1935.

Representatives of motor car manufacturers presented statements to the Board that it was becoming increasingly difficult to fill the 5 per cent Canadian requirement necessary for qualifying their products under the British preference.

On behalf of the Steel of Canada Montreal, H. T. Diplock answered his company was furnishing the automotive industry with the greater tonnage so far this year than during the same period in any previous year.

T. R. Ashlity, of the Algoma Steel Corporation, Sault Ste. Marie, assured the Board his company had arrived at a program by which they would be able to fill demands of their customers.

Bronchial trouble was not evident in the examination, Dr. Connell testified.

New York, Sept. 20.—(CP)—A wall of Arctic silence today cloaked the whereabouts of Sir Hubert Wilkins and the party he headed in the flying-boat hunt for the lost Russian airmen but no fear for their safety was felt in Soviet and U.S. quarters in the Explorers' Club here.

Wilkinson Stefansson, president of the Club, said nothing had been heard of the Wilkins' plane since 8 p.m. E.D.T., Sunday, but the searchers were attempting to reach Aklavik under adverse conditions.

While Stefansson said he believed Sir Hubert probably was holed up down on a small lakes he started organizing "emergency equipment" that could be rushed to him by assistance.

2,000 CASES OF PARALYSIS KNOWN

Thirty New Cases in Toronto Over Weekend With One Death

(By The Canadian Press)

Infantile paralysis sent thirty more people to hospital during the week-end and caused another death. More than 2,000 persons in Canada have been stricken since the epidemic started early in June and death remains at seventeen.

The week-end death occurred in Toronto while thirty-one new cases made their appearance to send the total to 578. Fourteen deaths had stood at 29. In Ontario since the epidemic struck 1,836 cases were recorded with 49 persons dead.

The Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto is the keynote of the battle as the province's 38 cases and three deaths were reported by the Department of Health. Two quadruplets of Japanese raiders —Japanese have claimed there were 40 planes—roared over the city, widely deployed, and launched their attack simultaneously on widely distant areas.

Shanghai, Sept. 20 (AP)—Without waiting for the expiration of their ultimatum to foreigners to evacuate Nanking, Japanese warplanes bombed the Chinese capital today.

It was the third air raid on the seat of the Chinese government in 24 hours, twelfth bombardment of Nanking since the Japanese war drive against Shanghai was opened by Chinese resistance.

Chinese used a fleet of fast pursuit planes to harry the heavy Japanese bombers and save the city of a million people. Word from destruction the Japanese command is believed to have determined on.

Twenty-Four Hours Ahead.

In a virtual ultimatum to all foreign residents of Nanking, Japan had warned to get out of the city by 4 p.m. Tuesday or risk destruction or death from aerial bombardment. But 24 hours before the warning period ended the Japanese launched their attack, endangering the lives of many high foreign dignitaries.

The Soviet Embassy also indicated it would remain at the capital despite the Japanese warning. Diplomats of other nations were awaiting instruction from their home governments. Construction of heavy bombproof shelters, concrete, a very thick, was being rushed at the Russian Embassy.

Two squadrons of Japanese raiders —Japanese have claimed there were 40 planes—roared over the city, widely deployed, and launched their attack simultaneously on widely distant areas.

TWO CONVICTS GUARD KILLED

Warden Wounded When Escape Attempt is Broken up

Folsom, Calif., Sept. 20 (AP) — Warden Clarence Larkin, two Folsom State Prison guards and five convicts lay wounded in the prison hospital today, victims of an escape attempt in which two guards and two convicts were killed.

One of the wounded convicts, Ed Davis, reputed instigator of the break, was believed on death list. Larkin suffered twelve stab wounds.

The 20-minute battle began when Davis and Warden Larkin clashed during his usual Sunday morning inspection of cellblocks in the office of the captain of the guard.

The seven men, armed with crude knives and improvised clubs, stepped from line, seized Larkin and Guard Jesse Bonner. They demanded Larkin order guards on the prison wall to hold their fire. Larkin refused.

In the meantime, the Warden's wife, aware of the argument, sent an open telephone. He phoned the guard house, and the men on Larkin and his captors were in the open.

Came Out Fighting.

Larkin and the guards, armed only with clubs and a knife, came out and ten or a dozen bullets were shot into the struggling mass from the watch towers. Guards ran in to help. When the battle ended all the convicts were down.

Ryan and Guard James Kerns had serious knife wounds. E. E. Martin, a guard was stabbed to death.

Convict Clyde Stevens, instigator of an equally desperate prison break attempt at San Quentin Prison in 1934, was dead, as was Benny Kuchkarski, convicted robber.

Larkin lost a fake he himself decreed recently in a talk to prison guards.

"If I am ever kidnapped," he said, "and I order you not to file and you obey my order, you will not be here tomorrow. No matter what I tell you start shooting."

Greasy Pig Thrills 'Fair' Spectators In Cross-River Dash for Freedom

With all the fife entertainment provided for the amusement of the patrons of the Shamrock Fair Park held on Saturday, living up to advance notices, it remained for a pig, car, the greasy pig to steal the show.

Not that the pig was unwilling on the occasion was given a coat of grease prior to his introduction to society. Let loose upon the track, 'Oscar' promptly emitted a couple of squeals and darted away in a cloud of dust followed by a number of the fair park officials who had been his capture. But "Oscar's" newfound freedom was not to be given him by the fair officials.

He dashed down the track for a short way on the side of the cheering crowd. Spotting an opening in the fence he made tracks. Oscar promptly dashed through and found himself with the entire fair grounds at his disposal.

Squealing with delight, he dashed away over knoll and hollow. People rushed to get out of his greasy way. Followed by his pursuers, he dashed down the roadway, out through the gate to the Big Island. Here he paused, sniffed the air for a second and as the cries of his pursuers grew closer, dashed through a hole in a nearby fence to the bank of the river.

How Oscar, being a wise pig, evidently came to the conclusion that a coat of grease was given to swimmers about to plunge into cold water and with the realization, came the decision. With scarcely a halt, Oscar plunged into the river and "hit paddling" immediately for the opposite side.

Many fair officials without the spirit of one James Dunlop, his chosen pursuer, Dunlop's clothes promptly quickly and he too plunged into the water with no regard to clothes or fine. The cheers of the large crowd who had followed the chase. Across the river went this strange pair, and man won. Dunlop nailed the fleeting hams a short distance from the opposite bank and with the assistance of two friends brought the squealing pig back to the grounds and its owner where he received the prize awarded to the conqueror of the greasy pig.

FRED FREEMAN

Tweed, Sept. 20—(Special)—Fred Freeman, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Freeman, died in the Belleville General Hospital on Sunday night. Death came after an illness of two weeks with typhoid fever, contracted while working on a farm near the village. The young man continued to work until about a week ago when he was forced to return to his home. Medical science proved unavailing, however, though he was taken to the hospital at Belleville on Sunday morning, nothing could be done and he passed away in the afternoon.

The late Fred Freeman was a young man of a number of many admirable qualities which made him a favorite with old and young alike. His sudden passing, in his late twenties, while yet many years of active life should have been before him, has come as a decided shock to all who knew him. The deepest sympathy of the community is extended in his aged parents and to his brothers and sisters by whom he is survived.

LATE GORDON PETERSON

Many friends were present at the funeral of Gordon Peterson which took place Saturday afternoon, Sept. 18th, at 1 o'clock, from the family residence, 72 Highland Avenue. Prior service in the home was conducted by the Rev. R. E. Newman, Pastor of Holloway Street United Church, assisted by the Rev. Dr. James Rendle, the Rev. L. S. Wight and the Rev. J. D. P. Knox.

The bearers were Messrs. John Golden, William Bates, A. Bates, William Johnson, M. Sills and K. Hodgins.

The flower bearers were Messrs. Clinton Heath, Bert Cronk, Harold Sills, Everett Harrison, Ernest King, Elmer King, F. Pray and H. Sills.

LATE WILLIAM A. JOHNSON

Saturday afternoon, Sept. 18th, the funeral of William Ambrose Johnson took place at 3 o'clock from his late residence, 11 Charlotte Street. The service in the home and at the graveside of Belleville Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. R. E. Newman, Pastor of Holloway Street United Church.

The bearers were Messrs William Johnson, Wilbur Sharpe, Joseph Waddell, Alex McGuire and James Simpson.

MRS. WILLIAM VALLEAU

The death occurred very suddenly at Silpkin Hospital, Nipiwin, Sask., on Monday, Sept. 13th, of Mrs. Wilbur Valleau, formerly of Moose Range, Sask., and youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Spencer of Arborfield, Saskkichewan.

Mrs. Valleau came west with her parents in 1910, and lived in the district ever since.

Her sudden death was a great shock to her many friends, who will mourn her loss.

Surviving her are her husband, and two small children, Ida Blanche and Mac; her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Foster, a brother, John Byron and five sisters, Mrs. Ray, Fred Credit, Ont.; Mrs. Roy Parks, Niagara Falls, Ont., Mrs. B. Sears, Niagara, Alta., Mrs. D. Mackay, Vancouver, B.C., and Mrs. G. W. Holloway.

MISS MINNIE McWILLIAMS

Miss Minnie McWilliams, daughter of the late John and Mrs. McCordon, McWilliams, died at her late residence, 225 Indian Road, Toronto, on Sunday, Sept. 19th. The late Miss McWilliams was known at Belleville as a former teacher in this district will regret to learn of her death.

The funeral will take place at Toronto on Tuesday, Sept. 21st.

LILLIAN WINIFRED MARTIN

A large circle of friends in the city and district were shocked today to hear of the passing at Belleville General Hospital early this morning of Lillian Winifred Martin, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Martin, 214 Church St. Deceased was in her twenty-first year.

Confined to her bed for a lengthy period of time, deceased gradually declined until the end came when she was taken to the hospital where she passed peacefully away in the early hours.

The late Miss Martin was of a sunny disposition and possessed of a lovely personality that endeared her to everyone with whom she came in contact. She was a loving companion and a dutiful daughter to her bereaved parents. At Belleville Collegiate Institute, where she was a pupil she was a popular student with faculty and student body alike. She was a devout member of St. Thomas' Anglican Church, and prior to her illness, was a tireless worker in the organization of the church. Graduating from high school, the late Miss Martin entered the employ of the Swift Canadian Company where she immediately gained favor with her application and genial disposition. Later she became associated with the Robb Wire Co. Coming ill, she resigned. Since then she has been a patient in the Belleville General Hospital, Kingston, one of the pioneers in the cheese making industry in this province. He was born in the Township of Thurlow in the County of Hastings in 1866 and became a cheese maker at Lonsdale when a young man. He also operated at various factories in the County of Prince Edward, on Amherst Island, at Wolfe Island and other points in the County of Frontenac. He also operated at Napanee in Lennox and was widely known throughout the county and the province. For many years he resided and operated a factory at Latimer and retired from the business only a few years ago. He was a member of the United Church and a Conservative in politics.

Mr. Kent is survived by his wife, Leonie Kent, and by two sons and two daughters, Mrs. Lottie Cochrane of Mallorytown, and Mrs. Hilda Lyon of Lyndhurst. The eldest son, Hume Kent, owns and operates a cheese factory at Lyndhurst and the youngest son, Frank, is farming near Harrowsmith.

Sunday School Rally At College Hill

A very interesting rally service was held Sunday at the College Hill Sunday School, when the attendance of eighty-five. Invitations had been sent to the school by the secretary, Mrs. McCluskey assisted by Mrs. Spanton to which many responded. The opening hymn, accompanied by all, Mrs. Burley's class sang a beautiful song of "Heaven", with Miss Vera Thompson as pianist. Little Lois Weeks sang a song. Mrs. McCluskey told a story of the missionaries' boys, who saw in person the King and who said He himself loved the King of Kings. Miss Isabelle Sharp read very effectively a story "Over the Garden Wall." Andrew Sharp acted as pianist. Following the program the secretary

BROKEN BRANCHES IN WAKE OF STORM

Wind Assumes Gale-Like Proportions And Orchards Suffer

A wind of almost gale-like proportions roared out of the west early yesterday morning leaving a trail of broken trees, branches and wreckage in its wake. Orchards in Prince Edward County suffered severely from the heavy breeze it is stated, in some places large quantities of apples were blown to the ground.

City residents referred as the wind which gradually acquired a frosty tang roared in and about the streets. Heavy rains made their first appearance of the season in many quarters. Heavy sweaters and other warm apparel found ardent favor. One young motoring man said reality of the approaching cold is the figurative winds, when she speared in a city restaurant clad in an expensive fur coat. At that, she was the envy of city clients who were at low ebb.

Motorists Not Deterred

Fishermen report the Bay, or parts whipped into foaming white-caps early yesterday morning, but this apparently did not deter the hardy men from biting just offshore. One Bruce Izaak Walton clad in several sweaters and coats followed his favorite pastime in spite of wind and rain and brought home several fine specimens of bass from the bay.

Montreal guests at the Hotel Quinte stated they raced a wind and rainstorm enroute from the Quebec city. Rain spattered cars set out their statements. Excitement motoring weather however did not deter the motorists from making the trip to their favorite weekend pastime. A steady stream of vehicular traffic passed through the city during the day, according to police officers, but Sunday parade of pedestrians was lacking in the usual numbers. Warmth of homes and general indoor comfort proved stronger than the lure of the outdoors and roads followed this favorite pastime.

Saturday night with its extreme coolness was responsible for a much smaller shopping crowd than usual, according to the however in the early hours. merchants report. Saturday night had a near record night, it was stated. Theatres were crowded at an early hour and still the Arena dance floor accommodated a record number for the season.

WOMAN'S CONDITION CRITICAL

Kingston, Ont., Sept. 20 (CP)—Critically injured when David Avery of Ottawa was reported at hospital today as being dead, Mrs. Mulvey was injured in an automobile accident near Napanee Sunday when a car driven by Mr. Mulvey left Miami, Fla., went into a ditch.

Mrs. Mulvey suffered severe internal injuries. Murphy, also in hospital, was less seriously hurt.

POLICE COURT

"If this man is on the prohibited list, where did he procure his liquor?" inquired Magistrate F. C. Butler, K.C., when an old offender appeared in today's local police court charged with the illegal possession of liquor.

The accused man tried to tell the court he "found it", but His Worship made it plain there was no use trying to fool him much at fragile story into his court. "When I become intoxicated I forget what happens," pleaded the accused man.

"Maybe three months in the common jail will refresh his memory," suggested Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C.

"I'm afraid that, sir, my family has never been on relief and I don't want them to go on relief," pleaded the accused man.

"This man has been deprived of liquor permit before, but apparently it has done him no good," pointed out Magistrate Butler. "We'll enlarge this matter for one week and see how he behaves," added His Worship.

"If you'll give me a chance I'll give you my word that I'll never drink again," assured the accused as he left the court.

Constable Hall the officer and he was justified in bringing the charge to this court, but this is purely a civil matter," stated His Worship after hearing the evidence in a case that saw Lorrena Gagnon, Ottawa trucker, charged with reckless driving, arising out of a motor accident that occurred east of Belleville on Aug. 8th last. The charges were preferred by Provincial Patrolman Sam Irvine following an accident, when two trucks collided east of Belleville, one driven by Gagnon and the other a transport from Westlake. Chief Crewe held that Gagnon was responsible, but His Worship was of the opinion that the entire matter was of a civil nature.

Both liberiate pleaded guilty and asked for time in which to raise the amounts imposed. His request was granted.

ROBBERS ENTER TWO PREMISES

After having entered the premises of the Crescent Foundry, Bleecker Ave., and stealing an electric drill and accessories and other tools, robbers subsequently broke and entered the Coca-Cola premises, Church St., where they abandoned their burglar tools before they could rob the premises early Sunday morning.

Early Sunday morning, while passing the Crescent Foundry, Constable Hall discovered a rear door of the Bleecker Ave. premises ajar. The officer entering the premises found the tools concealed in the rear of the building. Wrapped in the rain-coat was an electric drill, two screw drivers, a chisel and oil can. Mr. Sweetman assured the officer that nothing had been disturbed.

Subsequent investigation, conducted by Sergeant booth and P. C. Thomson revealed that the electric drill and other tools had been stolen from the Greenleaf Foundry. The tools were identified by Mr. Greenleaf as the property of his company.

Whether the robbers escaped through the front door while P. C. Thomson was on the rear door before searching the building or had left the tools abandoned when disturbed by passing peaceful citizens is not known. The tools were return to their owner.

MEN CLAIM ROAD MACHINERY DISPLACES LABORERS ON HIGHWAY

Several delegates men who have returned home from the vicinity of Northbrook, Ont., during the week, regarding conditions in that district. Under a change of contract for highway work there, it is claimed considerable quantities of road-making machinery have been imported causing a wholesale dismissal of former employees.

POLICE BLOTTER

Disturbances at the upper end of Front St. late Saturday night resulted in the parties concerned being taken to the Police Station where William Moore, Campbellford cheesemaker, complained that Raymond Crawford, of this city, had struck and assaulted him.

Upon their arrival at the station Moore displayed a discolored and cut eye, which he alleged was caused by Crawford striking him. The latter was also fined, that Moore had spoken disrespectfully to him. All concerned were liberated later. Police officials said today that in all probability charges of assault may be preferred against Crawford as the alterations attracted a large gallery of spectators and caused a hitch in the progress of traffic before the arrival of Constables Ellis and Hall.

No serious crime was reported locally, for the week end, save two arrests for violations of the L. C. A. being observed on the police blotter, however, Kingston police requested assistance in the recovery of a 1936 model Dodge coupe, bearing licence plates number 50-J-62, Ontario number, the property of Blackburn residence, Highland Ave., complained to police today that malchievous children were repeatedly breaking the windows, in the house. "Nearly all of the panes of glass in the north side of the building have been broken," complained the workmen today.

Despite the sudden drop in the temperature only four transients availed themselves of the warm, comfortable sleeping quarters at the police station last night.

New York—The Old Man of the Mediterranean laughed and laughed when he heard the powers were sending warships south to sink three darned pirates. It was an old story to the Old Man—this piracy business. As long as he can remember, pirates have been lurking—off and on—in rocky lairs along highly-important Mediterranean sea trade routes.

And most of that time the powers of the world, including the United States of America, have been sending expeditions to put the rascals to rout.

Skipping Phoenician and Roman and all such ancient history, the Old Man flips a page to the year 1492, that stood by the discovery of America in the school book, but it stands also for the beginning of modern piracy as a big-time business in the Mediterranean. In 1492 Ferdinand and Isabella, who backed Christopher Columbus' well publicized expedition, also kicked the Moors out of Spain.

The Moors had lived a long time in Spain and didn't want to leave. So they did the next best thing; they hung around Spanish shores as pirates, knocking off the peaceful traders and playing the very devil with English trade. Perfectly respectable African ports like Algiers, Tunis and Tripoli became sinister strongholds where the trade in bloody gold and white women was brisk and profitable.

Among the first and greatest commanders of this piratical trade developed were the brothers Barbarossa. Greek by birth, the eldest brother Uruj fought himself into an unmarked grave. The younger, tougher—and smarter—brother went right on up.

As he captured more and more women, ships and treasure and became King of Algiers, ruler of Tripoli and High Admiral of the Grand Turk himself, most of the Christian nations paid him hard at wining him out. The greatest ruler of them all, Charles V of the Holy Roman Empire, spent his early part of the 16th century sending expeditions to Africa hoping to catch Barbarossa. But he died in his palace at Constantinople.

MALTA A POLICE BASE

Malta was the stronghold for the Knights of Malta who did their best to scourge the Moslem pirates, along with the rest of the heathen. The British who now are leading the charge against the submarine "pirates" have one or their most important bases at Malta.

Getting down to the 19th century, the pirates of Northern Africa were still at it when the United States appeared. The United States, like some respectable European powers, was paying tribute to Tripoli just to keep her merchantmen out of trouble. In all the pasha wanted to hike the $83,000 ante and the United States objected. So they sent a fine expeditionary force and—the ice of the U. S. frigate "Philadelphia."

Stephen Decatur who is credited with "Our Country! May she always be right, but our country, right or wrong," made himself some fame when the ship "Philadelphia" was she lay captive, and returned to the scene with a man-sized fleet a few years later. That time he made the pirates swear off American shipping.

Well, the pirating went on—and off—for 20 years, although it was pretty well cleaned up by 1830. British sailors learned the combination of stiff discipline and courtships. Now they have to figure out the under-water variety.

SALMON STREAMS BRING WEALTH TO NEW BRUNSWICK

Value of Fishing Rights on The Restigouche Totals $7,000,000

WELL PROTECTED

Campbellton, N.B., Sept. 20 (CP)—Said to provide the best salmon fishing in the world, stretches of the Restigouche River and its tributaries have increased in value to $7,000,000 in this province.

The provincial government receives an annual rental of more than $100,000 for angling rights on sections still vested in the crown. Many of the pools are owned by individuals and clubs.

Instancing the increased value, United States purchases paid $14,000 for some river property 30 years ago. They sold it for $80,000, and a few years ago it sold for $125,000.

Most of the government water is leased every ten years at a unique auction held in the legislature building at Fredericton. The sale is attended by the premier, the minister of lands and mines, millionaires, lawyers and guides. Old angling rivals bid against one another for the choice pools.

A private organization, the Restigouche Riparian Association, spends from $20,000 to $35,000 a year to protect the Restigouche and its tributaries from poachers. All individuals and clubs contribute to the association, in addition to the amount of water they control. The central fund finances a present force of 61 guardians who spare no expense in apprehending poachers.

Once $5,000 was acht to prosecute a man of powerful political influence in Quebec who had been present when his employes grabbed a poach. The Riparian Association, backed by men controlling more than a million acres, secured his conviction and he went to jail for a short time.

Largest Club

The Restigouche Salmon Club (deviation from the modern spelling of Restigouche is for closer conformity with the original Micmac pronunciation) is the oldest and largest club on the rivers. Its members, all men of great wealth, own the "million dollar pool." In 1936 they said the provincial government had failed to stock a case involving ownership of a quarter of a mile of water over the junction of the Restigouche and Patapedia.

In 1933 members of this club alone took 1,953 salmon and 502 grilse with a total weight of 31,301 pounds and an average weight of 16.03 pounds. Of the salmon, 294 weighed more than 25 pounds. Small on the Restigouche is now 20 salmon a week.

Enacted in the place of honor in the Restigouche club's membership list is the name of Admiral Stronson, United States Navy, retired. In 1927 he landed the largest salmon ever caught by fly in New Brunswick. It tipped the scales at 65 pounds and was sent all the way to the president of the United States.

Started in 1880

The club was started in 1880. Its membership list looks like pages from the social register. The names include Vanderbilts, Cadwaladers, Cockles, Lord Strathcona, Sir Montagu Allan, Marshall Field, R. C. Dun, Waller C. Teagle, and J. K. L. Ross. The great scientist, Sanford Wilde, and the father of Herman Rogers, in whose chateau the Duchess of Windsor was a guest at Canada, were members.

Many private lodges and clubs dot the salmon streams. Most own their own water, having fee of $20,000 it from families to whom the land was granted prior to 1884. The anglers provide the entire livelihood of numerous families. They buy all their supplies locally and hire none but local men as guides and paddlers. Guardians are on salary for five months of the year.

Before leaving office a retiring cabinet, angling on the Restigouche was losing its attraction. Many sportsmen fished an entire seven salmon. Poachers dynamited pools and killed scores of fish at a season without catching more than time.

valve regime under George S. Henry said the premier. One of the worst features of old government's financing was the issuance of "three-way" bonds payable in sterling, American or Canadian currency at the option of the holder.

"Over $300,000,000 of Ontario's bonds are of this kind," he continued. "They are payable nearly all to people about $8,000,000 in exchange. No one can foretell what the cost will be in the future, especially if Great Britain and the dollar values fluctuate widely. We are not issuing any more of these bonds. Our bonds are payable in Canadian currency only."

New Information

The premier said as his government continued investigation of estates for succession duties due the government, new information on how succession duty settlements were made under the former government has been disclosed. Victor Sinclair, a civil servant on a $14,000 salary, acted as solicitor for the Hamilton estate, Hamilton in its settlement which, Mr. Hepburn charged, cost the treasury $1,500,000.

"We found out some time ago Mr. Sinclair received a fee of $20,000 from the estate," said Mr. Hepburn. "Now as we go into the books on the American side where some of the money was transferred we find that still other fees were made to Mr. Sinclair."

Arbitrated Policy

In a review of his government's northern policy, the premier said $10,000,000 of profits would be forthcoming from northern lands and forests and mines if under new construction, started operations. Mr. Hepburn said the 1937 revenue this year would be $4,000,000 and next year he predicted $7,000,000 with the $10,000,000 mark reached the third year.

His reiterated his labor policy and his opposition to John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization. Defeat of his government, the premier said, would be a moral victory for Lewis who would regard it as a mandate for him to plunge into Ontario to disrupt industry.

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

New York, Sept. 20 (CP)—Ford Tweedsmuir's new book, "Augustus," was included today in the list of best-selling books of the publication. The book, a biography of Rome's first emperor, will be issued as "By John Buchan," the name Canada's governor-general used for his novels.

Winnipeg, Sept. 20 (CP)—"I wonder how the water is tonight?" asked 16-year-old Jean Ruth Kennedy last night as she and Jack Woledarski, 15, stood on Redwood Bridge looking at the Red River. A second later he turned his head and plunged into the water. His body was not recovered.

Gull, Ont., Sept. 20 (CP)—Gull bushers are not worried, Joe Lawton who what the people are doing with $2 bills. One bush ran out of them last week, and the others here had none to spare after paying out nearly $2,500 in $2 bills. Only about $1,000 came back.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Sept. 20 (CP)—John Yanchuk is the Soo's new pie-eating champion. Johnny competing with 22 others at the fall fair here, swallowed half a blueberry pie in 30 seconds, winning by a swallow from Raymond Overland.

Fort Angeles, Wash., Sept. 20—(AP)—If anybody shoots Roscoe, a two-year-old mule deer, it won't be the fault of friendly game protectors.

Roscoe had been having things pretty soft, living on handouts from camps and farms. Then he grew a set of four point horns—and hunting season on bucks opens Sept. 16.

Game protectors saved off his hunting in the woodsy hills will mistake him for a doe.

What Local Theatre Managers Say About Coming Attractions

AT THE BELLE

"The Toast of New York"
Jim Fisk's Romance

Another of those masterpieces of motion picture art, still an all too rare pleasure for theatregoers, will be presented at the Belle tomorrow (Tuesday) and Wednesday matinee daily. Based on the life of Jim Fisk, "The Toast of New York" is a gripping and dramatic romance, its high emotional appeal being in its presence . . . the flamboyant courtship of fascinating Josie Mansfield by the financier.

Frances Farmer is ideally suited to the role of Josie Mansfield, the woman for whom Fisk tries to solidify his financial empire by gaining control on the world gold market. Her pleasing contralto is heard in three songs, one of which is "Sweet Adeline." Ben Bolt, a classic of the poste Civil War era.

Edward Arnold steps into the 1865 frock coat and square-toed boots as naturally as did Fisk himself in his heyday as a big railroad stock manipulation when Commodore Vanderbilt, Daniel Drew and others battled with him to gain leadership of the financial world. Arnold again proves that he is the most able cinema portrayer of strong-hearted figures.

Cary Grant, as the handsome partner of Fisk, takes full advantage of his romantic role and gives a convincing portrayal of an equally shrewd manipulator. His rivalry with Fisk for the love of Josie is portrayed with appeal and power.

As the Canny Daniel Drew who is so treacherous in his partnership with Vanderbilt and Fisk, Donald Meek probably gives his most outstanding film performance. Thelma Leeds as Fleurique makes her debut in this picture and should prove a "find."

Jack Oakie gives his usual capable comedy performance as a foil to the emotional situations, which are many.

The screen should welcome the return of Clarence Kolb, of the veteran stage team of Kolb and Dill. His resemblance to Vanderbilt and amazing portrayal of the colorful gentleman make outstanding a compatibly minor role.

Wendell Hall in another of the popular Community Singfests as featured on the Gillette Hour, and the Belle News of the Day complete a splendid program of screen entertainment.

New Bobby Breen Hit

When he was only four years old, Bobby Breen made his professional debut as a singer in a night club.

This remarkable beginning of a career which has already been equally remarkable, in spite of the fact that the young screen star has not yet reached the age of ten, continues at the Capitol Theatre, where the child was a pupil of the noted Mme. De Monterey. The engagement at the Silver Slipper night club, Toronto, Canada, continuing for two years, was arranged by his sister Sally, Bobby's manager and constant companion up to the time of her recent marriage.

The young singer's latest new idea in musicals for RKO is "Make a Wish," with a cast that features Henry Armetta, Marion Claire, Basil Rathbone, Ralph Forbes, Leon Errol, Donald Meek, Herbert Mundin and Leonid Kinskey.

3 Excellent Featurettes

Three excellent featurettes have been assembled for exhibition on the program including the Belle World News Events, Buster West and Tom Patricola in a funny comedy "Girls Abey," and a very clever Walt Disney Donald Duck color cartoon.

"ISLAND IN THE SKY"

There is the making of a story as appealing as a fairy story in the scientific expedition to the "island in the sky" in the Grand Canyon of Colorado, which members of the American Museum of Natural History's expedition are now combing in an effort to find traces of life in animals separated from the life about the canyon rim for thousands of years. The whole question seems to be this, are there animals living on this island in Arizona which have come down from a prehistoric world and which have developed in their own way since the island was separated and completely isolated from twelve to thirty-five thousand years ago as scientists believe. If there are, scientists have something to work upon as Darwin did many years ago by his visit to the island of Galapagos.

Modern man is beginning to think in terms of great passages of time, not in mere thousands of years and to scientists the twelve or thirty-five thousand years do not seem a long period. They ask if there would be sufficient time for the development of any mutations of importance in animals. Was the island cut off during the ice age? They feel that there is little possibility of finding animals there which have disappeared from the surface of the earth outside of the island. Would it be likely that animals should find life conditions so impossible outside and so ideal on this small acreage and so to grow and endure to the present.

The question of the complete isolation of the island has been raised. It is said that deer have reached the summit and left it in ways unknown.

Tiny mice with leaf-ears have been brought out by Dr. McKee, Grand Canyon Park naturalist and member of the expedition to Shiva Temple. He is not certain of possible differences until more complete study has been made. Chipmunks, a rabbit, and signs of a coyote atop the 275-acre mesa were seen and traces of a deer were found though how the animal could find its way up the steep 1200 feet of climb to the top of the waterless top of the plateau is not clear. Arrow heads also have been found showing human visit or habitation at one time, prehistoric or recent.

The thrill in this modern expedition includes a promise that food and supplies will be dropped on the plateau from a plane for the explorers.

There is another 'sky island' nearby, Wotan's Temple, even more precipitous and scientists look for possibly more spectacular discoveries there.

These are some of the elements which thrill in this story of a modern expedition. Scientists like thrills as well as other men, even if some of the thrills might not always satisfy other appetites. In this case the thrill should be as potent as any thrill in modern life.

ON TWO BATTLEFIELDS

On November 19, 1863, President Lincoln made at Gettysburg the address beginning with the memorable words "Four-score and seven years ago" and ending with the imperishable words "this nation under God, shall have a new birth of freedom, and that government of the people, by the people and for the people shall not perish from the earth."

On September 17th, 1937, three score and fourteen years after Lincoln another president stood on another battlefield of the American Civil War, Antietam, President Roosevelt at the 75th anniversary of the battle, marked by re-enactment of the scenes.

Times have changed. Those two fields of Gettysburg and Antietam were fought long before the tide indicated what would be the end of the Civil War.

Mr. Roosevelt naturally could not avoid the theme of the late World War. In a speech longer than the 256 word Lincoln address, the president still speaking only about 700 words said, though he came into the world seventeen years after the close of the Civil War he could not lonk upon it as history. On this anniversary too there were many who recalled the battle of Antietam.

Some of Mr. Roosevelt's words were: "But w eknow today that it was best, for the generation of Americans who fought the war and for the generation of Americans who have come after them, that the conflict did not end in a division of our land into two nations. I like to think it was the will of God that we remain one people."

He said that it was not until the time of the World War that the United States acted once more as a nation of restored unity.

He also noted "I believe also that the past four years mark the first occasion, certainly since the war between the States and perhaps during the whole 160 years of our government that we are not only acting but also thinking in national terms.

His closing words were: "In the presence of the spirits of those who fell on this field, Union soldiers and Confederate soldiers, we can believe that they rejoice with us in the unity of understanding which is so increasingly ours today. They urge us on in all we do to foster that unity in the spirit of tolerance, of willingness to help our neighbors and of faith in the destiny of the United States."

Lincoln's address was in the midst of war whose end could not be seen and could only be hoped for. Roosevelt's in less striking language deals with the scene from the experience of his country after participation in a world war.

TRIFLES LIGHT AS AIR MAY MAKE A MILLION DOLLARS. Various inventions of trifling things have made much money for inventors, for instance the ice cream cone. Now e have to record the evolution of a millionaire from bubbles. Jacob Warren Bowman, of Philadelphia, invented a bubble gum which has made him a millionaire. Its trifling nature may be gauged from the advertisements which promise THREE BIG BITES FOR A PENNY. The child chews the gum, works up a lather and blows out of his or her mouth the most beautiful of bubbles. Also bubbles can be blown which explode with a sharp crack in a person's face, or elsewhere, depending upon the aim and intention of the bubble blower. The bubble gum factory is a building of five stories, with the basement of an adjoining building also utilized. Bowman, the gum magnate, was "married, divorced and bankrupt before he was 21". He failed at various enterprises including a steam laundry in Tampico, Mexico; sold used cars, bought a motor launch to tow barges in Mexico; went to Vera Cruz and tried floating mahogany logs to market, only the logs refused to float and sank, sinking the enterprise in a tropical river. Bowman next tried coffee roasting, and left that to make candy lozenges like Life Savers flavored with coffee. That came a cropper but Bowman turned his eyes elsewhere, became a chewing gum salesman, and then got his great idea which made him a millionaire. There had been bubble gums before but Bowman's bubble gum was larger, and he said, better. Base of all bubble gum, it is said, is a synthetic rubber combined with hydrogenized vegetable oils and synthetic resins—and Bowman's slogan is "Three Big Bites for a Penny."

IT IS SELDOM IF EVER THAT A DUMMY, AN INANIMATE BODY, attains national prominence, or even is deemed worthy of editorial mention by such leading newspapers as The New York Times, but Charlie McCarthy, ventriloquist dummy for Edgar Bergen, entertainer, has achieved that prominence. Few know the name of Edgar Bergen but many know the name of Charlie McCarthy, who Edgar Bergen has created and perpetuates on the air waves, advertising a brand of coffee and Bill Fields' big red and expensive nose. Charlie is even interfering with his creator's love affairs, it seems, and all in all Edgar Bergen seems to have created a Frankenstein which may extinguish his own personality completely. Here's what the New York Times paragrapher has to say of the situation:

"We always knew that sooner or later Charlie McCarthy would get Edgar Bergen into trouble. Charlie is the small wooden figure of rather Bond Street aspects who travels around with Ventriloquist Bergen and whose undependability and general cussedness we recently deplored in an editorial on this page. He evidently wasn't satisfied with the feud he conducts so cantankerously over the radio with W. C. Fields, but had to mix into a tangle with romance.

Now comes word from Hollywood that Judy Canova, hillbilly screen singer, has broken her engagement to Bergen because she "won't play second fiddle to a dummy." "He thinks and talks of nothing but Charlie," says Miss Canova, and of course the rest of us know that Charlie thinks and talks of nothing but himself. But Miss Canova is mistaken in regarding Charlie merely as a dummy. He is either a vicious-minded little poltergeist or a quite capable little press agent."

LOOKING BACKWARD

30 YEARS AGO

SEPTEMBER 30, 1917.

30 YEARS AGO

SEPTEMBER 30, 1907

The Belleville Fair for the year 1907 is now a thing of the past and the directors have cause to congratulate themselves upon the success which has attended their efforts. The only attraction yesterday was the speeding events. The five-for-all trotting race was the first event called and only three horses responded, namely, Maud Wilkes, Metlar Hall and Drover Boy. Maud Wilkes was the favorite and was looked upon as a sure winner which she proved to be. Nellie T. came second and Drover Boy was a considerable distance in the rear. Maud Wilkes is owned by Thomas Stewart, Desoronto; Nellie T. by A. O. Paice, Foxboro, and Drover Boy by Dr. Alyea, Colborne. In the stallion case there were three entries and the finish was as follows: Gilbert Parker, owned by H. Ashley, Foxboro; Direct Mack, owned by J. Tinnin, Belleville, and Jerry Hamburg, owned by T. Ashley, Foxboro. In the single roadster class the finish was as follows: Baron, owned by J. H. Ashley, Foxboro; Butcher Boy, owned by Mr. Bowen, Plainfield; Jessie Direct, owned by A. Wesse, Ameliasburg. Baron J. was an easy winner and only two heats were necessary. The three horses each secured a second and third position and it was decided to divide the second prize money between the three owners. This was satisfactory all round.

40 YEARS AGO

Mr. Philip M. Johnson of Belfast, Ireland, son of the Rev. Dr. Johnson, is in the city to spend several weeks with his cousins here. Many of our citizens heard and personally met the Rev. St. John's Anglican Church at the corner of Isabel and West Bridge Street was beautifully decorated yesterday with flowers, fruit and grains, the occasion being the annual harvest festival. The Rev. ROWE PROMISES would inaugurate a system of motor license relates "to give a square deal to the man on the back concessions" who cannot drive his car the year round.

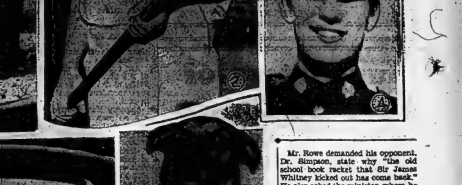
Reductions announced by the present government were described as "an election bribe" and he charged the government, while giving those reductions, "allowed the old school book racket to come back to the province."

Mr. Rowe spent the week-end at his Newton Robinson farm and today speaks at Chesley in the afternoon and Goderich at night.

Indication of Cabinet.

Recalling opposition references to "the old gang"—the former Conservative administration — Mr. Rowe gave an indication of the make-up of his cabinet in event of victory. When Mr. Hepburn saw his cabinet, he promised, "he'll not see any of the Roebuck and Flimbucks he put in" but would see "young men of more vision."



"That is straight election bribery, paid for by your own money and advertised in the Conservative organ, the Toronto Globe and Mail," Mr. Rowe declared as he held up during a address at nearby Elmvale the advertisement of the license decrease.

"He now advertises work he goes out of power what he promised when he went into power."

Changes Licence Policy.

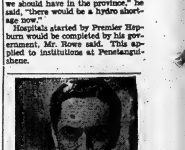
A man with a 16-cylinder car would save $25 by the present decrease and while the government gave this concession it allowed "the old school book racket to come back to province and charge $2 to $10 more for books."

His government would change the license policy. The man on the back concessions, unable to get 12-month service out of his car due to weather and road conditions, could send his license plate back and receive a reduction in accordance with the time you laid your car up."

THREE ROBBERY SUSPECTS CAPTURED AFTER GUN-FIGHT AND HUNT

In an all day hunt climaxing a running gun-fight on the Toronto-Belleville highway, police captured three men who allegedly broke into a brewery warehouse in Picton early Friday morning. Within 12 hours of the third degree one suspect, Edward Thompson of Hamilton, was taken into custody at the railroad tracks near Colborne. Police are shown (1) dragging a wound in his leg immediately after his capture. Alex McKay, Colborne, shown in (3) impaled the suspect on the pitchfork. Even encounter with the men was undertaken by Officers Frank Lose (3), and Jack Taylor, (4) of Trenton. The car which the robbers allegedly used, its rear window smashed by bullets, is shown in (5). In the thick of the gun-fight on the highway was the mascot of the Trenton police force, 'Sandy', (6).

Mr. Rowe demanded his opponent, Dr. Simpson, state why "the old school book racket that Sir James Whitney kicked out has come back." He also asked the minister, whom he accused of being "afraid" to discuss the school tax question in his own riding, "to tell the story and tell it in full."



Take Premier Question.

"I'll ask the premier," he said, "to say if it was not a diabolical Liberal plot and trick and racket and if he didn't drag the bill into politics in a way that it would be repealed."

Mr. Hepburn had refused to give a signed statement by three competent engineers that the province did not face a hydro shortage and the reason for his not doing so was because he could not get "one single engineer, let alone three, to put out his statement."

"If we had the standard of living the school leaders in the province," said, "there would be a hydro shortage now."

Hospitals started by Premier Hepburn would be completed by his government, Mr. Rowe said. This applied to institutions at Penetanguishene.

Hundred Years of Progress Honored by Large Crowd at Shannonville Fair Saturday

H. K. Denyes, Ex-M. P. P., Tells of Early History of Fair

FINE ENTERTAINMENT

Catharine Gratton, Winner of Fast Class of Hapnote Races

Raised by veteran fair-goers as being the largest crowd in the history of the Shannonville Agricultural Society, upwards of three thousand people thronged the grounds at this historic place on Saturday afternoon and evening to celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of the Shannonville Fair.

Pride in the institution which has been a landmark with the people of the county fairs, dubbed by some as the "world's fair" the exhibition this year far outdid any of previous years from practically every standpoint. Directors of the society, who since its untimed to culminate one hundred years of unbroken fairs with one of the finest exhibitions in the history of the society. Scoring this and to the honor to the one hundredth milestone of the fair, people of the surrounding district flocked to the grounds in an unending stream. Old-timers and veterans, youth in all its exuberance patronized the various amusements in large numbers.

And they were not disappointed. Horse races that thrilled lovers of this sport, dancing, tug-of-war, old time fiddlers, log-sawing and other contests provided a sequence of entertainment that left nothing to be desired.

Midway Well Patronized.

On the midway a variety of amusements was available — games of chance abounded with the spirit of take-a-chance. Games of skill and other novel attractions sounded out a fine entertainment. On a raised platform a quartette of musicians played the rollicking tunes of old time music. Hot dog stands did a roaring business for although the weather was cloudy and at times threatened rain the spirit of those present was not to be dampened by so.

Livestock exhibits were one of the best in the history of the fair with cattle, horses, sheep and swine standing out in their respective classes. In the fair building a fine display of fruits and vegetables, ladies' work, grain and seeds, cut and garden flowers, preserved fruits and vegetables and home-cooking displays were the cynosure of thousands of eyes as the large crowd passed through the building in admiration.

Contest Popular.

Residents of the Reserve demonstrated in no uncertain manner their mastery of the step-dance. Some twelve entries in this popular class delighted the large crowd which thronged around the stand as the tripping feet of the contestants whirled through a maze of intricate steps. Competition was keen with the judges forced to order further exhibitions before the final ruling the contest before Ray Marcie was finally awarded the palm.

Dainty maidens too showed a delightful ability with dancing feet. Rounds of applause greeted the large number of entries but the victory finally went to a paleface maid by the name of Vera Thompson.

The log-sawing contests and tug-o-war drew a large portion of the fun-seeking crowd. Shouts of encouragement to the various participants mingled with the roar of the swiftly-moving saws as steel teeth bit through six-inch logs. With only seconds separating the times, the Shannonville team of Poe and Bunnett eked out a narrow margin of victory over the crack Indian sawyers Lickers and Johnson.

Baseball Played.

Lovers of baseball had their sports appetite satisfied with a fast game of the summer pastime in which Camaffilon, bolstered by players from the Belleville Rivards squad, defeated the Shannonville nine by a 5-1 score.

Catching the greasy pig laurels went to Ramsay Bunnett after a few chases. A wrestling exhibition, with Roy Dobbie in the ham role, provided a lot of excitement.

Commemorating the one hundredth anniversary of the fair's existence, Mr. H. K. Denyes of Thurlow, Ex-M.P.P. and ex-M.P. of the Ontario Government gave a splendid address in which he described the history of the fair since its conception and a brief resume of the history of Shannonville.

"This community has a wonderful history," said Mr. Denyes, "and it is my wonder that this fair is often called the "world's fair", for I know of no other that has started out on a hundred century.

"The name 'Shannonville' came from the first white settlers in the three parts, people by the name of Purtle who came from the banks of the River Shannon in Ireland. They named the fair like the River 'Shannon', but the Indians living here objected to this term and tried to name it the 'Salmon' because of the plentiful supply of fish found in it.

Settled in 1837

"In 1837, the first emigrants arrived here, old U.E.L. stock and those from the British Isles. They were splendid types of people who lived to help one another. It is no wonder then that an Agricultural Society was formed with such courageous and persevering men and women who were not afraid to face the primeval forests with its hardships.

"The first fair was held in Melrose over one hundred years ago. Later the fair was held here. The race track in those days ran from Melrose to Shannonville. The horses were all running horses; there were no such things as trotting horses in those days, and in some cases the men stood up on the horses' backs as they raced."

"The success of the early fairs was due in no small measure to the efforts of such fine men as the late Alex MacLaren, Nathaniel Appleby and others."

"There were no registered stock in those days," said the speaker, "only oxen and the brindle cow were in evidence. There were 250 oxen in Trendingas in 1837, one grist mill and at Camville in 1850 there were 750 people living in Shannonville."

Old Settlers Helped

"Some of the past residents of the township who have passed on made a fine contribution to this society. Among them were the late Arthur McFarlane, who was the secretary of the fair for so many years; J. C. Hanley, who was well known as a shorthorn breeder, exhibitor and director of the fair, and Robert Martin, who brought honor to Trendingas by winning honors at the World's Fair at Chicago with his Yorkshire hogs. Then, too, there were the late William Clasie, R. J. Garbutt and Albert Martin of the adjoining township who were noted breeders and strong supporters of this Fair."

"We must pay tribute today to our Indian friends in the front of this township. The famous chief Srant was a staunch friend of the white people and helped to settle quired. They have given this township a name after their great chief. Dr. Cronyatcha was a great doctor and was one of the greatest organizers on this continent. He was honored and respected by the Queen and the Royal Family. It was due to his enterprise, that pure-bred livestock was first introduced to his people and today there is a flourishing Agricultural Society on the Reserve."

Mr. Denyes concluded with a message of congratulation to the directors of the Society on their splendid exhibition on the 100th anniversary of the fair.

Seated on the platform with the speaker were a number of past presidents of the Fair, many of whom are in their eighties but who still exuded a boyish and keen interest in the activities of the organization to which they had contributed so much. Among these were Jonathan Barlow, 87, George Lester, 82; James Kerr, 77; Thomas Vivian, and to the present president, W. S. Dies and Secretary Clarence Long.

Evening Entertainment

The evening entertainment consisted of a dance held in the Orange Hall. Mr. Leslie Peacock of a splendid job as Master of Ceremonies for the day, over the loud-speaking system of the Stewart-Warner Co. of Belleville under direction of Harold Jackson.

Results of sports—Old tyme fiddlers, Robert Crawford; Tug-dancing, Mis. Lela Hughes, Tamworth; Log-sawing, Fox and Bunnett, Shannonville; Lickers and J. Johnson, Reserve; Men's Step-dancing, Ray McBride; Lading step-dancing, Vera Thompson; Tug-o-war, Tyendinaga team.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Which is the Better Marriage Asset for a Girl—Beauty or Charm?

It's almost impossible to pick up a magazine these days without reading an advertisement for beauty. Long before I was in this line lessons at so much. Individual instructions at a higher rate.

And I understand these charm classes are crowded—with women.

But don't worry about charm. In fact they don't give a darn whether you have it or have not charm. They know perfectly well they'll never back for more even if they're as rough as bark on a tree, or as uninteresting as a dish of spinach.

It's the girls who worry about charm, and spend money to acquire it. The consequence is that the country is cluttered up with charm schools and charm culture, scattering smiles and trying to please. They are pestered with rules about what and what not to do, while the masculine person who knows little about these things goes on his way triumphant.

The result of all this charm school stuff is that a lady has written to me and asked whether her daughter should be enrolled in a charm school, or should learn how to be charming by herself privately. The daughter and her mother, who disagree on this important question, decided to make me umpire, so the daughter tucked a letter to me between her first two sayings:

"Suppose I learn all about make-up, powder, rouge, and shop at the chain stores, how to cover the worn parlor sofa with an attractive chintz, will that make a nice man fall in love with me? You know, Miss Fairfax, that it won't."

The mother is all for her daughter being a practical housekeeper although she leaves the question of the charm school open for discussion. You can see that she is capable and conscientious mother, who believes that, if a marriage is to be a success a young lady must know her trade.

But the daughter argues that there is no use learning a trade unless you have an opportunity to practice it. Secure your opportunity, first, she says, then capture the man.

The daughter believes in charm. Plenty of parties. Plenty of clothes. Plenty of attention to her face and hair at the beauty parlor. Plenty of gayety, so that she may appear to be the happy, carefree creature that all men demand.

There is something in what she says, undoubtedly, but it's my reliefs that a girl ought to make herself attractive and charming without giving twenty-four hours a day to it. Preparation for marriage should not omit the things in this young lady's list, but I do not agree that it should overlook competent housekeeping, the ability to get the most out of a dollar, and the knack of making a home the most attractive place in the world for a man to return to after his struggles in the dollar arena.

Cooking is one of the most fascinating arts. Running a household on a budget is a highly exciting form of arithmetic, and learning these important things may be combined so easily with a wholesome amount of charm parties that there need be no serious quarrel between this young lady and her mother.

Be as charming and attractive as possible, but preparation for marriage always should entail the exercise of common sense.

Regular shampoos keep her hair healthy

(By HELEN FOLLETT)

Nothing makes a girl so angry as to have her hair think as if it were oily.

Oil spouting out of the sebaceous glands does that. Sometimes the oil appears a few days after the shampoo. Sometimes what seems to be oil is soap scum that has not been rinsed away.

Let the lady of the shimmering locks try washing her hair with eggs. Presses will be light, fluffy and clean. If soap deposits have accumulated it will clear them away.

Don't beat the eggs to a foam. Add a tablespoon of cold water and give them a few winks. Six eggs are not too many for the average head of hair. Rinse with a warm, not hot, water. Use half of the eggs, keep on rubbing until they form a crackling foam. Rinse, use the rest of the eggs, give a final rinsing.

Don't be afraid to use fairly hot water. If any egg particles remain on the hair, they'll dissolve as you move them. Dry the hair thoroughly even if you are going to have a finger wave. You can put on your setting lotion with a little water added.

Oat down on butter, fats and pastries when skin and hair are inclined to be oily. The food we eat has much to do with many beauty problems and their solution.

Witch hazel should be in every woman's beauty cabinet. It is excellent to use after cold cream has been wiped away with cleansing tissues. It is a mild astringent and is recommended for oily skin and enlarged pores. It is convenient to use under the armpits after the bath.

That Body of Yours

VALUE OF HAVING URINE TESTED IN PREVENTING DIABETES

One of the best bits of work our insurance companies are doing is in the free annual examination of their policy holders. At first this was viewed with suspicion by some policyholders; they felt that the examining physician might pass on to the company some confidential information about heart, lungs, kidneys or blood pressure, that would cause the company to put a lien on, or cancel their policy.

As a matter of fact it is to the company's interest to keep the policyholder alive and in good health so that he can continue to pay his premiums. And if he is kept alive and well he certainly can have no complaint to make.

One of the tests regularly made is for sugar in the urine, which, if present, is a sign of diabetes in two of every three cases. If there is really no sign of diabetes present—drinking a great amount of water, and passing a great amount of urine—it can readily be seen that a nearly diabetic would not likely have discovered that he had diabetes had not the urine been tested by the insurance examiner.

Many factors have been suggested as underlying the cause of diabetes. Heredity, overweight, hardening of the blood vessels (arteriosclerosis), gall bladder disease, nervous strain, disease of the pituitary gland which lies at the base of the skull, thyroid gland disease, and other conditions have been suggested.

However Prof. Elliott P. Joslin, Louis I. Dublin, and Herbert H. Marks, in the American Journal of Science, after an investigation into many thousands of cases of diabetes report some outstanding findings:

1—There are now 20 per cent more females than males affected with diabetes.

2—The death rate in Massachusetts (at least) is 50 per cent. or more higher for females than males.

3—In proportion to population there are more Jewish patients than others, and the Jewish men most cases come on between the ages of 45 to 54 as compared with 50 to 54 in others.

4—Heredity is a factor. Diabetes is not present at birth, but there is an inherited tendency.

Prof. Joslin has shown from the records of thousands of cases that overweight is a forerunner of diabetes.

The lesson, then, for men and women is to have the urine tests' once or twice a year. Cutting down on starch foods abscribed for prevention overweight and the development of diabetes in those who inherit the tendency toward it. It should also do away with the need for insulin in early cases of diabetes.

GOOD MANNERS

by MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Handshaking

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—If a couple calls on me at my home shouldn't I offer my hand to both of them? Or to the man?

2—Should I shake hands with my husband's friends?

3—If I meet another lady whom I have met only once before, should I offer my hand?

4—What is the correct way to introduce one married couple to another?

5—When I am out to dinner and the host passes me the first plate and doesn't mention whom it is for, should I pass it on, or what? I keep it?

Is this the proper way to sign my letters?

(Mrs. R. A. Whitney)

Reader

1—Yes, both the hostess and the host should shake hands with all persons whom they are greeting to their home, women, men and children.

2—And yes again. Both the hostess and the host shake hands with all guests who are departing from their home, women, men and children. These handshakings of welcoming and godspeed are taken for-granted details of hospitality. And the hostess and host who, in the Bible says are "given to hospitality" will express much friendliness and cordiality in these handshakes.

3—The depends. If you have met this woman casually and for only a few minutes, and have no special interest in stopping to talk with her, then you would simply bow, say at pleasant "How do you do," and pass on. But if, in this only meeting you have had quite an interesting talk with her, and have found her a pleasant person to whom you would like to show social friendliness, and if you think that she reciprocates that feeling, it would be proper and natural for you to stop, shake hands with her and "carry awhile" the visit at that time.

4—The introductions should be individual, not "Mr. and Mrs." introductions. First the wives should be introduced to each other. Mrs. Allen, Mrs. Graham. The Mrs. Graham, may I present Mrs. Allen", and "Mrs. Allen, Mr. Graham". And then, "Mr. Allen, Mr. Graham".

5—It is wisest form, when there is this fruitfulness which is the best way, is thoroughly unnecessary on the part of the host, to say, grace, and "Please help yourself." Then the host and the host shake hands with all guests who are departing from their home, women, men and children. These handshakings of welcoming and godspeed are taken-for-granted details of hospitality. And the hostess and host who, in the Bible says are "given to hospitality" will express much friendliness and cordiality in these handshakes.

THE OTHER WOMAN LIVES JUST AROUND THE CORNER

IT may seem unreasonable, but it does not matter whether you live in a large city or a small town, the chances are that there should have recurring thoughts of the other woman who seems changed. He rarely appears to be interested in you. He is always thinking of someone else. He does not know what it is to go home and forget his troubles in love and talking, money. All he does appear to be interested in is himself and the other woman.

Are you such a three-cornered affair?

Don't let the ordeals that all women face, more or less, cause discomfort or undermine your health. Try at least the following suggestion:

A Reward For Good Mother?

Problem of Unselfish Parent is Discussed by Writer Grenelle

(By Lisa Grenelle)

I don't know about you, but I have my memories of dreadful doubt, bitterness and disillusionment. Isn't it the "best" parents who run the harvest after all? The dominating, selfish, possessive mothers who live for their children, serve and comfort them in their old age, while the generous, unselfish parents who let our children go free, who help and encourage them to create lives of their own, are left to a lonely old age.

Look at old Mrs. Rubbard, for instance. She has kept that son of hers—I can never remember his name. Oh, yes, Edward. Every one thinks of him as I do, as Clara's son, tied to her apron strings. He can't ever think of marrying—mama would consider it a breach of loyalty as well as an unwarranted extravagance.

Then there's that old lavaid, Ida Black, whose daughter, Ethel, has been nursing her for years. She never thinks she's good enough for Ethel to do any "stepping out", much less get herself a husband.

Two Extremes

Nor are these little tricks confined to mothers. There are a few father I know, however old Mr. Smith and the fuss he used to raise if any of his daughters brought home a beau! He was always so rude to all his daughters' male visitors that only one, that I know of, ever dared come back. Only one of the four daughters ever escaped the other three, and she married the old man's table. No lonely old age for her.

And then think of that nice Mrs. Smith. All her fledglings have married, and no one is happily married. Always, ever since I can remember, she has been making aged young people to come to her house, made them feel at home and loved, time again and brought their friends. She did everything that she could to interest them in sports, adaptable and friendly, so that they could get along with anyone. Everybody liked them, and it wasn't long before the boys had wood jobs, the girls worthy suitors and deserving Mama was left to a long and lonely old age.

The Unwanted Mother

Oh, of course, the children will come occasionally, often, can't forget another like Mrs. Smith. But, being happily married and mature, they won't need her.

There's no use fooling ourselves. The successful mother is left to a lonely old age. With no compensations? Is the compensation of having she has done a good job, that she can die peacefully, knowing her children are happy and settled and able to take care of themselves.

A successful mother's reward—a lonely old age. That's hard to take. The great challenge, the test be whether all this time we were real women, with the best, beautiful, unselfish maternal instincts or just possessors, pleased with a delightful toy, with something we could dominate and call our own?

We might, of course, if we're intelligent "he will as brave, accept that inevitable lonely old age and begin preparing for it by developing secret, personal resources, gardening or painting, or bridge, and building up some real friendships, made to last.

Answer to a Reward For Good Mother?

Sheila—I must say when it is time to leave after escorting the young lady home, or should she call him when to go?

K.

The young man should, "sense" the proper time for him to leave; then should rise and say, "Good night, Mary. Thank you for such a happy evening", or something of this kind . . . . . .

Wally Berger's Homer Helps Giants to Retain Lead in National over Chicago Cubs

Big Series Between Giants And Cubs Open Tuesday

YANKS BAFFLED

Aukes' of Detroit Hurls Winning Ball in Pinches

By ED FRIEDL

To a lot of people, this is only the time to get ready for the end-of-the-month blitz, to big league baseball, it looks like the week for which everything has been headed since the "play-ball" signal back in April.

Unless all signs are pointed backward, before the week runs out the Yankees will have clinched the American League pennant, and the Giants and Cubs will either have settled the National League squabble or given definite indications as to just what the fans can expect.

From the senior circuit standpoint, New York's Giants and Chicago's battered Cubs, who are, at the moment 3½ games apart in that order, go to work on each other's throats in a series starting tomorrow. And their three-game foes, either the Giants will engage the "Yanks" for the pennant, or the Cubs will wallop their way to a fight down to the wire.

Tanks Need Five Wins.

Over in the rival loop, meantime, the Yankees, with a 10½ game lead, only need five more victories of the victories or five Detroit Tigers defeats, or a combination of the two, mathematically to eliminate the Tigers and nail the flag to their mast, for another year.

Before swinging at each other, the Giants and Cubs had a little preliminary work today in winding up their series with St. Louis Cardinals and Brooklyn's daffy Dodgers, respectively. But from the results of yesterday's games, neither rival figures to change the shadow of consoling events.

The Giants yesterday nosed out the Cards 8-3 in ten innings. Behind Al Massler Bill Terry reached into the hat and came up with Wally Berger, a fairly dependable guy for his most powerful pounder, Hank Leiber, in the stretch. In the ninth however, Wally belted a homer to tie the score and effectively lead the Giants to win over Lon Warneke.

Starnett Homers.

Meantime, big Max Butcher held the Cubs to four hits. Unfortunately, however, one of them was Gabby Hartnett's homer with a mate aboard—in the ninth inning off Lon Chi Davis' classy flinging for a 3-1 win over the Brooklyns, leaving the pennant situation in this form:

	W.	L.	O.B. T.P.
Giants	94	52
Cubs	87	57	7½ 16
Reds	81	63	13½ 11

Right ball battled the Yankees and the Tigers trampled the American League winners 8-1. Thanks Son Gehrig automatically eliminated from the pennant race by only beating Detroit a twin bill with the Senators, losing the opener 5-4 and taking the nightcap 8-1.

Philadelphia's Athletics astonished themselves and Cleveland Indians by copping the tribe twice, 8-4 and 5-3. The Boston Red Sox-St. Louis' Browns' bargain bill was rained out.

Pittsburgh's Pirates split with the Phillies, winning the afternoon 5-1 after the Phils took the opener 8-1. Lefties Sewell and Johnny Gee did the same thing. Boston coming through 7-4 and then losing 2-0 on Syl Coodman's two-run homer and Gene Schott's three-hitter.

The other will be held in this country in February, probably in Miami . . . Elmer Layden means Notre Dame fans expect too much of his team. . . . What, with eleven bona fide triers on the squad?

Don't look for Clark Griffith to send Nick Altrock on another scouting trip soon. . . .The clown was dispatched to Shoe Falls, S.D. to look over a pitcher named Anderson . . . COLTS EXTEND PLAYOFF SERIES

Win Sunday Over Gloversville to Make Standing 3 to 2

(By The Canadian Press)

It's the 10-count for Ogdensburg Colts today if they lose to Glovers ville Cubs. The Glovers already hold a 3-1 lead in games in the best-of-seven final series for the Can.-Am. Baseball League championship.

Glovers hung their third straight win Saturday with a 3-1 victory and Colts manned the dying embers of their title hopes back to life with a 6-5 triumph yesterday.

Colts' heavy sluggers were kept relatively silent by Cubs' pitches and costly errors afield spelled defeat in the first three games. Colts' league-leading batting leader, Sperrick and Bill gave Glovers their first grasp on the championship honors.

Homer Wins Pastime

At Gloversville, Saturday, Klinkert slammed out a three-run circuit homer to give Glovers victory and to break up a pitchers' duel between Colts' Bill Gowers and Pepper Yesterday, however, Colts came back to their batting range with their home champing grounds and Marjorie Van Scoyoc, leading batter in the Can.-Am. look, got two hits in three trips to the plate and brought in three for Ogdensburg's six runs, scoring two himself.

Smith toed the slab for Colts and held Glovers to nine well-spaced blows, while Orrin Baker was pounded for 13 safeties.

Bill led Gowers onslaught with three hits out of five trys, including a homer.

KING FOOTBALL MAKES ITS BOW ON WEDNESDAY

Belleville Panthers And "Flyers" Pry Off Lid at Fair Grounds

MANY NEW FACES

Coach Duffield Reports All His Players in Condition

King Football the autumn classic, makes its 1937 inaugural bow before the sport fans of Belleville on Wednesday afternoon when the Eastern Ontario group of the intermediate O.R.F.U. swings into action with the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" meeting the Belleville "Panthers," at the Exhibition Park.

For the past six weeks the Panthers have been practicing diligently with Coach Archie Duffield being satisfied with the squad to such an extent that two remaining practices will be in the form of light work-outs, prior to the big game on Wednesday.

In the backfield the Panthers have a surprise addition in Art Storey, former Woodstock broken field runner, who starred with the Woodstock juniors, when that grid team won the Dominion junior football championship three years ago. The acquisition of Storey proved a ten-strike for the Panthers. Diminutive George Cumis has been prevailed upon to return to his old love and George will call the local plays from the quarterback position. The kicking honors will be divided between Eddie Schrieder, who did the locals' punting last year and Morley Baker, a recruit from last year's Belleville senior intermediate squad. Other backfielders include Kelly, former outside for the locals and coupe of other recruits.

Neutral Officials

Ab Faulkner returned to Belleville last week and immediately reported for duty, Ab being assigned the snap position, he as will filled two seasons ago. "Hodge" McCreary, Red Johnson of Queens Lou Renouf, Dick' Burns, Tommy Burns, former B.C.U. star, Grant, Cord Terry, Geo. Cole, Cliff Fenz, Ed. Perkins, Star McDonald and Grey of Trenton, are a star of Coach Duffield's linemen, while two new linemen from Trenton, are expected out tonight. We have a squad, that has the football fighting spirit and although some of the players lack O.R.F.U. experience, I feel sure they will open the padlock on the two remaining practices will be in the form of light work-outs, prior to the big game on Wednesday.

'DOC' ROWDEN GAME'S HERO

Oshawa Defeats Hamilton in First Game of Semi-Finals

Hamilton, Sept. 20—Oshawa G-Men went one up on Moodie Tigers in their bracket of the senior O.R.A.A. head-finals at the latter's stadium here on Saturday afternoon, taking a 4-to 3 decision after one of the finest battles of the entire season, but the champions of last season had to extend themselves to knock off the Hamilton tillebolders.

"Doc" Rowden, diminutive shortfielder of the G-Men, was the hero of the piece, for the score tied in the eighth, Rowden slapped one of "Scoop" Coulter's fast pitches over the left-field fence, a mammoth wallop, and put his team in front to stay.

"Jake" Biddle and Manager Colter waged a great 20-inning mound duel, with the bespectacled visitor having slightly the edge. Coulter was nicked for twelve hits, while Biddle gave up ten and each fanned five. Rowden divided hitting honors with Weldon, Hamilton catcher, each tagging three safety. Atherville and Cotter were the other big hitters.

JIMMY BARTLETT AN EASY WINNER TRIAL MARATHON

Oshawa Boy, Assured of Place on Team For Australia

2 MINUTE LEAD

Second Placed Longman Ran 22 Miles With Blistered Feet

Toronto, Sept. 20 (CP)—Nearly two months' gruelling training is what Jimmy Bartlett, Canada's new marathon champion, credits for bringing him his first major long-distance running triumph.

The 20-year-old Oshawa, Ont., Olympian, first North American to finish the Berlin run, assured himself of a place on the Canadian British Empire games team Saturday by a wide margin victory in the ninth Dominion marathon.

Over seven weeks, Bartlett ran 12 to 14 miles daily in preparation for Canada's big jamboree, in which he scored two seconds, a fourth and a thing in the last four years. Most of that time Bartlett was training about 26 full marathon distances, shaved clean by Saturday.

Jimmy set out with the leader, Lloyd Longman of Toronto and paced even perfectly as he target on Lloyd's heels for 15 miles. Then Bartlett stepped in and began to pull away in the 17th mile, gradually increasing his lead that extended to more than two-minutes at the end of 26 miles and 385 yards.

Heels Blistered

Longman, who ran 22 miles with a blistered heel, held on to take second place, 2 minutes and 42 seconds ahead 2:43:57 for Longman. Following McCallum, all Toronto athletes, were Ken Reeves, were Walter Hornby of Hamilton, Ont., Fred Brisbon and Dick Wilding of Toronto, Gerard Cote of Montreal and Harold Webster, Hamilton's 1936 Canadian and Empire champion.

Back in 12th place came the pretournament favourite, Walter Young, the racing policeman from Verdun, Que., who won the Boston and Salisbury marathons this summer. Young, with cramps in both the left leg, suffered at Dallas, Texas, 20 miles from the finish and Young never was a contender.

ORIOLES APPEAR TO BE WINNERS

Have 3-1 Lead Over Royals in Semi Final Series

(By The Associated Press)

That unanswerable Baltimore argument, the home park, may give the International Baseball League the best possible chance to win its final playoff series—Newark vs. Baltimore.

Newark's great team, pennant winner by 25 1-2 games, already has reached the finals by defeating Syracuse, Baltimore, the team that came back after falling in the cellar berth for a long time early in the campaign, and Buffalo 3-1 last year memorial's second- place Royals in the other semi-final series today and looked like the class of the field.

The Orioles got a gift run in the ninth inning today to march to victory No. 3 over the Royals, 14-12, built up a mighty 7-run assault of homers, that they won. They swatted four, after having won Saturday night's 11-inning thriller, 6-5, of a four-ply clout by Manager Steve Dalkus, Baltimore first baseman.

Today's Orioles' attack was powerful enough to provide the only answer for a home park—another homer—but stopped at three.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

Jim L. Colling

We understand the Belleville Kiwanis Club is seriously considering the sponsorship of two Juvenile baseball clubs next summer, in conjunction with their Junior O. R. A. A. club. Would it not be far more beneficial to supply two or three catchers' outpoints for our public ball park and revive the diamond game from this point? In the old days it was the baseball played in the public and separate schools that in later years produced such diamond celebrities as the Mills boys, Fred Geyer, the Weirs, Wesley Ross, Elmer Hagerman and all the rest. The most opportune time for missionary work along these lines is throughout the winter months.

The greatest handicap that confronts the fostering of minor league ball in a community the size of Belleville is the expense of equipment. A little assistance from the various service clubs in this matter would soon see the diamond game once again flourish in our school playgrounds. Boys who now play softball at school are fertile material for baseball as well.

Owing to rain the Point Anne all Orillia intermediate O.A.S.A. semi-final was postponed on Saturday. The date and venue of the next game was not set at an early hour today. Incidentally we learned they play Bunny Ball up around Orillia, but efforts to have the "Dementzmen" remain over and play on Sunday could not receive the sanction of the parent body. Skipper Frank Scholfield informs us the two clubs may play the third game of the series, that is if no unusual rain, tomorrow and if Orillia wins, then the Cementmen would still have to make a trip to that town. In the O.A.S.A. there is no provision for rained out games in the matter of expenses for a return trip. As the show stands now the Point Anne squad must meet the entire opposition for second trip to Orillia, after footing the bill once already.

With the snarling Chicago Cubs all their heels the New York Giants are on the well known spot today, only 2½ games in front of Charlie Grimm's gang, but the Cubs have a tough schedule ahead of them, but their sore touch was when Carl Hubbell lost to the Cincinnati Reds on Saturday. Even at that the Terrymen managed to come from behind yesterday. The Cubs gained a full game over the week-end.

CALGARY BRONKS LEAD

Calgary, Sept. 20 (CP)—While Winnipeg Blue Boombers and Regina Roughriders girded themselves for tonight's game in the Western Interprovincial Football Union, upper berth after defeating Edmonton Eskimos 8-7 Saturday.

Bronks ran up their third win in four games when Keith Gibson Calgary end, dropped on a fumbled ball behind the Regina touch-line to even the score late in the third period. A successful convert gave the Bronks the one-point lead they held until the final gun.

Brute Force and White Flannels

By H. LOUIS HAYBOLD
McClure Newspaper Syndicate
WNU Service.

Gloria Graham from her perch on the rocks where comfortably seated with a best seller, she had been passing a rare unengaged hour, looked across to the life guard pacing the sand, his broad shoulders gleaming.

She had talked with him once that same week—knew that his name was Jerry Crane and that he held a partnership in the busy garage up the street from her hotel. She had realized that he presented an attractive picture of lonely, self-developed young manhood, but now, she was looking at him from a new viewpoint inspired by the words of the heroine of the afternoon's novel.

"Brute force—the embodiment of my ideal. I should demand of my husband. If a man lack that, he is less than a man."

Jerry Crane was not an expert swimmer, but he was no dub. And her rather wild sweep together with the wind-tossed waves boded first ill for their chances of coming in early and, secondly, a real danger of capsizing.

A sudden lurch and the bow of the green canoe collided with the stern of the red one. Both tottered, righted, seemed about to resume their balance and then turned completely over, submerging their four occupants.

Gloria, who was as much at home in the water as on a dennis court or a dance floor, struck out at once and took in the situation. Jerry, of course, would look out for the girl whether she could swim or not, while Derek would right the canoes.

But—what was the matter? Derek was struggling with the girl while Jerry was nowhere to be seen. In an instant Gloria, sensing something wrong, was at Derek's side. "Look after her," he said hoarsely. "Crane hasn't come up!"

And Derek, plunging after the vanished Jerry, brought him to the surface, gasping but conscious.

"All right now," he sputtered. "thanks to you. Wracked my head in the confounded rock and got knocked out for an instant."

Derek in the canoe events and, discovering that Jerry had promised to go with another girl, held to the old plan.

However, she felt inwardly that Jerry Crane was new on the beach this year, would walk off with all trophies through sheer physical superiority. And Gloria loved a winner.

Finally, the moment for the canoe races for doubles arrived and Gloria and Derek, in the girl's brilliant red craft, took their place out by the buoys. There was a rather turbulent sea and they maintained their place with some difficulty till the pistol shot that started the race.

Next to them tossed the green canoe of the girl with whom Jerry was to race in the bow while young Crane himself, massive shouldered and muscular, filled generously the stern.

Jerry's partner was no expert and her rather wild sweep together

Then came the day of the annual regatta, an event which called out the entire colony either as participants in or spectators of the varied water sports and contests.

Gloria customarily raced with Derek in the canoe events, but

Then came scraps instituted within her made the same sort of demand as the heroine of this really inspired novel.

During the next few days the little colony of Shady Rock beach were highly edified to see that Gloria Graham had taken up in a great deal of time on the sand with him and now, my dear, we saw them having supper together in the Pink Parrot Tea-room!

What Derek Goodrich's thoughts on the matter were might have been interesting. Calmly enough he appeared to accept Gloria's evident preoccupation with another and her inability to spare him an afternoon for golf, or an evening for a hop. Regularly he sent her flowers, called on her and her mother, made himself useful whenever the rare occasion arose.

Certainly young Crane embodied brute force. Derek, inwardly contrasting the two men, also thought of lazy Derek Goodrich, tall, rather thin, always immeculately the aristocrat. Yes, what had the forensic heroine gone on to say? "None of your white flannelled youth for me who think hazing or knocking about a silly ball sufficient outlet for their fresh energies."

Gloria visualized Derek as she had seen him last night, as he stood before her in the moonlight and sniffed as the once more virtuous little wistful proposal. Why had she never yielded to him? Was it because scope instinct within her

(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

As the warriors drew back their spears, ready to volley them into the body, Tarzan's mind flashed with sudden inspiration. He grasped the mystic emerald that hung at his side and ripped away the cloth in which it was wrapped. Then he held the stone aloft.

Its polished surface, reflecting the moonlight, gave forth rays that enveloped the apeman in a weird, unearthly glow. Then he spoke: "You cannot kill me. The power of the emerald protects me. Through it, the mighty powers which were Woora's are now mine!"

The warriors stood paralyzed with fear and awe, their eyes fixed in fascination upon the eerie brilliance. For year they had been taught that Woora's magic was derived from some quality of the great green gem. They believed therefore, for them it was true!

Now Tarzan spoke again in a deep, ominous voice. "Lower your spears! Obey me, or the ghost of Woora will claim a terrible vengeance!" Lord Tolpred. He couldn't let this fellow get away with the precious emerald. Suddenly he cried: "The man lies. Kill him!"

TORONTO STOCK EXCHANGE

Toronto, Sept. 20 (CP) — Base Metal stocks dropped with a dull thud on the Toronto Stock Exchange and other groups fell in behind to record sizeable losses. Miscellaneous mines registered a new low mark for the year, chiefly on the weakness in the Base Metal shares and other industries were down. A couple of attempts to rally met with practically no success and the close was around the day's low level. About 25 stocks sold at new low prices for the year.

Losses of a point to 3¼ points were registered by Noranda, International Nickel, Consolidated Smelters and Hudson Bay and Falconbridge sold at a low of $6.70, off about 80 cents for the day. Sherritt also hit a new low but recovered slightly before the close. Pend Oreille, Sherritt and Base Amulet lost 25 to 30 cents each. Eldorado was sold actively and the price was off 10 to 20 cents for the session.

The senior golds led the retreat. Lake Shore, Kerr and McIntyre dropping 1 to 1¼ points each and losses of 10 to 20 cents were boarded for Pickle Crow, Sisco, Central Patricia, Mining Corporation, Oro Plata, Preston East Dome and Malartic. Among the cheaper golds to decline were Dalhousie, Fanmour, Lamaque, Cadillac, Preston, Slave Lake, Uchi and Red Lake.

All industrial groups were off. Losses of a point or more came out for Canadian Bread, Preferred, Canada Hersey, Pressed Metals, Dominion Bridge, Massey Harris, Preferred, Bathurst Power A, Abitibi Preferred, Great Lakes Paper Preferred, Canada Cement and Waltham Common.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, Sept. 20 (AP)—Belated buying support, while initially mild, developed a sharp lasting tide in today's Stock Market and early declines of 1 to 3 points in prime issues were a few of 3 or so—were halved in many cases near the 2 p.m. hour.

Recovery intervals were slow. Steels were in supply throughout, along with coppers. Carriers contested the trend. Transfers were about 3,700,000 shares.

Board Room Gossip

As compiled by Bigger and Crawford by P. Harold Barrett.

The sharp setback of the past two weeks, which resulted in the loss of the effect of eliminating a large number of marginal trading accounts with the result that while stocks are in better technical shape some of the gambling pep appears to have disappeared. Any reaction from prevailing levels, however, is not expected to bring out anywhere near as much liquidation as developed a week or so ago.

A moderate slowing up of business should cause no undue concern as the readjustment in the commodities which started in the fall of 1923 would in time bring about another boom with its many consequences, particularly another depression. Consequently, a moderate recession in business, enabling industry to consolidate its position, is, for the long term, more constructive than an uninterrupted recovery.

A pull known local banker, in an informal discussion with Financial Service, expressed himself as entirely satisfied with the trend of Canadian business and believed that the recent break in the market was not due to any nervousness over the domestic business prospects.

Noranda Looks Attractive.

With no securities ranking ahead of the common stock and with ample cash items, Noranda seemingly offers good value among the leading copper producers. The shareholders have received a dividend of $1.75 a share so far this year and the indications are that even a higher dividend may be declared payable in December next. The total for the year may run as high as $4.00 per share.

Russia-to-United States flight, the Wilkins plane landed on a lake near Aklavik at 11.50 a.m. E.D.T. Sunday.

At 7.50 p.m. the Soviet Embassy at Washington and Stefansson received word from the Aklavik radio station that Sir Hubert had reported Wilkins' flight from the Lake in an effort to reach Aklavik. Ten minutes later, according to the word from the Aklavik station, the plane's radio "faded to nil".

Aklavik Has Radio

Aklavik reported there was no flying ceiling at the time. It was snowing and freezing.

Four men have been flying with Sir Hubert, the pilot, two of Canada's best known airmen, are Air Commodore Herbert Hollick-Kenyon, owner of Toronto, and Al Cheesman of Port Arthur, Ont. Ray Dahl, navigator, New York, and Gerald Brown, mechanic, also New York, completed the personnel.

Stefansson said he believes the poor conditions had caused Sir Hubert to land the plane a couple times on foot of the lakes during the flight as well clearer weather.

Failure to communicate his whereabouts to the Aklavik station was not considered serious there at all times since the sweeping search got underway Aklavik has been without word of the Wilkins' plane, which in such distance the station at Coppermine, some 400 miles away, usually picked up the planes' signals.

While Stefanson emphasized no fear was felt for the safety of the search party, the veteran Manitoba-born explorer took steps to organize a hunt for Sir Hubert and the others if such a course later became necessary.

He requested Superintendents S. T. Wood of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police at Ottawa to ask the "Mounties" Inspector at RESOLUTE his opinion of what has happened, what is being done, what help might be sent from outside if needed."

Reserve Plane Ready

Stefansson communicated with the Mackenzie Air Service headquarters at Edmonton and learned that the Reserve plane used by Intrepid Bob Randall at Yellowknife, available to search if necessary. Yellowknife, on the northern shore of great Slave Lake, in the Northwest Territories, is approximately 800 miles from Aklavik.

In addition the Russian flier, Grazdanky, has an Amphibian plane at Point Barrow, 1,000 miles from the Lake.

With the end of the unsuccessful hunt for the prolonged search for the missing Russians, Sir Hubert was believed to have ended at least the second leg of the hunt.

THREAT AT NANKING TAKEN UP AT GENEVA

Committee to Seek Ways To End War in Orient, Weigh Chinese Charges

Possibility of League Nations Aiding China May be Dealt With

'PEACE OF WORLD'

Stanley Bruce Proposes Immediate Consideration

Geneva, Sept. 21 (AP)—A League of Nations Committee, endowed with broad powers, met today to weigh Chinese charges of aggression by Japan, to consider ways of ending League nations aiding China and to seek some means by which the Far Eastern conflict may be ended.

The committee was delegated, under Article III of the League Covenant, to deal with any matter affecting the peace of the world".

Japanese Warning.

The committee is expected first to concentrate upon Japan's warning she will demolish Nanking from the air and her demand that foreign diplomats and their nationals withdraw from the city. League officials remarked that this was the first time since Japan has not formally declared war against China.

There were some who felt the committee should recommend that the League invoke Furnish China diplomatic support, supplies, to enable her better to defend herself against Japanese incursions.

This, however, League officials admitted, might invite even more difficult relations with Japan, which withdrew from the League in protest against League findings that Japan was responsible for starting the conflict that led to her conquest of Manchuria.

Stanley Bruce, British representative of the United Kingdom, told the League of Nations Assembly today that the hostilities in the Far East demanded immediate and explicit consideration by the League.

He recommended strengthening of Articles X, XI, and XVII of the League Covenant and the calling of a conference of the powers most vitally concerned in the Far East.

The purpose of such a conference, he said, would be to bring about some settlement of the dispute or take "such measures as may be necessary and practicable."

Article X of the Covenant.

(Article X of the League Covenant provides that the League Council shall advise on means to be taken against aggression involving any member of the League; Article XI declares any war or threat of war affecting any member of the League is a matter of concern to the whole League; Article XVII deals with disputes between members and non-members of the League.)

The committee is expected first to concentrate upon Japan's warning she will demolish Nanking from the air and her demand that foreign diplomats and their nationals withdraw from the city. League officials remarked that this was the first time since Japan has not formally declared war against China.

There were some who felt the committee should recommend that the League invoke Furnish China diplomatic support, supplies, to enable her better to defend herself against Japanese incursions.

This, however, League officials admitted, might invite even more difficult relations with Japan, which withdrew from the League in protest against League findings that Japan was responsible for starting the conflict that led to her conquest of Manchuria.

Anti-Communism Crusades Scored by Litvinoff

Calls on League Council To Call Spade a Spade In Dealing with Powers

Crusades Termed Only Excuses For Invasion of Other States

SPARE NO ENERGIES

Says Neither War in Spain or China is Justified

Geneva, Sept. 21.—(AP)—Maxim Litvinoff, Communist Russia's Foreign Commissar, attacked the anti-Communist crusades of Germany, Italy and Japan before the League of Nations Assembly today, terming them only pretexts for invasion of other states and breaches of international treaties.

He called on the Assembly to "call a spade a spade and aggression aggression," a new slogan it decorates itself with.

Referring to the three anti-Communist Powers, Litvinoff declared:

"They are unashamedly striving for the near yet distant people they proclaim their mission to be the freeing of their peoples from Communism.

"They carry out their self-appointed mission of conferring great blessings on other nations. They are ready to open the entrails and resources of their own people, they are ready to sacrifice the elementary most elementary material requirements and leave it on hunger rations only to have sufficient arms to root out Communism in other countries."

Signifies Yearning

Anti-Communism, Litvinoff asserted, often "signifies a yearning for tin, zinc, mercury and other materials" and "a desire to deprive of the present wars—Spain' or China—could be justified as anti-Communist crusades.

"We frequently hear that all democratic parliaments, governments are on the eve of Bolshevization," he said. "It is not far from this to the assertion that it is necessary to confer the same blessing on them by arms from the same doctrine by which they are threatened, as in the case of Spain, by means of armed interference and attack."

Italy and Germany have aided with the insurrect cause in Spain with the avowed aim of preventing the "Bolshevization" of the Iberian Peninsula, Japan's invasion of China is explained in Tokyo as an effort to suppress anti-Japanism and Communistic influences.

HELD FOR MURDER GEN. H. DENHARDT SHOT ON STREET

Three Brothers of Dead Woman Admit Firing Shots

SEVERAL SHOTS FIRED

Denhardt at First Trial Contended Woman Killed Self

Shelbyville, Ky., Sept. 21 (AP)—Gen. Henry H. Denhardt, dies to go on trial again today on charges of murdering his wife, who was shot to death here last night.

The three brothers of Mrs. Jane Clay Taylor, whom the 51-year-old former Lieutenant-Governor of Kentucky was divorced in May after suit, surrendered after the shooting which occurred on the main street of this small tobacco town.

They were jailed without formal charges being filed against them.

Denhardt, "stormy petrel" of Kentucky politics, who had suffered three wives and had been wounded in a political controversy here Saturday night, died of several bullet wounds.

Patrolman Jack Tracey said Roy Carr admitted firing the fatal shots. He was indicted along with his brothers, Dr. K. S. Carr and Jack Carr.

Admit Shooting

Tracey said Roy Carr said, "I did it" as he turned over a .45 calibre revolver with two shells discharged.

The patrolman said he took a .38 calibre revolver from Dr. Carr and a shotgun from Jack Carr. Neither Jack Carr or Denhardt were armed.

The killing occurred after Denhardt and one of his attorneys, Rodes K. Myers of Bowling Green, had ended a conference regarding the scheduled trial.

Myers, who was with Denhardt, said the firing began at the start and fell near Todd street entrance.

"When I told General Denhardt 'There are the Carr boys,' Denhardt ran toward the hotel and I ran toward the car directly in the first two shots missed. Another struck the general in the back and a third fell near Todd street entrance."

Myers said Roy Carr shouted, "I got him" as he walked by his sister and I am going to kill you."

Denhardt then approached him Myers said.

Pleaded for Wife

He said he raised his hands and pleaded, "Please don't shoot me. I haven't done anything to you."

"You are the one who defended the woman who shot me" he said his attorney quoted the brother as shouting.

Mrs. Taylor was shot to death last November during an automobile ride with the general.

Denhardt contended the vivacious widow, 30 years his junior, ended her own life because of her family's objections to her marriage to the 51-year-old general.

However, the State claimed the General murdered Mrs. Taylor because of two daughters because she refused to marry him.

The trial here ended in a jury stalemate—a reported 7 to 5 for conviction—after a hung jury for $25,000 bond.

Denhardt, who had seen service in the Spanish-American, Mexican and Great Wars, was associated with his brother in publishing a newspaper at Bowling Green.

CHILD'S DEATH AN ACCIDENT JURY'S VERDICT

Driver of Car Tells of Precaution Taken Before Accident

Accidental death the result of injuries received when he was accidentally struck by a south bound motor car, driven by Mrs. John Rose, was the substance of the verdict returned by the Coroner's jury at the adjourned inquest held before Deputy Coroner Dr. J. J. Robertson in the Police Court rooms last evening touching into the death of little Arthur Wallace Munroe, five-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Munroe, Belleville, who died following an accident on Station street when struck down by the day after riding his scooter in front of a motor car.

The only eye witness of the accident, Miss Bernice Latone, a neighbor of the Munroe family, was the first witness called by R. O. Donahue, K.C., Crown Attorney, who conducted the investigation last night. Miss Latone told of talking with the little Munroe lad in front of his home and "I was sitting on the verandah when Arthur came up and was standing on his scooter and ride away. The next thing I knew I saw him on his scooter and ride away. The next thing I knew I saw him on his scooter and ride away. The next thing I knew I saw the boy lying on the pavement. I ran to him and picked him up on the other side of the street," stated Miss Latone.

Herbert S. Alderman, Adjutant of the Salvation Army, who was driving in the wake of Mrs. Rose's car, also stated he saw an object on the road and was not sure just what it was. "I saw this object and it looked like a bundle of clothes, but I slowed down and soon realized it was a child. I got out of my car and assisted to find out what Dr. Walters arrived," stated Alderman.

Precaution Taken

Mrs. John Rose, driver of the car to have struck the child, stated she was travelling at a moderate rate of speed. "As I approached I saw a child along the side of the curb. As I drove along in front of him, he seemed to suddenly turn his scooter to the left and directly into the path of my car. I swerved sharply to the left and tried to avoid striking him, but my right front fender struck him and knocked him down. I brought my car to a stop after driving on the east side of the street as rapidly as I could and immediately returned to the scene of the accident. I did everything in my power to avoid striking the child, but he darted out turning out into the centre of the road," Mrs. Rose stated. Continued she said Mrs. Rose as she showed outward emotional feelings.

John Bone, who was riding with his wife, corroborated the former's testimony, as did Constable Clifford Doug Ellis, who gave measured distances between the point of impact and intimated that undoubtedly all precautionary methods had been taken by Mrs. Rose to avoid the child.

Crown Attorney R. O. Donahue in his dismissing address said the case was accidental in his opinion. "I do not consider there are any elements in arriving at a verdict of accidental death. The cause of death, a fractured skull was admitted in evidence by Dr. C. A. Walters at the preliminary hearing.

The coroner's jury, empanelled by Sergeant Arthur Brooks, consisted of George Finch, Sidney Bowerman, Dougmage, Russell Wotten, Leighton Wilson, Harry Abbott, Albert Everett Smith and Wilbur Fox.

Edmonton, Sept. 21 (CP) — Six Soviet airmen, lost in the Arctic while attempting a flight across the North Pole from Moscow to the United States, have given proof of the character of survival today—provided they had not crashed—by men who have lived among the ice floes and conditions prevailing north of the Arctic Circle.

From Grant McConachie, head of a commercial air line operating from Edmonton to Aklavik in the North Territories, came the assertion Pilot Gromov and his companions had a good chance "could even live for a couple of years if they had not been killed in a crash." He scouted that possibility.

"A blank cheque" was given the department by the government to fight the disease, the Minister told a Cobourg audience. "At a time like this we don't think in terms of dollars," said Mr. Faulkner.

TIMBER POLICY FOR NORTH ONT. CLEARLY DEFINED

Hepburn Claims Migration of Newsprint Industry Prevented

LEGISLATION OPPOSED

Unemployment Eliminated in North Premier States of Colcourg

(By CP Staff Writer)

Cobourg, Ont., Sept. 21.—(CP)—Prompt and aggressive action by the Liberal Administration at Queen's Park prevented the migration of the newsprint industry from Northern Ontario to the Southern States, Premier Mitchell Hepburn told a campaign meeting here last night.

Elaborating on the Government's timber policy before a Liberal rally, Mr. Hepburn said Union members had halted a trend by the industry towards the South after which legislation was made possible, the manufacture of newsprint from southern pulp.

When the Liberals came into office in 1934, he said, large areas of Crown Lands had been granted to friends of former Conservative governments, who were holding them for speculative purposes. They were determined to keep the iron and paper manufacturers.

As the feasibility of making paper from hardwood pulp was now demonstrated manufacturers started building mills in the south and on one year $64,000,000 was invested in mills in the south.

Conservatives Opposed

The Government introduced legislation to reclaim the alienated timber lands for the Crown and it was fought "to the last ditch" by Conservatives, Mr. Hepburn declared he said.

When the timber areas were reclaimed, the Government was able to bargain with pulp and paper manufacturers and to lease these interests cutting rights on Crown territory in return for a guarantee to erect mills and guaranteed continuity of operation.

As a result twelve new mills were under construction or projected in Northern Ontario with a total investment of $50,000,000.

The Government's action, he said, brought concerns listed of status nation to Northern Ontario. Whereas "Bolshevism" was the cry in the Peninsula, Japan's invasion of China is explained in Tokyo as an effort to suppress anti-Japanism and Communistic influences.

Italy previously had refused to join the patrol, set up by nine powers at Nyon, because she was offered only a comparatively minor role as guardian over the Tyrrhenian Sea just off her coast.

9 PLEAD GUILTY TO NON-PAYMENT CITY POLL TAX

Delinquents Given Until October 12th to Make Payments

ASK FOR WARRANTS

The annual trek of poll tax delinquents in the city of Belleville was opened today when nine local youths appeared before his worship, Magistrate K. J. Butler, and charged with the refusal or negligence of the payment of their 1937 poll tax for the Corporation of the City of Belleville. The entire number appearing in the court pleaded guilty as charged.

"All of you are liable to this tax and now you must pay the costs of the court as well, which amounts to $5.75 in all. The court will give you until October 12 to pay your tax to the court clerk or in default of distress each one not meeting this obligation before that date will serve seven days in the common jail with no alternative", was the sentence imposed by his worship.

A. B. Collins, K.C., city solicitor, prosecuted the cases presented, while G. E. Ketchenon, city assessor, furnished the names of the alleged delinquents. In the list of 9 men in Belleville eligible for the city poll tax, who had failed to meet their obligation, but today's court proved that fully fifty per cent of these delinquents had their poll tax cards being summonsed into police court. These informations were withdrawn. Seventeen names were called before the court this morning charging the accused men with the failure of meeting their poll tax, only nine were present. Only in these cases the court, asked for distress warrants in the remaining eight cases, the nine to appear as pleaded guilty to charged.

One of the delinquents today stated he would be unable to meet the obligation as he was unemployed. "I know this man. He wouldn't work if he had a job," interrupted Chief Hall. Another youth appeared and bobbled to the docket on a pair of crutches. "I can't work in a while as I have an injured foot, but I may be able to pay it in two weeks' time," he said. A third stated he had been married last May.

"How does that affect this young man?" asked his worship.

"He got married and our assessment roll was completed and is eligible for the tax," pointed out the city solicitor. Those who failed to appear in today's court will receive summons to appear on the above charges at a later date.

Eggs, meat and articles of foodstuff from the kitchen pantry were stolen, while a complete set of single harness, horse collars, a set of carpenter's tools and other small articles of farm use were carried away also the result of mental worries.

The speaker stated the ideal life would be to adopt a high standard of living and by honesty to attain it. "Live normally and face life. Adjust yourself to some definite high standard and I know no better way than through the "Y", where facilities in programs of activity are provided to lift one's ideals, in thought, body and mind," concluded Mr. Harding.

Mr. Harding was introduced by J. S. Sheppard, secretary of the Y.M.C.A. and thanked by President Jack Wilson of the local Y's Men's Club for his enlightened talk. During the evening Mr. Fred Hicken, newly-appointed physical director of the "Y", was welcomed to the club while Y's Man Alex Gordon rendered a delightful piano solo.

RICHARD CLARE DIES OF INJURIES

Struck by Car Near Deseronto on August 27th Last

Richard Clare, 52, a transient, who was struck by a motor car near Deseronto on August 27th and who was a patient at the Belleville General Hospital since that date, died at that institution early this Tuesday morning, Sept. 21st. In the accident he sustained fractured arm and internal injuries which resulted in his death. At the time of admittance to hospital he gave his home address as Toronto.

Relatives of the man are being sought and an inquest will be held on Wednesday.

MENTAL HEALTH SUBJECT OF TALK

Merle Harding of "Y" Council Speaks to Y's Men

"Physical education in the development of mental health" was minutely dealt with by Merle Harding, of the National Council of the Y.M.C.A. and secretary of the physical education of the association, when addressing the Belleville Y's Men's Club at their inaugural supper meeting held at the "Y" last evening.

"There are numerous phases of physical education, primarily, bodily, social and mental. Of these three I will speak on the latter," said Mr. Harding in introduction. "You all know of mental hygiene and its benefits, they are all applicable to mental education. There are two kinds of mental disease — one the breaking down of the mental cells and the other branch is of the realm of functional disorders, the result of nerves not functioning properly. This latter state is not hereditary, as is generally supposed, rather the result of a nervous condition of a family," said Mr. Harding.

In speaking of one's habits which Mr. Harding attributed one of the causes of mental disease Mr. Harding said, "There are two main ways in which people develop bad habits, which may lead to mental disorders, and they usually start early in life. The first style is the behaviour of a child, who wants anything and cries for it. This becomes under the category of the spoiled brat and grows on the child until that complex is developed beyond control. Then the second style is created through fear, another big cause of some obstacle. It may be that the child is overshadowed by the child and grows upon it," stated Mr. Harding. Numerous cases of personal incidents he had contacted as living examples of persons who developed mental disorders through these channels.

Various Angles.

"There are other angles such as the posters, the sulkers and such. These kinds usually drift themselves into a state of illusions some through what is termed as 'wishful thinking', until the subject actually believes his previous desires," added Mr. Harding as he favored loss of memory also the result of mental worries.

He would be subject to a high standard of living and by honesty to attain it. "Live normally and face life. Adjust yourself to some definite high standard and I know no better way than through the "Y", where facilities in programs of activity are provided to lift one's ideals, in thought, body and mind," concluded Mr. Harding.

Mr. Harding was introduced by J. S. Sheppard, secretary of the Y.M.C.A. and thanked by President Jack Wilson of the local Y's Men's Club for his enlightened talk. During the evening Mr. Fred Hicken, newly-appointed physical director of the "Y", was welcomed to the club while Y's Man Alex Gordon rendered a delightful piano solo.

HEALTH OF BABY BOOKLET THEME

Valuable Information Issued by Department of Health

"The Baby" is the title of a handsome booklet just released by the Department of Health of Ontario, sponsored by the Honourable J. A. Faulkner, Minister. The purpose of the book is to extend limited counsel to mothers on the care and keep of children, daily diet, etc. The book is handsomely printed and illustrated throughout and features the care and treatment of the child from conception of Callander, besides giving many valuable hints and directions as to the health of the child from infancy also pre-natal advice. This edition of "The Baby" consists of 50,000 copies and may be obtained therefore from the local Medical Officer of Health, or the family physician.

In a foreword in the book entitled "A Message to the People of Ontario," the Honourable Dr. Faulkner speaks as follows:

"The health of infants and young children is of paramount interest not only to the parents but also to the state. The value of organized effort has been adequately demonstrated in this field. The consistently falling death rate among children under one year of age is a manifestation of what can be done by the education of the intelligent people and the required medical supervision of such children. No better illustration of what is possible could be given. The consistent application of preventive principles will do more for more than the successful rearing of the healthy quintuplets. This outstanding achievement is the result of the twenty-four-hour-a-day practice of little things in child hygiene, sound feeding, avoidance of infection, which can be sufficiently helpful to all those interested in the welfare of children to justify its preparation and distribution."

Young Women Needed To Take Course in Home Training

Young women of the city and district will be recruited within the next few days for the courses in Home Training which are being arranged under the Dominion-Provincial Youths Training Program, according to an announcement received by the local Employment Office today.

"Arrangements will be made for the transportation of applicants to the centres where the courses are being held," the communication states, and the selection in recruiting the young women is essential as the Department of Welfare is prepared to inaugurate the training program within the next few days."

Application forms and further information regarding the program will be available at the local Employment Office within the next few days, officials stated.

Jews Observe Period Of Thanksgiving

Jewish brethren of the city, in a mood distinctly different from that adopted during the high solemnity of the holy day just ended are this week observing the period of Harvest and Thanksgiving, known in the Hebrew calendar as Sukkos or Tabernacle. This period will be observed for eight days amid an atmosphere of Autumn fruits and foliage in the local Synagogue as it began on Sunday and will continue for the eight-day period.

Prominent in the ceremonial objects of this holiday are the "four species", the palm branch, the sprig of myrtle, the willow bough and the citron. The eight days of the period are recognized in the three Synagogues as the occasion of the consecration services, or formally inducting younger members of the Orthodox faith into the religious school.

Signs Not Authorized Ordered Removed by City Council At First Session Fall Term

City Engineer Says 162 Erected Without Consent of Council

ROUTINE BUSINESS

Council Authorizes The Advertising of Certain Work to be Done

After the enjoyment of an extended summer holiday, the city fathers convened at the council chamber on Monday night for the first regular session of the fall term. Due to his candidature in the coming provincial election, Mayor R. D. Arnott was unable to be present and on motion of council Alderman T. V. Wills was named acting mayor for the meeting with A. B. Collins, K.C. city solicitor as clerk of the council due to the absence of J. Wilfrid Holmes. Those present were Aldermen Thompson, Clapp, Kendall, Lewis, Baldree, Harvey, Cushing, Barlow and Armstrong with Alderman Lewis as chairman of the committees of the whole. The proceedings were of short duration, council adjourning at the stroke of nine.

May Hold Vote.

Daylight saving for this city n—t year was the subject of a mild discussion when Alderman Kennedy introduced a motion to have a vote registered at the forthcoming municipal election on the advisability of having Daylight Saving in force for a certain period but with the proviso that the vote be taken on the municipal list and not the provincial list. The motion was finally drafted to read, "that the legal opinion of the city solicitor be obtained as to what list can be legally used," and there will be given the council at their next regular meeting and from the report a by-law will be drafted that will be submitted to the electorate.

Alderman Wills asked, when the recommendation was introduced, if the council could be more definitely instructed on what list would be used. "I am in favor of the provincial list being used," said the acting mayor. Alderman Kennedy was firm in his opinion that only the municipal list could be used legally. Alderman Lewis stated that the provincial list had been used in other cities and it was only fair that every voter should have a chance to express his opinion on this question. Alderman Armstrong informed the council that he believed an opinion was expressed about two years ago by the city solicitor, that only the municipal list could be used and although he was aware other cities had used the provincial list, it had been established the cities were wrong in their contention. The alderman was willing to wait for an opinion from the city solicitor as there was plenty of time to draft the by-law. Alderman Barlow was the member to propose submitting the question to the city solicitor and Alderman Kennedy was willing to refer the recommendation to embody that opinion.

Remove Signs.

All signs not authorized to be erected by city council must be removed according to a recommendation passed by the council. A letter from City Engineer Hepburn stated there were 162 signs ranging from seventeen inches square to 4 feet square that had been erected in the city without the consent of council and he inquired if he would take the matter up with the various firms whose signs were up. Alderman Armstrong asked if there was any change in the by-law passed a year ago that still required a by the erection of signs and the city solicitor informed the member that there was no change. Alderman Barlow, mover of the recommendation and Alderman Kennedy as his seconder, stated that one resident had been forced to remove a sign on his premises and "that the city engineer call for the removal of all signs not authorized by council". The recommendation was unanimously passed.

Construct Walks.

A number of sidewalks in different parts of the city may be constructed after the usual advertisements appear in the local paper as required by the Local Improvement Act. The amount of work recommended to be advertised amounted to $15,175 with the city's share being placed at $4,294, largest item being the construction of a sidewalk on west side of North Front street from the overhead bridge to the King George school. Most of this cost will have to be borne by the city. Alderman Wills asked the city solicitor if the city was bound to carry out the work after advertising same to be constructed and the city solicitor replied in the negative. Alderman Armstrong thought that some of the work could be done this fall before freeze up while in the spring the city could utilize the unemployed to complete the work.

"At the present time the condition of the sidewalks in certain parts of the city are in bad condition and if these parts are reconstructed, it possibly would prevent claims for accidents, that effect every ratepayer by the city," said Alderman Armstrong. The recommendation passed at the committee meeting to build the sidewalk on North Front Street passed the council without discussion and will be advertised with the remainder of the last. Any ratepayer wishing to appeal against any of the work will have his opportunity after the required advertising time has passed. Two sewer laterals on Dundas Street were ordered to be constructed providing the residents pay for the connecting sewers to these laterals.

Curbing Placed

Letters were received by the council respecting the damage to automobile fenders by some hydrants in different parts of the city and the council passed a recommendation to have curbing built around the hydrants to protect cars from this damage. The work will cost in the neighborhood of $40 and will not cause any obstruction on the streets. Work on side boiler at the Civic Hall was authorized, the cost not to exceed $26. Mr. Hawson has been retained as caretaker of the City Hall at a salary of $1,200 per year the same to take effect on September 31st. The motion to fix the salary was introduced by Alderman Armstrong, chairman of Market and City Property.

First Aid Classes

First aid classes for the personnel of the city and Police Department will be operated this coming season, these classes having been held last year and the members of each department obtained valuable information in the short course. The opening and direction of the classes rests with the Committee of which Alderman Barlow is the chairman. Letters were received by Aldermen T. V. Wills, J. W. Barlow, A. M. Kennedy and the City Solicitor from Belleville asking if the service the Swift Canadian Company relative to a request from that organization of obtaining additional fire fighting apparatus which at present forms part of Starling Street. This committee will report back to council.

Tourist Camp Praised

The efficiency and cleanliness of the City Tourist camp was commended upon in letters received by the council and read in open meeting. The caretaker of the camp was praised for his courtesy and the tidiness that is at present one of the best camps visited in a lengthy tour across this province. The letters were received from A letter from Rev. Bert Howard, Principal of Alma College requesting more lights on Highland Avenue from the college to the girls' residence on Highland Avenue was received with favor by the members and referred to the Property Light for their action and report. Rev. Mr. Howard stated in his letter, that street at the present time was not well lighted and the teachers, and girls utilize Highland Avenue at night are in this matter.

Committee Referred Back

A letter from the Public Utilities Commission relative to the overhead wires being turned back to the committee for further consideration. Alderman Barlow was not satisfied with the delay in turning this storehouse over to the city as he stated it was urgently needed as the contractor for the new bridge would require it for the supply before the cold weather set in. Alderman Barlow told his fellow members he believed there was plenty of time and the committee would not be justified in taking immediate attention as the next meeting of the committee Mayor Hall will take up the matter with the Commission, he being a member of that body.

Information concerning an assessment commission will be obtained from Dr. Britton in Toronto. Alderman Armstrong who introduced the recommendation stated the motion was only sent in order, that information could be secured on this form of obtaining assessment. He stated that he was informed the commission had acted successfully in municipalities. The motion was passed. There being no further business the council adjourned.

Trenton and District

Trenton, Sept. 20 (Special)—Despite adverse conditions, William Regent eliminated F. Nalah from the club championship events by covering the local golf course in good style yesterday. The contest was the second of the club's fall series, and Nugent will take on W. S. McClung in the next club test next week. The winner will fight it out with either Cox or Fee, who are also semi-finalists, and the championship laurels will be awarded the victor.

Second Will Chase

Friday morning's wild auto chase was the second within four years for Constables Frank Loso and Jack Taylor of the Trenton Police Department. And it was their first running gun fight. As you will probably remember the two young officers chased a stolen Toronto vehicle from Trenton to Belleville at break-neck speed along highway No. 2, to make numerous arrests. The vehicle unable to manoeuvre around Devil's Elbow entering Belleville crashed at the foot of the steep embankment. The driver escaped with minor injuries although the car was a complete wreck. Later he was sentenced to jail. During the car's chase Constable Taylor fired several shots in an attempt to stop the thief. But there were different circumstances to contend with on Friday morning, when Constable Loso fired three maiming shots at the escaping driver of the trio in the front seat replied with a volley of gun fire cut the tires in the window. Possibly the officers owe their lives to the shooter's poor eyesight or perhaps to the poor marksmanship on the part of the shooter.

Wrong Road Hunting

Fire Engineer Jesse Baker, his son Jesse Jr., and Havelock Boulter returned last week from a hunting trip to Dorset. They went with Trenton to the north east. Rainy weather prevailed the most of the staying as long as they anticipated but one deer, Mr. Boulter got his limit bore blue hills. According to Mr. Baker Senior, the birds are in splendid shape for this time of year, and they will be in excellent condition by the first of October when the duck shooting season opens here.

Public School Assured

In an address from the stage of the Capitol theatre one night late last week, Mayor H. R. Cory assured the hundreds present that a public school would be built in the town of Trenton whatever party was elected on October 6. "It doesn't matter, the way you vote a school will be erected to replace the College Public Institution," he said, "and $200,000 will be added to the estimates for an educational centre. He also informed his audience that $30,000 was in the estimates for a four roomed addition to the high school; the new building to be erected to the school technical training and domestic science courses. Mr. Cory pointed out that relief recipients were not being refused assistance in order to get votes for the Hepburn administration. He announced that the corporation were calling in their defaulted bond in the immediate future and paying cash for same.

Car Turns Over

When a car owned by Charles McKinnon of Trenton, turned over in a ditch east of here on highway No. 2, Saturday night. It was only slightly damaged. The driver escaped unhurt. Mr. John Wilbur stated the vehicle ran off the shoulder of the road and toppled over. The driver was returning from Belleville.

Two Youths Held

Local police took two Toronto youths to the cells yesterday after they walked into an open store on Front Street. Mr. Wills told authorities they had been on the road one week and had been as far west as Grimsby and were heading east. After a hearty meal the boys were questioned and given fatherly advice. Want of something to eat was the reason that the boys gave the police for entering the shop.

Stolen Car Picked Up

A stolen car reported taken from the city of Oakville was picked up by local police on Saturday. The vehicle was abandoned by the thief on Ontario Road in an undamaged condition. Yesterday Oakville authorities came to Trenton and took the auto back to Oakville.

C.N.I. Tag Day

Tagging all day Saturday and a portion of the night forty-five local high, public school, separate school boys and girls brought in approximately $150. for the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, when their task was completed. The receipts were a good deal higher than last year. The taggers worked in the rain part of the day but they didn't seem to mind the wet a particle. Each one was provided with a warm smile as a tag was hastily pinned on his or her lapel. At the R.C.A.F. station east of here four boy Scouts sold tags at the main entrance. The activities were conducted by R. H. Hunter secretary of the Blind Institute.

Rugby Maybe

Rugby may be played at the high school this fall it was announced by Miss Hadley boys' sport director of the Students' Council yesterday. A meeting probably in Belleville of the physical instructors of the Bay of Quinte high schools and collegiate will be called to discuss the rugby question in the near future Soccer was tried out by the local high school last year and although the players liked it the game was not a crowd pleaser.

W. R. MORTON, PUBLISHER

ONE HUNDRED YEARS

Back in 1837 there was a fair. History goes back to prove it. The one hundredth exhibition was held on Saturday. That fair is now centred at Shannonville, though the first agricultural society exhibition was held at Melrose. Running horse races were held from Melrose to Shannonville in later years.

Time today makes mighty changes. One has to look around on every hand in towns and cities to see them. They are marked on the farm too and on the highways and concessions.

It is a good thing in this world of change to find the spirit of the fair preserved, for it is one of the institutions best calculated to bring the changes and progress so necessary to any industry and especially to so vital an industry and institution as agriculture.

Shannonville, known for its fair for many years, shows no sign of letting go this institution. That it may never allow this fair to pass is for the welfare of the township and of the community in the immediate vicinity of Shannonville. Mr. H. K. Denyes, who is rich in ancient lore and records and is a true district historian, did not fail in his speech at the Shannonville fair to point with pride to the Indian Reservation which has its own annual fair and which has been of inestimable benefit to the cause of agriculture.

Through the hundred years since its institution the fair has engaged the labors and interests of many able people and women, whose names will not pass. Their spirits with the men and women of today and of the future guarantee a continuance of this Shannonville Fair as it looks forward to the next century of activity in the interests of the people of the district and the cause of farming.

BARRIE APPRECIATED

Elizabeth Bergner receives a bequest of ten thousand dollars for her work in the last drama of the playwright Sir James Matthew Barrie. She played the part of "The Boy David". She will not forget the inspiration of the man who produced some of the finest dramas in the last third of a century. To an artist of her stamp this gift is one of the finest tributes to her work.

Hamilton Spectator refers to the loyalty which marks the people of the stage and theatre, "a camaraderie which is superficially hidden from a public which sees only the glamor and the trappings of performance."

It is perhaps easy to understand this friendship for "yet behind the most glittering triumphs of the theatre are stories of bitter hardship, of heartbreaking setbacks and unending hard work. Theirs (the stage folk's) are lives within lives and the very artificiality of their place in the routine of humans in general makes mutual sympathy more intense."

Barrie knew the labors of hard work and the bitter experiences of life, though outwardly it was a financial success, for he left a very large estate. The deep sympathy for a fellow artist which created "the best performance ever given any play" of Barrie's in the playwright's opinion was a natural outpouring of the heart of the man who had created Peter Pan. By the way the model of Peter Pan, was not forgotten by Barrie in his last will and testament.

NO WAR, SAYS MOST OBSERVERS

There will be no general war for years, say some. There is danger of war in the near future, say others. The bulk of men who have opinion which should be based on knowledge would seem to lean towards the first. H. G. Wells, the noted writer, sees no sign of a major war for eight years yet.

Out of the hurly-burly of reports, rumors, facts and predictions comes a symposium of thoughts on peace and trade, given over the air by eight different leading statesmen in all parts of the world on Sunday. Secretary Cordell Hull hints at possible departure of the United States from the aloofness which has characterized that country so far as League of Nations questions are concerned. He sees no possibility of war.

Yesterday Anthony Eden stated that the factors for peace include improvement of trade relations, expansion of world trade and access to markets, Eden stating that Britain was ready to forward any action towards that betterment.

The burden of the opinion as said before leans strongly to maintenance of peace, even if the news is disconcerting every few days.

I WOULD BE TRUE

I would be true, for there are those that trust me;
I would be pure for there are those who care;
I would be strong for there is much to suffer;
I would be brave for there is much to dare;
I would be humble for I know my weakness;
I would be giving and forget the gift;
I would be friend to all—the foe, the friendless;
I would look up and laugh—and love—and lift.

"KING GEORGE" OF NEVADA, otherwise George Wingfield, is reported to be broke again, which is no new experience although he was reputed the richest man in Nevada at one time, and may be again. A six-foot cowboy at 21, he first came into prominence at Winnemucca, Nevada, when he borrowed $300 on a diamond ring from a local banker, set up a faro outfit at Tonopah, then a roaring mining town, also opening another at Goldfield in competition with Tex Rickard. At the time he speculated freely in low priced mining stocks. He struck it rich with the Mohawk mine which struck gold in quantity in 1906 and reached a value of $7,000,000 in seven months. Wingfield joined forces with the banker who had loaned him his stake on the diamond ring and together they cleaned up plenty on Goldfield Consolidated Mines Co., captitalized at $50,000,000, a merger of several properties, Wingfield's share of this was six million dollars, built up in less than a year from a $500 investment. At one time Wingfield owned twelve banks, a chain of gambling halls, many mines, a string of race horses, and two Reno hotels, the Riverside and Golden. He was the prince of grub-stakers and never turned away a prospector down on his luck. During the depression he financed through his several banks a number of rancher friends, and lost millions as a result. The drought of 1930-31 swept the foundations from this deal and the crash was terrific. Of over four million dollars loaned to ranchers the Wingfield banks got back less than $100,000. Depositors of $15,800,000 got back half. In 1935 "King George" went bankrupt, assets, $10,500, liabilities $3,000,000. Next heard from "King George" reappeared with his two Reno hotels in his fist, also a grubstake in a low grade mine of a half interest given by a friend. In 1906 Wingfield borrowed $1,000,000 from Bernard Baruch which he paid back with interest. Last week, broke again but on the verge of another successful mining coup it is rumored that Baruch again is financing him. What a quiet and peaceful life George Wingfield must have had.

A SCHOOL FOR MATURATES has been opened in Elgin, Illinois. Pupils must be 70 or over, and classes are held from 1.30 to 4 p.m. One of the first pupils enrolled was Mrs. Calista Fowler, 106 years old. Fifty students have already enrolled. The master mind behind the school is Dr. Charles Edward Sharp, aged 76, who came to the conclusion that the boredom of old age was deadly. Said he, "medicine can do little," an octogenarian is better off if he has something to occupy his mind, for says Dr. Sharp the body remains healthy while the mind becomes ill."

WAR IN CHINA HAS RAISED THE PRICE OF VARIOUS DRUGS, used extensively in this country. Rhubarb root rose to 65 cents a pound in the United States an increase of 200 per cent in three weeks. Ephedrine, (a nasal astringent) used in hay fever, shot up two hundred per cent to three dollars per ounce. Mandrake root rose to $4.25 a pound. Thus a war 5,500 miles away touched the pockets of folks here.

Harvest festivities are drawing near. Churches will mark the season with thanksgiving and chicken suppers and other functions, suitable to a season when the people feel that the result of their labors during the past growing season mean something and have done much to benefit themselves and others.

Little Benny's Note Book

I went around to the firehouse to see Mike Riley. They hooked a ladder driver and he was reading the sixteny section of last Sunday's paper, saying. Now me. I'm only just a simple unpretentious man, but that's the surest way to be. Did you ever meet anybody with a title, such as a lord or a fuhrer or sa?

No sir, I said, and Mr. Riley said, I did once, she lived in this very town. When she first went away she was pasin Sally Sloppers, but on her travels she married into nobility and when she came back she was Lady De La Folrol or some such a name, and of course that made her altogether diffrent. She bilt a mansion on top of a hill, and one day it caught on fire, and that was how I met Lady de La Folrol, she said.

O, did you have to rescue her? I said, and Mr. Riley said, Well, in the end we did. We went clattering up to the gates of the mansion in response to the alarm, and the gates were bolted-and there was a chap inside all covered with gold braid, and it seemed he was a footman, and he told us he was awfully sorry but he couldn't let us in without first announcing our name and business, so I told him the name was Riley and the business was putting out fires, so he goes away and 10 minutes later or so he comes back and announces that Lady de La Folrol's private secretary would receive us, and he flung open the gates and we rolled up the driveway and were met by a chap with a gold monocle in one eye and a waxed mustash about, and by the time that was ther, but believe me we took our with an English accent behind it, over one of the walls of the mantime, because we were good and and he insisted on me filling out a blue card in and Lady de La Folkind of an application stating what rol yelled for help just as if she'd I wanted to see Lady de La Folrol been Sally Sloppers, so we rescued Riley said.

Moaning good by.

ago, Mr. Brown, who has already indicated his choice as being known as the "farmer-candidate" stood out in direct contrast to the political orations given by his fellow speakers.

Willing to Assist

"I'm no politician," he sincerely admitted to the gathering. "I have no more idea of taking this job than anyone here. "I want to be known as just a simple farmer, who has indicated his choice of nominee for this office following repeated requests that I do so, in the hope of being of some use. For fifty-two years of hard work have taught me some indication of what man needs who earns his living in hard toil. That's all I can give you, just the experience and help of my many years," he declared.

"Equal privileges for all, but special privileges to none will be my motto throughout."

Questions, which were more lengthily explained by following speakers concerning the administration under Mitchell Hepburn were touched upon briefly by the East Hastings candidate.

Mr. Hepburn has done all he could," while in power. He has been handicapped by difficulties of which we know little. The return of but one mill from the assessment to the municipalities alone was quite a feat. It has been told that cut has been made up solely by returns from the new Income Tax. The rich owners of natural resources in Hastings County will not be able to make their millions from pulp and mineral property, five in some cases per cent when the cut is made. It will be shared alike from the government treasury on a basis of equality by the various municipalities.

"Next year also we have been told that the county rates will be reduced by some five mills—some say six—if Mr. Hepburn is returned.

Shown Increased Profit

Mitchell Hepburn has been able to show an increase in profits or practically every investment he took office. This is in direct contrast to the riotic management of those under the Henry Government, it was pointed out. Hepburn has even reduced by a $20,000 salary post to Gaby to a $15,000 job by "getting a better person but as efficient". The collection from estates has returned some $26,000,000 already because the law has been enforced. Lands and Forests commitments have increased $11,000,000 from a former losing proposition. "Doesn't this show good government?"

"I have no desire to go to Toronto, to start a dislike in the thought of it", declared Mr. Brown. "I simply offer my services in the belief I can help in good government. I've never been on a platform political in my life until a few days ago. But now I feel, that if you can trust me to give honest, conscientious assistance to the best of my knowledge and ability, I think I have a right to ask for your vote. It is not my election, it's your election", concluded Mr. Brown.

Dr. H. A. Boyce

As first speaker of the evening, Dr. H. A. Boyce, defeated by election candidate in the East Hastings riding some two years ago, opened the event with a chuckle.

"I'll never forget it. Though I got defeated at the time, I made new friends right here on College Hill. And I learned just how well-born my old friends, politically speaking, could be. I've been fished, hunted and fished and lived with them for many years. To me, they actually with tears in their eyes told me that politics simply wasn't because they had been brought up Conservative and couldn't change.

"It's just the same old red rosette dressed up with another tall feather, the kind of wing.

"Mr. Brown here will make you a real candidate will give you a real service in Toronto, when he's elected on the sixth."

The Hon. Harry Nixon was painted by Dr. Boyce as leader with a crowd who if elected will have that same gang right back where they were before the Henry defeat, he said, in the speaker's opinion "should be a severely criticized for giving out such ridiculous statements on the finances of the Province, stating ments and figures that not even his followers could keep track of or understand."

C. A. Cameron M.P.

Mr. Chas. Cameron, M.P. declared the vote which elected Mr. King his government to office the last time was "a great mandate which left no doubt in the mind of the people just who they wanted to." "Since then their belief in his choice has been wholly justified," that give the C.C.F., plenty of encouragement to come into Canada's if you want your country kept safe, return Mr. Hepburn to power."

Mr. Brown was referred to by Mr. Cameron as "the best candidate for East Hastings that could have been picked." "But he'll have to have your votes and help to win office," he concluded.

Reeve Georgs Jordan

Reeve Geo. Jordan of Hungerford, read lengthy figures from a list which showed that direct savings had been made the county by Mr. Hepburn's administration. He offered tribute to Mr. Brown and expressed the regret only that the people further south in the county did not know him as well as those of the north. In spite of the fact that charges had been made no road building was going on in the Province, the Reeve asserted figures showed that more money was being spent on roads in 1937 than in 1934 and no cost was levied on the township.

W. J. Smith, Trenton, Kerr owner and the leading local speaker of the evening, covered every act of the administration, tackling the C.C.F. question, the Hydro Power and characteristic manner and with a humorous touch, but not unduly interrupting from time to time.

"I think the many good pieces of legislation by Mr. Hepburn since he took office, need no defence. No doubt in the mind of any clear thinking person that the present day as one of the greatest statesmen, not only in Canada, but throughout and beyond, he is giving you a chance to put him back in and let him finish the job. Mr. Hepburn is for no short a time ever brought to the Province of Ontario as he turned a surplus of nine millions.

The farming problem, one of the greatest in Dominion, one, but close unity was being experienced in the industrial centres, was also being worked rapidly to a solution, the speaker declared, to the satisfaction. Mr. Hepburn has promised direct action on farm relief, the question of the present campaign, the matter of Committee of Industry organization.

the Conservative candidate for the riding of West Hastings, Richard Arnott. The Barcaadena Cyclopedia of Canada and Mr. Von Humphries, Toronto elocutionist, entertained the gathering between speeches.

"Mr. Hepburn claims the C.I.O. the Succession Duties, and the Power are the three main issues of the campaign," continued Mr. Chalies. "But he can't be serious, when he says this for he has already backstepped on the C.I.O. which is as dead as last year's birth nest. The real issue of this election is the people versus Hepburn. As for appealing from the people to the people Premier never had more power in his life than he has at the present time to go down Succession Duties and other issues."

"Can you take a man seriously when he asks for a mandate of the people after he has repudiated the courts of the province, crammed the Schools Act down the throats of his Cabinet, the Anti-Red Act and Separate School supporters, signed French-Canadian treaty against creed, province against province; insulted the Province of Ontario and flouted Mr. Mackenzie King. That type of man is dangerous to head the Ship of State, province of Ontario. His only forte is winning and he is a farce, when it comes to British parliamentary procedure.

Attacks Whole Administration

"Symbolical of what is happening in Toronto," said Mr. Challies in a spirited attack on the various phases of the present administration, "is the fact that in spite of the vaunted surplus of nine mills, the government there are more men on the payroll today than ever before. Mr. Hepburn forced one of the most efficient, most honest, best qualified government officials in Canada, discharged the Purchasing Agent of the Province, Mr. Ferguson, for parliaments who was getting a salary of $2,500 per year. He replaced him with Fred O'Connor, a brother of Senator Frank O'Connor at a salary of $4,000. Is that economy? Is that reduction? No, that is Faulkner and Hepburn economy.

Touching upon reformatories, the speaker declared that when he came in power it was costing $241½ cents per capita per inmate, and when we went out the cost was 36 cents and we had a lot less numbers. Mr. Hepburn is the first history of the reformatories of Ontario we had a riot, a disgraceful occurrence in the Guelph institution. Kicking out civil servants the Hepburn Government is making a political football of the reformatories, kicking out civil servants for ward-heelers."

"Hepburn challenged you at the East Hastings, by-election to vote upon the Succession Duties and you did not benefit the farmers," said the speaker referring to the Assessment Act. "Twelve years ago Hepburn repealed the Act and it is up to you to do your civil duty."

"This is not a religious issue, it is a question of the right of the province of Ontario to manage its own affairs and mind you burn is elected on Oct. 6th he will no reason why he should not amend the amendment and Keep Hepburn on this important question."

Must Control Liquor Sales

Charging that the Liquor Control Board of Ontario under Government sold Liquor for revenue only, the speaker declared that the people spent 72 millions for liquor in the last three years, "and the Province of Ontario afford that amount?" he asked From an economic point of view Liquor must be controlled," he said.

"The Conservative Government laid the foundation for the reduction in farmers hydro rates between 1924 and 1934," said Mr. Challies. "We built up a reserve of 107 millions but Mr. Hepburn's Ontario Hydro till for fifty-four millions, raised it in the Provincial Treasury and claimed he had reduced the Provincial debt by that amount. Hydro has no reserves today. The fact is that a secret order has been given for an increase of rates and the Premier knows that before the peak-load comes he will be forced to Parliament more power.

"The reason you have cheaper power today is not because of what Hepburn has done but because of good administrators before he came into power. The Hydro is run by one commissioner, and your municipalities have no representation. Why, because the government is afraid of what representation might disclose. If the public knew the exact truth regarding the Hydro there would not be enough Liberals left to take up a collection.

"Hepburn reduced wealth in nearly all phases of agriculture", charged Mr. Challies, "and his government will go down in history as one of the greatest "bill" governments of all time. Duncan Marshall's two bulls were a joke as far as the livestock breeders of the province were concerned, for they knew there were better bulls bred in Ontario than what he paid enormous amounts for."

Liberals Opposed Bonus Claim

"When the cheese bonus was moved in the House the Liberals opposed it," said the speaker, "for it was not the government policy to give bonuses. But they bounced Sir James Dunn, two cents on steel, at the Soo. If they bonus steel, why not the farmers products? Mr. Brown will see that the Ontario farmer will place this produce in the British market, that show window of the Empire".

"The present Government scheme of the present government is a joke", Mr. Challies asserted. I have never seen so many men leaning on shovels on the main highways, while the farmers in the back concessions in up to the hubs in mud. And how many Conservatives are getting work? None I tell you. If you want a job you must first get an order from a two-bander. It maintains that when any government is spending the money of the province, need does not mean the creation of work and not political allegiance.

"Why is Hepburn going to the country with a government holding seventy seats out of ninety, after three sessions of Parliament", asked Mr. Howard Graham, ex-Mayor of Trenton and President of the Trenton Conservative Association?

"Simply because of the Big Bad C.I.O. wolf, for mandates to elect Conservatives, and for his power politics, he says, but the real reason is that he knows his own followers are dissatisfied with him. His Cabinet is broken and shattered and his Premiership is in shambles in cancelling Hydro contracts. If he had been returned two years he knows what price he will have to pay for power. The Province reduction is just as much an election bribe as is the reduction of automobile licences. Mr. Hepburn is the Premier who has offended every class and creed in the province. He not only betrayed the farmer with his broken cold storage promises but he put the Separate Schools on the map, by statutes, an issue that raised an abomination of distrust between the two great religious groups. He offended the Protestants of the country by his remarks on the payment of British war debts and now he has offended labor by dictating to them what organizations they shall join."

Cited Instances

"Some farmers are said to be supporting Hepburn because they have no use for organized Labor", declared Mr. Graham. "Then I can put take instances as we have in Trenton where farmers who are supporting families are getting only ten and twelve dollars a week you will easily understand why they cannot afford to pay the prices the farmer wants for his products. When the city people are employed and getting a decent wage, then the farmer too will benefit."

"If Hepburn can dictate to every municipality, where will we be? Where will he stop? I am confident of the outcome of this election because the people are fed up, their feelings have been injured and they will show their disapproval. Even ministers of the gospel have been muzzled.

"That is the man the Hepburn Government has whipped into line to support the Separate Schools Act will support," concluded Mr. Graham.

"I have a great respect for our Conservative leader, Mr. Hepburn" Mayor Richard Arnott, Conservative candidate, stated in eulogy to the Premier. "The primary reason for the election has been made up their minds to change the administration in Toronto, and tonight on the eve of the election, I ask you good people to think of that trail of broken promises made by the Drew Government, some of the promises made in this riding in 1934 you can point record to judge Hepburn on, and were carried away by the glowing pictures he painted. You are the jury sitting in judgment. Does Hepburn warrant your vote for another five years?

"You got reductions on automobiles, amusement tax and hydro services certainly but look at the other side of the picture," said Mr. Arnott.

"Your taxes were increased over forty million dollars; the provincial debt has increased over forty-two millions and they took millions out of the hydro fund to balance the budget. The pre-election work will cost twenty millions of dollars. Of the money collected from auto fees only one fifth goes into highway construction. The north country people are crying for roads but the tax goes into the Consolidated fund. Now lets come out with 'Vote for Hepburn and I will take five dollars off your auto licence fees. Is and this what the election is to be based on?"

"You are the judges and jury, think well before you prostitute the great heritage, your franchise."

Asks Premier to State Stand

Leader of the Separate School question, the speaker challenged Premier Hepburn to tell the province what his stand is on this important question. "He was defeated in East Hastings on this issue, and it will defeat him in Ontario in the coming election," Mr. Arnott. "He will never be forgotten for putting into politics something which never should have been there," concluded the candidate who received a tremendous ovation as he sat down.

"It is the biggest fight ever produced in Ontario," declared Mr. T. R. Ketcheson referring to the reference to automobile licence fees." Don't think Hepburn is giving you anything, the reduction must be made up somewhere and every man driving a car today will pay five dollars within the next twelve months," he said.

Mr. Arthur Burke acted as chairman for the evening.

WEESE—DAVIES

In a setting of ferns and autumn flowers, Olivia Rose, daughter of Mrs. Davies and the late A. E. Davies was married on Monday afternoon to Francis Unified Church, by Harold Blake Weese of Sudbury, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Weese of Belleville. Rev. D. T. MacCulloch was the officiating clergyman.

The charming bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Gordon Davies, entered the church to the strains of Mendelssohn's Wedding March, played by Mrs. M. F. Duff. Her gown was of bridal night blue chiffon velvet with matching hat and she carried a bouquet of Talisman roses. The bridesmaid, Miss Dorothea Newson, of Toronto, looked lovely in a gown of American Beauty chiffon velvet with hat to match and carried a bouquet of Tea roses. Gordon Davies was the groomsman, and the ushers were Mr. Harold Rollings, Toronto, and Mr. Victor Knudsen of Belleville. Miss Florence Barber sang very sweetly "I Love You Truly", during the signing of the register.

After the ceremony a reception was held at Pictured Manor at Trenton, Mrs. Davies, mother of the bride, receiving in a gown of black chiffon velvet, black hat and veil and corsage of roses. The groom's mother, Mrs. Weese, wore brown crepe with matching accessories.

Your regularity in attendance has been an example to us all. We thank you from the depths of our heart for the help you have been and still are and wish you to know in the evening time of your lives that we greatly appreciate your presence with us and are loath to think that there may ever come a time when we shall be separated even for a little while here, but rejoice in the hope of a life that has its source in the death and resurrection of Jesus Christ, our common Lord and Master.

Signed on behalf of the whole congregation.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, Sept. 21.—(AP)—The stock market switched to its recovery route today and climbed 1 to 3 or more points.

The ticker tape, however, frequently came to a standstill after a fast opening. Top stocks were dropped down by profit-selling periods but most leaders snapped back without much difficulty and prices were not far under the best near the final hour. Transfers were about 1,500,000 shares.

TORONTO STOCK EXCHANGE CLOSE

Toronto, Sept. 21.—(CP)—Slightly trading marked the session on the Toronto Exchange and prices while they remained generally firm tone through the greater part of the session were inclined to slip a little in the final stage. The close was unchanged to slightly higher on the day. Volume was reduced to little better than 400,000 shares for the session.

Base metal shares bulged in the early action on news of support of the strongly entrenched rulings in London for the metals. Nickel and dealers added a point or two to their gains and Hudson Bay added fractions to a point. In the main half hour the gains were trimmed, leaving nickel with a net gain of about one point.

Senior golds were firm but slow and in the medium-price group the close was from 5 to 10 cents for Macassa. Sisco, Sylvanite, Teck Hughes, Wright Hargreaves, Central Patricia, Toburn, Premier and Perron.

The utilities were the strongest group of the industrials. Brazilian turned over in heavy volume at a gain of nearly a point and the close was up for Beauharnois, Montreal Power and the Canada Steamship Lines issues.

WILLIAM BARNES FACES 2 CHARGES

Arrested on Bench Warrant And Further Charged With Theft of Car

William Barnes, Niagara Falls, was arrested in that city yesterday on a warrant issued by Provincial Police Constable Ryan charging him with the theft of a tire, tube and rim, the property of Mr. E. Reckner, R.R. 4. Today Barnes was brought back to Belleville by Provincial authorities and a charge of theft of the theft of John Meagher's motor car was preferred against him. Mr. Barnes was arrested following a bench warrant issued by Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C., one week ago, Monday, when the accused, man failed to appear in court on a theft charge.

Provincial Constables McGrinn and Stark escorted Barnes back to Belleville today under guard. It is believed he will appear in court this afternoon.

Following the immediate release from custody, however, police allege that Barnes stole Mr. Meagher's car from the latter's premises in Marysville and returned to his native Niagara Falls, where he was apprehended on a bench warrant that was issued following his non-appearance in court. Barnes was remanded to the custody of the county jail until Friday.

'GOOD CHANCE YET'

bear, seal and marine life abound in the area and "offer a world of opportunity, in the opinion of R. W. (Wop) May, veteran northern pilot, could live a while" if they had landed safely.

"The Party is Give Up Hope"

Bob Randall, who spent two weeks searching for Starkey and Hubbard, is too sad to give up hope." He now is freighting supplies from Edmonton to Aklavik, N.W.T., one of the search bases. Nearly a dozen Russian, Canadian and United States fliers are engaged in combing the Beaufort Sea.

Three-in-one that the little party would be found alive was Vilhjalmur Stefansson's calling of the Russians' chances. The noted Arctic explorer, engaged in purchasing and forwarding supplies to Aklavik, said in New York recently a disabled plane would have a chance to land safely on the ice and live a while if they had landed safely.

Stefansson in his Arctic explorations and last reported down near Aklavik. He also was confident the men would be found when he said in Toronto August 20 before taking off with Air Commodore Herbert Hollick-Kenyon in a huge flying boat "I have not the slightest doubt that Starkey, Hubbard and his crew are still alive."

"They may be no more than I was on the ice when I was up there," Wilkins added. "It took me three weeks a little more than a week after I was long shot." In 1927 Wilkins, on an exploration flight, and his pilot, Ben Eielson, were forced down on an ice floe. They drifted 200 miles then walked 100 miles to shore and reached an Eskimo village.

Eielson was killed in a crash two years after on a flight from Seattle, Alaska, to the then trading post of Fairbanks.

Bodies of Nelson and his mechanic, Earl Borland were recovered from the wreckage of their plane in February, 1930, four months after the crash. The two had sought to bring the mail by the ice-bound Nanuk to Nome.

MOUNTING INTEREST IN THREE STAR SHOW SHOWN IN NEW YORK

By ALAN RANDAL

New York, Sept. 21 (CP)—Milo Jacobs chuckled through his 'boughton' molars today as an increased flow of greenbacks showed mounting interest in his tournament of champions, carded for Thursday night.

It is the most ambitious promotional venture Uncle Michael Strauss has yet undertaken in a ben-fighting way but from present indications the little fellow who gets up with the birds has nothing to worry about.

When his 3½ champions climb into the Polo Grounds ring there should be a greater crowd than greeted Jacobs' heavyweight title bout between Joe Louis and Tommy Farr last month.

Jacobs has Lou Ambers planking his lightweight crown on the line for Pedro Montanez of Puerto Rico to shoot at; Chicago's Barney Ross defending his welterweight title against the Filipino, Ceferino Garcia; and bantamweight king Sixto Escobar defending against the Baltimore lifter, Harry Jeffra.

The half a champion appears in Marcel Thil, held bumper from Paris who claims the European middleweight honors, Thil meets Fred Apostoli of San Francisco.

Ticket Sale Large.

"The ticket sale right now is large—larger than we had for Farr and Louis this much ahead of their bout," chortled Mike as the dollars and blotchwork passed each other at the ticket windows. "If the weather continues good we'll do all right. If she (the gate) passes $300,000 it would not surprise me."

It appeared the weather would be good, though perhaps on the coolish side, bearing out that those along fighters' row have held for some time that Michael Strauss Jacobs is endowed with considerable luck as well as native shrewdness.

Right now he finds boxing contracts that would choke a horse. He has the fight game tied tighter than a reef knot and is virtual czar of box fighting.

Amid the hustle and bustle of ticket selling, he admitted this himself, when he said to reporters: "Fire away and get to the point quickly, a czar has more to fiddle about."

Neither he has. A self-taught Jew from New York's west side Jacobs has been in and out of the chips three times. He has tried everything from selling newspapers to engaging in the steamboat business. Theatre, amusement parks, concessions and ticket scalping. He shone at the latter.

Sports Roundup

By EDDIE BRIETZ

New York, Sept. 21—(AP)—Friends of Rabbi Maranville all over baseball will be disappointed by the Cincinnati Club's announcement that Manager Bill Jacobs' successor will be a National Leaguer..... Don't bet that James J. Braddock and Max Baer will open Mike Jacobs' heavyweight elimination tournament..... Joe Gould hinted today he may not let Jim Light fight Joe Louis this year..... Two many good fighters have been ruined by a good gang over," said Gould, "and Joe Louis certainly gave Jim one..... I want to be 100 percent sure he is ready before I put him back in there.

We've been waiting all summer for this one, relayed by a Cleveland paper: "What the Indians need most is a couple of other Feller's.....Sammy Byrd, who quit baseball for golf last spring, is making it pay dividends..... He has finished in the money 11 times in 14 starts..... H. G. Salsinger, veteran sports editor of the Detroit News, nominated Ervin Fox of the Tigers as the most unappreciated ball player in the American League.

It looks like a hot fight winter in this town..... Jimmy Johnson promises plenty of fireworks the minute his new light club opens. Mike Jacobs' answer to the several blasts of the National Boxing Association is, "No what!"

Some time back it was mentioned here that the Giants were the only Major League club to boast two double players in Harry Danning and Phil Weintraub.....B.W.K. of Washington wants to know if the Senators don't lead with Sid Cohen, Buddy Myer and Fred Sington?

To what extent His Worship, Mayor Arnold, studied the art of punting the pig skin, during his sojourn at the University of Toronto, we are unable to state, but His Worship's football prowess will be on open look on Wednesday afternoon. The secret is, that Mayor Arnold has been invited to officially open the local rugby football season at the Exhibition Park when the Belleville Intermediate team of the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" to pry off the current O.R.F.U. Intermediate title will officially open the season by kicking off the first ball.

Tonight sees the final workout of the Panthers in preparation for tomorrow's game at Kingston with the Flyers. The Panthers' new uniforms arrived yesterday and were distributed to the men. It is rumored of the squad last night. The members are really snappy. The team is royal purple, while the neck, shoulders and a strip down each sleeve is gold. Coach Duffield hopes to have Mase Bigby and Dave Bradford set to strengthen his line or scrimmage tonight, then completing the squad for tomorrow.

Manager Frank Sedore's Point Anne "Cementmen" left early today for Orillia, where they meet the Orillia "Waggs" in the second game of the intermediate O.A.S.A. semi-finals. Skipper Sedore announced before leaving that in all probability Lorne Bateman, the Cementmen's ace fire-ball hurler, would pitch the Cementmen's playoff assignment with Stan 'Ding' Luffman in reserve, Don Thomas, of Belleville, has been named as the umpire in chief for the game.

Regardless as to whether or not the Oshawa O-Mens repeat and win their second consecutive senior O.B.A.A. title or not, the Motor City crew can thank two or three members of their team for the championship lofty place in the provincial baseball realm. In mid-season Frankie Osborne, the Oshawa club's shortstop, was stricken with illness and the perennial "Doc" Rowden was rushed in from the outfield to fill the gap. Rowden was hitting well at the time, but feared his batting powers would diminish when he was moved into the inner works, but such was not the case. Rowden kept batting the pellet with abandon and perhaps in leading the Motormen in batting. On Saturday Rowden had a single, triple and his circuit blow in the eighth won for Oshawa over Hamilton.

Aside from the splendid showing and leadership of Rowden who has doubtless been the spark plug of Oshawa, another pleasing surprise has been the hitting of Tommy Foley, erstwhile Peterboro fly-chaser. In the play-offs, while with Peterboro Foley was always a flop in the money series, but not so with Oshawa. As a matter of fact he has been the opposite, Foley has a mid-season slump, but came back in the O.B.A.A. playoffs to lead Oshawa's attack and plug the offense. We hope the Liftlock City moguls will not be peeved when the adult, we procured Foley his job on the docks, for the fact the Belleville Redmen played in Whitby last winter. Another standout for the Oshawa club for the past month has been Ken "Jake" Biddle, who went to the mound in six of the eight games the Oshawa crew played in the O.B.A.A. and then turned back Hamilton on Saturday. Biddle buried two great games in the Central League playoffs, once against the Petes and the other versus the Ponies.

"Pete" Beach, athletic instructor at the Albert College in 1935-36, returned to his old love over the week end and will direct the sports programmes at Albert College this season. Pete dropped in on us today to say hello. "Well athletics look to be on the upward trend at Albert this year. We are going to have a senior football team in the Bay of Quinte group of the C. O. T. S. A. if possible, but our big efforts will be in basketball and especially hockey. We have enrolled at the school three heralded hockey players from Northern Ontario and one from Shawville, Que., all of whom have seen service in the provincial ranks," informed Pete as he seemed most enthusiastic over the future athletic programme at Albert College for the coming semester.

In order to provide somewhat of a district championship for the R.C.A.F., boxing promoters are including a few outside scrappers for their boxing show at the Arena on Wednesday night. Three well known Trenton athletes in Bobby Vieau, Al Browder and Harry Schroeder have been signed to meet R.C.A.F. boxers. The above trio have appeared locally before and are no push overs in any man's ring.

Some tidy pitching was seen in the major leagues yesterday when Vernon (Sener) Gomez mowed 'em down as the Yankees down the Tigers 5-0; with Gomez pitching four hit ball and striking out the side in the ninth to complete one of the finest mound exhibitions of the year. About two hours after Senor Gomez had gone to the showers with his No. 20 tucked under his belt, Carl Hubbell walked off the hilltop at St. Louis with his 20th victory of the season, ticked away in the bat bag. In the meantime the Giants move into the Windy City today for the crucial series of the National League. The Giants still enjoy a 2-1-2 game lead over the Cubs as the big moneyed series crashed the sport pages today. The major question is will the New York hurling staff stand up under the opening barrage that is expected?

Sudbury made it two to one in the Nickel Belt softball loop play-off when they beat Copper Cliff 12 to 2 yesterday. Frank Ferraro, former Belleville softball hurler, was used in a relief role but apparently could not stop the slugging Sudbury squad once they got under session. Ferraro is performing at the wrestling at the Arena on Friday night, as of old.

BOXING TITLES ARE AT STAKE AT LOCAL ARENA

Nine Bouts on Card Presented by R.C.A.F. Sports Club

SOME OUTSIDERS

Bringing together some of the finest amateur-boxing celebrities of the Dominion, the fast boxing show of the season under the auspices of the R.C.A.F. Sports Club, will be held in the Belleville Arena on Wednesday evening when nine bouts on the program will be presented to the public.

In some of the ring battles the Air Station championships will be decided, while still others are outside ring talent matched against the sturdy Airport boxers. In the main bout of the evening, Belleville well known Trenton veteran of the squared circle and, the veteran of numerous boxing bouts in Eastern Ontario, will meet Gil Gaulin opponent H. Smith, the pride of the R.C.A.F. at 170 pounds, the boys being lightheavyweights. The second bout also sees outside talent when Bill Vieau, another well known Trenton mittster, meets B. Stoner, formerly of Halifax, now a member of the R.C.A.F. Stoney comes to Ontario with a formidable ring record from the Maritime Provinces, but has not been locally before and against formidable opponents in Bill Vieau.

A few of the Trenton Airport tilts to be decided during the show at the arena are Lightweight Corporal Gosse the 160-pound class with Corporal Sprague, Corporal Gosse the 140 pound title with D. Morrison vs. H. Steves, lightweight championship, Gaulin vs. brining R. Herbert vs. N. Gill and the 140 pound class with J. Howard against Harry Schroeder of Trenton, the latter not being a Station title, but a Trenton boxer. Other matched bouts have been arranged by Matchmaker Flight Lieutenant Lecter, M.M.

The referees for the night will be Bert Wells, well known sports writer of Belleville, while in his inimitable manner Gordon Mackay-Smith will be the official announcer with Flight Lieut. Carr-Harris and F. O. Mc-Intosh as Judges. Bert Wells is being presented through the kind permission of Wing Commander K. L. Godfrey. For those seeking real sport the art of self defence, better known as boxing, holds the interest of the patrons and Wednesday night's show promises to be the highlight of the season's inaugural indoor sporting events.

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton, B.D.

GLAND EXTRACT INCREASES WEIGHT IN DEMENTIA PRAECOX — PERSISTENT DREAM STATE.

In investigating the cause of dementia praecox (schizophrenia)-persistent dream state—two research physicians, Drs. R. G. Hoskins and F. Freeman, found that the use of a glycerin extract of cutter part of the adrenal gland; situated one on top of each kidney) there was a gain in weight after the use of the extract. They decided to find out if this extract caused an increase in weight only in these patients or if it would increase the weight in others also. Accordingly they administered glycerin extract of the outer part of the adrenal gland, by mouth, for three weeks to 17 mentally disordered patients and to 17 normal men living amid the same surroundings. The standard dosage of 1 gramme (fresh gland equivalent), given three times a day, was used.

While there was no significant gain in weight in the controls (those not afflicted with the ailment), the dementia praecox patients, without exception, showed a gain. The average gain was about 6 1-2 pounds each.

Drs. Hoskins and Freeman believe that this definite gain in weight in such a short time as three weeks is quite noteworthy because it has always been very difficult to increase weight in these patients.

As all the patients were allowed to eat what they liked, increased appetite might account for the increased weight. It has been stated that patients suffering with a lack of adrenal extract in their system develop a dislike for fatty food, and so the treatment with the adrenal (cortical or outside part) extract seems to restore the appetite.

The patients and the controls (those who were normal) were treated as pairs, each individual of which was exposed to the same surroundings. Both lived in the same ward, received the same diet, were studied by the same physicians, and underwent the same tests.

The fact that an extract of the outer part of the adrenal gland will correct the appetite and increase weight in this type of patient (as proven by the fact that there was a good number will of course stimulate further interest in this extract and its use in various other ailments and conditions.

HOOSIER HURRICANE DEFEATS BABY YACK

Toronto, Sept. 21 —(CP)—Henry Hook of Indianapolis, Ind., a cool, slugging fighter, last night won a 10-round decision over Baby Yack, Toronto, Canadian beniam champion. Hook weighed 119¼ and Yack who won a close decision from Hook a few weeks ago, weighed 117½.

The bout was referred by Tommy Farr, British Empire heavyweight champion. Hook knocked Yack down for no counts in the first, second and third rounds and gave the Toronto fighter a real whipping until the fifth.

The baby came back strong in the fifth and nifftly bored on even terms with the rugged United States fighter until the ninth and tenth. In the last round Hook left no doubt of his superiority.

Maple Leaf Gardens drew 2,000 fans to see the fight.

A Reclaimed Man

By H. IRVING KING
McClure Newspaper Syndicate
WNU Service.

Rockwell Mercer sat on a bench in Madison Square and took stock of the situation. Ruined financially, a divorcee and broke! He had just squandered his ultimate dime for "hot dogs" in an attempt to satisfy his cravings at lunch-time. His clothes did look as though he had slept in them, which in fact he had. Shabby, considering that he has worn the same suit, sometimes by night and day for two months. He had his coat collar turned up to conceal the condition of his linen, the absence of it—and had not indulged in the super-refinement of a shave for three days. His mind was in a lethargic condition; but he was chiefly conscious of smoking a sense of satisfaction that he had come to the end of his rope at last: that he could have to "go no further" in do anything more to help them ill help himself.

A well-heeled man in the sartorial state of shabbiness as Rockwell, saunteringly along the asphalt walk, looked at him and took a seat on the same bench. "Got a match?" Mercer searched his pockets.

"No," said he after the search, "I haven't even got a match left."

"Tough, shit is?" went on the socialite down-and-outer, "especially when a guy needs a smoke. I got a couple of packs; if we could only get a light."

Rising to his feet and lounging toward the passerby the man confessed to proffer his request for a match or "light" until one, more daring than the rest, produced in his pocket and handed over some matches. Then resuming his seat beside Mercer, he handed him a cigarette with; "Here's the other leg. So—and here's a match. Light up." The "entente cordiale" being thus established the two sat smoking for a minute in silence and then the stranger, opening conversation with a few desultory remarks, gradually slipped into reminiscence.

Before he was aware of it, the outcast was "spilling his past" to his fellow down-and-outer. His father had been an intimate friend of Stephen Rockwell, the capitalist, and had named his son after him.

When the elder Mercer died insolvent, Stephen Rockwell had taken charge of his orphan, brought him up, educated him and provided him with a position in one of his many enterprises, being banker and Stephen's daughter, Emily, had fallen in love with young Mercer and, with the full consent and approbation of Stephen, had become engaged. All went well until, in an unlucky moment, the capitalist had placed Mercer in charge of a set of books in a bank of which he was vice-president. The young man wrestled conscientiously with his job; but he was a wretched mathematician and one day, just before he knew, his books were to be inspected, he found to his horror that, struggle as he would, the plaguey things wouldn't balance. On the face of it there was a deficit of over two thousand dollars in his accounts.

"And I warned you," said he, "that I hadn't stolen a cent."

"That's what they all say," commented Mercer's bench companion. "What did you do then?"

"Why," replied Mercer, "I knew that everybody would think the same as you evidently do—so—as I couldn't face the music, I disappeared. I wonder they haven't set the detectives on my trail."

"They have," said the unknown bench warmer. "My name is Hilings; I am a private detective and have been looking for you for two months."

"All right," replied Mercer, "I'm glad it's over with. You needn't put the bracelets on me—I'll go quietly."

"I'll down here again for a minute," said the detective. "Your accounts were all right—except that they were badly muddled. It took an expert two hours to straighten them out. There was no deficit. They want you to come home. Miss Rockwell is about down sick with anxiety and old Stephen is greatly worried about what has become of you. He says you shall marry his daughter but he will be hanged if you ever keep books for him again."

LORD ALLENBY AND THE CAPTURE OF JERUSALEM

Description of Victorious British Campaign in Palestine And Rout of The Turks

Field Marshal Lord Allenby's victorious campaign against the Turks in Palestine during the Great War was sketched briefly before the Belleville Rotary Club Monday in the Hotel Quinte by Lieut.-Col. Lloyd, of Campbellford, Chief characteristics of this famous British soldier were outlined by the speaker. He was deeply religious, and was detached, never flustered and his coolness of and kindness to children, probably poor and ragged, revealed the kindly disposition beneath all these, a small exterior. He was a big man in every way, said the speaker, physically and mentally and had the deep respect of his soldiers and all who came in contact with him. Lord Allenby was in command of the Third British Army, with which the Canadians were brigaded, and the victorious battle of Arras, one of the crucial battles of the war reflected great credit upon his genius in command. In this great victory the Canadians materially assisted by the capture of Vimy Ridge. Gen. Currie, under his memorize, credited the battle of Arras as being one of the most perfect setbacks of the war for the Germans.

His Life Self-Made

Being a poor man, and refusing assistance beyond his own efforts, Lord Allenby reached his eminence entirely through his own ability and efforts. He served in South Africa in the Bechuanaland campaign and on the staff of Lord Kitchener through the Boer war, also serving with distinction in France from 1914 to 1917 when he was made Commander-in-chief of the Egyptian Expeditionary Force in Egypt and Palestine.

Skilful caution was more difficult cheaper than the dashing cavalry charges of the British and French forces which outflanked and outmanoeuvred the Turkish forces in Palestine and Lord Allenby and his victorious forces to the gates of Jerusalem, the Turks withdrawing destroyed as a fighting force, and with the capitulation in 1916 to 1917 when he was made Commander-in-chief of the British Expeditionary Force in Egypt and Palestine.

Skilful caution was more difficult cheaper than the dashing cavalry charges of the British and French forces which outflanked and outmanoeuvred the Turkish forces in Palestine and Lord Allenby and his victorious forces to the gates of Jerusalem, the Turks withdrawing destroyed as a fighting force, and with the capitulation and cease to be a factor in the war, followed by the entry of the first German request for an armistice.

The capture of Jerusalem was described by Lieut.-Col. Lloyd, the speaker—the letter of surrender composed by the Turkish commander and given to the Mayor of Jerusalem to deliver, while the Turkish officer was getting as far away from Jerusalem as possible in an automobile—the entrance into the city, military measures, protection of Mohammedan interests and the people generally, together with other interesting incidents of this memorable event.

Bible and Crucifix

Bible and Crucifix symbols have grown up around the capture of Jerusalem by Lord Allenby, mostly manufactured in the United States, which caused considerable annoyance to Lord Allenby, and he suggested had Lord Allenby entering Jerusalem riding on the back of a mule and a crucifix in another. This story originated out of the fact that Lord Allenby was known to be deeply religious—but the story had no basis in fact.

Means of Omar Protected

One of the first acts on behalf of Field Marshal Lord Allenby on taking possession was the instruction to throw an armed guard of Indian soldiers around the Mohammedan Mosque of Omar for protection. The city was also cleaned from celiar to garret, a great sanitation work enacted. Proclamation was made assuring the Jewish people of protection and tolerance. When the Turks were driven out of Jerusalem the streets were speedily filled with inhabitants who had been in fearful hiding during the Turkish occupation. They were beside themselves with joy and shouted and sang a welcome to their deliverers.

Crusades and Crusade

The occupation of Jerusalem by the British under Lord Allenby was in direct contrast to the occupation by the Crusaders in the Eleventh Century under Godfrey of France. In command, caused 10,000 Saracens to be slaughtered and with fire and sword, the streets literally of the ancient city.

Lord Allenby visited Canada some years ago and upon him was conferred an honorary degree by the University of Toronto. He was appointed High Commissioner to Egypt, but declined at a meeting of the Belleville Rotary Club on Monday night, today.

The plentiful harvest with which Nature has endowed the surrounding districts augurs well for the success of the Canadian Thanksgiving of a full carload of necessities, it was felt by many present.

Mr. and Mrs. Alex Kennedy Receive Gift From Friends

On Monday evening, September 6th, 1937, a presentation was held in the Parish Hall in honor of Miss Hileen McLaren, who became the bride of Mr. Alex Kennedy on Saturday, August 21st, and presented them with a beautiful floor lamp. The gift was suitably veiled most fittingly. The following address was read by Mrs. Cecil Smith:

Dear Hileen and Alex:—

We have planned this gathering before your marriage, we were prompted to delay owing to the absence of our pastor, Mr. McConnell. Nevertheless we decided to carry out our original intention.

Owing to your sudden departure from your earnest activities in this community you both will be sadly missed.

Hileen, you are most sincerely thanked for your faithful and dedicated friendship, because you, in your girlish and blithesome manner have always proved to be a true companion and ideal companion, comforting us in our sad hours and sharing the affection of everyone.

We feel it a great pleasure to brighten this early stage of your marriage by extending our grateful appreciation for all your willing services in the church, choir, Sunday School and all our social courses. Your true and cheery companionship, your hugs, your time to gain new friends and help them as securely as you have us.

Alex, although we have not been acquainted for many years, we will greatly miss your willing and obliging services to us, but we trust that your departure will help you to the best of "Good Luck."

Since you, both, have supported all Christian interests in your early youth, we are assured that this will continue in the future and we wish all your marriage vows to an ideal happy and contented wedded life as your home objective whereas in Heaven, Jesus says, "Where your treasure is, there your heart will be also."

Perhaps you will have opportunity to find that out for yourself. My saying so wouldn't make it true, you know." After a little silence, he said, "I work at Fort Meadow, Polly. Before you ask, I'm not a Charlestonian. The Fordells and I came down here about the same time. I'm a New Yorker. And so," he added, "is Garbrook. He was a detective in New York City until he found out he could make more money writing than murder than he could hunting for the murderers."

Polly was not looking at Mr. Gow. She said, softly, "He's nice, isn't he?"

"Gutbrook? He's okay. And he can write." Jerry said, "I've read several of his serials in magazines. He keeps you on your ear."

Mr. Fordell Fred Dodge.

Sandy Burrows and Leo Riggs supervised the musical part of the program, with Past President Gerald Boyd sergeant-at-arms. Visitors present included Motarian Walter Buckley, of Southbridge, Mass., and Rotarian Ed. Cole, of Helena, Montana; Harry Floyd, Toronto.

Mr. Fordell Fred Dodge.

Sandy Burrows and Leo Riggs supervised the musical part of the program, with Past President Gerald Boyd sergeant-at-arms. Visitors present included Motarian Walter Buckley, of Southbridge, Mass., and Rotarian Ed. Cole, of Helena, Montana; Harry Floyd, Toronto.

"Gutbrook? He's okay. And he can write." Jerry said, "I've read several of his serials in magazines. He keeps you on your ear."

Again the stern shrillness and the next moment Polly saw the huge plane of the wheel directly ahead.

"Well—" Jerry said, and touched his big arm. "Good luck and my best to Nip. Sorry I have to run, but I go on duty in five minutes."

He was gone before she could think of a plausible reason for holding him there a little longer. She started after him, but slowed her pace. She thought, "It isn't too late. I can hear him on the ferry.... go back to Charleston. Again she stood still. "Foolish!" some sort of explanation." And changed this temperament of weakness, she tightened her chin at the handle of her bag and went ashore, apparently calm and accustomed tegenotes of nerves.

The bus driver let her off at the back gate. She went around the house and up the path leading the steps to the high porch when, the front door opened and Angus Garbrook appeared. Mr. Angus put one finger interecting a wide grin. Then, before he spoke, he quickly guessed his strange conduct had something to do with Ted.

"Ted's gone," he said, "and he's not in bed. He's sulking. Several men in one night away. They're all asleep, but Ted's not. He's in his room. I took it from her and set it beside the door. "We'll walk down to the beach and I'll tell you what you're waiting—shall we?"

Polly glanced toward the windows of Norris Fordell's study. The shades were pulled to the bottom and the lower sash was at an open empty church. She had said she'd meet Ted there at eight o'clock and she knew it must be very near that hour now. Mr. Fordell wouldn't up, either?

He shook his head, said, "He had a business meeting in the village till three or four o'clock this morning, so nothing will disturb him out of it," and slipped his arm through hers and led the way down the steps.

They had passed through the walk gate and were going down the low sand dune toward the firm beach, when he told her, no longer whispering. "Tod's a grand kid, but he's full of tricks. Very likely he's hiding behind a tree to frighten you—he must be in one of the bedrooms. He's scared of everything."

She looked up into his laughing face. "Ted's not afraid of anything. Norris Fordell was sleeping later than usual."

She strolled along the beach, talking casually of this and that. Christian interest in the Oxford Rifling for, Polly said, "You have been very kind to me, Mr. Gow, and you be interested to know I enjoyed it!"

"Of course you enjoyed it," "His eyes danced. "I'm delighted but I'm not quite a little surprised. Think you'll like it?"

"I will be very pleasant, I think."

"For all concerned. Including your self. Will you dine with me?" He smiled. "But why didn't you tell me about Fordell's plans for going back to New York in a few weeks, you know."

Her eyes grew up to his, quickly, swung off again. She hadn't stopped to think. She was only a summer resident; and now that she did think of it, she was sorry he had told her.

Perhaps he saw the very real regret in her expression, for he said as he opened the gate, for her, "We'll make time to see our opportunities, anyway, Polly."

It was, she knew, a question. Her answer must be given him goodbye, trying to be entirely casual. She said, "Thank you," and unconscious as she turned her back on him and hurried toward the house.

The door of Norris Fordell's study was closed. She thought to run straighten the chairs around, but at last, let him see I'm not afraid of work. She touched the knob with her knuckles. It was in touch and no more.... Then she turned the knob and stepped inside.

Too late to turn back, she saw Norris Fordell. He was on his knees behind the door; and when she looked up at her things was more of terror than simple surprise in his flushed face.

INSTALMENT 4.

Polly has surprised Norris Fordell on his knees before a small secret safe, the entire hinged wall door of which stood out so that his right bent from he was between the swinging bookshelves and the true wall.

She stared down at the man's pale face, wanting terribly to say something to relieve the tension. In that moment before Fordell got to his feet and the color began to flow back into his cheeks, her one impulse was to be out of that room and run.

Then he was standing, smiling. "You gave me an awful fright, Miss Mackey." The confused, tired look went out of his heavy-lidded eyes. "Please sit down—and don't feel you've intruded. The safe and its combination are secrets my secretary must know."

Polly sat down, blew out her breath in a long little whistle and was suddenly laughing. "And did you give me a fright! I was sure you were all asleep." Mr. Garbrook told me you had a late night conference—I'm awfully sorry, Mr. Fordell."

He bent over, took something from the little safe, closed the heavy door and a second later pushed the swinging bookshelves into place.

He lifted hand to help a small roll of notepaper, perhaps half a dozen sheets, knotted into a little grim. Her not much larger than an ordinary clear and held thus by a red string wrapped several times around the roll.

Fordell dropped the tightly rolled papers on his desk as he sat down and bent his white head to consult his watch. "I think perhaps you should forget about business until after lunch, Miss Mackey," he said pleasantly. "I have an appointment at ten o'clock. I'll have the stenographer in your room. You'll want to get settled." He was almost at the door when he said, "your room connects with Ted's. You have no objections, I hope."

"Certainly not." He rang a bell, followed him into the hall. "Ted's Polly said, "I'll be here immediately after lunch."

A pleasant colored man took her bag up, followed by the maid who was young and light-complexioned and talked with a flat, lazy drawl. The maid said her name was Tida, and added, "Some my name is, but I ain't no lion."

Tida, it developed, was the old out by no means feeble colored woman who had walked with Polly's bag. Pinny was the cook. There were no other servants, Tida said. She and Pinny both lived in a small house on the far side of the lawn. The Fordells, a family on Mt. Pleasant and came and went on the Charleston boat.

The maid departed. Polly looked around her room and liked it, Adequately furnished, but charmingly fussy. From one of its two wide windows, she looked out upon the island and saw a trim white yacht moving up the inlet which she knew was part of the Fordell estate. Waterway. There was an upstairs porch, which ran the entire width of the house, and she told herself, "Perhaps it gets too hot to sleep inside. I'll crawl out this window and bed down out there when's a breeze can get in."

Tida had closed the door as she went out but suddenly flung open. She was Evelyn Fordell lowering in the doorway, her dark eyes demand, "Who are you?"

Polly managed a smile, and said as if for many years she had known yesterday, "I am Pauline Markey, Mr. Fordell's secretary."

"That is not true," Evelyn flung at her. "My husband has retired; he has no need of a secretary. What are you doing in this room? She had advanced to the middle of the room, stood there, glaring.

"The maid said this was to be my room, Mrs. Fordell," Polly explained. "I'm sorry if Mr. Fordell didn't tell you I was coming."

Something changed in the pretty round face then. Suddenly Evelyn burned, sat on the bed and covered her face with her hands. Polly, watching her, thought that she sobbed. "Why should he? I'm only his wife. He hates me and he hates my children. He's planning to put us all out of the way. I believe he is. I—I'm afraid. Who are you? She sat there silent, her plump shoulders shaking.

Polly thought, "They're nuts! the whole family!" But after a moment she put a hand on Evelyn's shoulder. "I'm sorry, Mrs. Fordell."

Instantly Evelyn was on her feet, her face white, her voice tense. "Don't touch me! Don't you dare."

She jumped to her feet and before Polly could move or think her amazement, had swept from the room.

Polly stared after her. The woman was crazy—quite crazy. She had been putting on an act. And those question—Evelyn certainly had known who and what Polly was she was here.... Polly set her teeth, presently rose and began to transfer her things from the bag to the dresser drawers, telling herself, determinedly. "Let 'em rip. I can take it as fast as they can dish it out. And I'll not want to get rough...."

She found Ted burying something behind the sand dune just outside the beach gate.

"Pirate treasure," he whispered. "Maybe I'll show you sometime." "That's a promise," Polly whispered back. "Don't forget. And now that the treasure's safe, how's for seeing if we can find some bathing shelter?"

When they came back and made their way toward the yard it was after eleven o'clock. Several men in Army uniforms were just coming out on the porch.

"Tod said, as they passed through the gate, "I like you Polly. You're not like a girl at all."

And Polly, winding her fingers through his yellow hair, replied, "And I like you, Tod. Heaps. More than any little boy I've ever known."

Tod looked up. "Better than Angus?"

What Local Theatre Managers Say About Coming Attractions

CAPITOL

The Man Who Could Work Miracles' Roland Young in His Finest Part
Also Hit Comedy Short

Roland Young in the character of George MacWhirter Fotheringay, an obscure and ridiculed draper's assistant, plays the finest part of his career in "The Man Who Could Work Miracles," which comes to the Capitol Theatre on Wednesday as smash hit No 1.

The action is largely centred on Fotheringay, and there are moments in every comedy followed by unexpectingly dramatic situations which he handles to great effect. Almost incredible things come to this ordinary and everyday individual and it takes an actor of more than ordinary ability to handle such situations as the genius of H. G. Wells has devised for this production.

Although Roland Young has given many fine performances in classical films, in this film he gives a performance outstanding indeed and ranking merit equal to that of Charles Laughton in "Henry VIII."

H. G. Wells' script set many problems for Ned Mann, who had charge of the trick work, and for Eddie Cohen, the trick cameraman. Many of the "miracle" effects which Fotheringay's new-found powers bring to pass would be impossible to picture in how some of these astonishing things have been photographed.

The final scene in "The Man Who Could Work Miracles" is an enormous one, utilizing Elstree Hall and the stage at Worton Hall housed nearly 500 players when the scene was filmed. The entire cast appear in this scene in some exceptional costumes. For two months John Armstrong, who designed the dresses for "Henry VIII" and other London Films, was engaged in selecting beautiful girls and individually fitting them for these clothes of his own design.

The decor of the film is again by Vincent Korda, who has produced such beautiful settings for previous London Films. One of the most effective sets, and a departure from his previous period effects, is the old village street of Dewhinton; a row of lovely old timbered cottages, including the Long Dragon Inn, with walls covered in creepers and flowers, and trees down the side of the road which wanders into the distance where the rest of the village is seen in the valley.

"I Could Happen To You"

The Capitol Theatre is offering a new type of film drama, beginning on Wednesday as hit No. 2. The title, "It Could Happen To You", is entirely original, and is a combination of the lovely of any local fan, and from advance information, is certain plenty of drama and gripping thrills.

Alan Mowbray plays the leading role, portraying a youth whose own weakness leads him to ultimate destruction.

Andrea Leeds, who stepped from the University of Wisconsin dramatic club to stardom, plays opposite Baxter. Next, Astrid Allwyn cast as her sister.

Owen Davis, Jr., Walter Kingsford, Al Shean and Charlotte Wynters complete a list what is lifted from Iadd's said into star of Gautama's theatrical and night life by Fisk.

Wendall Hall comes through a real fun-fest of song in the latest Vitaphone short, featured for presentation on the same program with the popular Belle News of the Day, Pathe Review and Fox Movietone comedy.

"The Toast of New York" True story of Josie Mansfield and Jim Fisk; told on screen

Josie Mansfield a fascinating beauty of the post-Civil War period, is torn between her loyalty to Jim Fisk, picturesque railroad baron, who promotes her first stage opportunity, and her love for Jay Gould, financial wizard.

Fisk's friend and business partner. Josie Mansfield is played by Frances Farmer in the new type drama story, "The Toast of New York" and is co-starred with Edward Arnold, Jack Oakie and Cary Grant.

A glittering chapter of American history is unfolded in this photoplay, Arnold plays Jim Fisk, one of the most colorful figures on Wall Street and one of the leading lights in the development of the Erie Railroad.

Fisk's adoration of Josie Mansfield, remembered as one of the most alluring women in American stage history, is the background for his business career. He lavished a fortune on the bewitching young woman, who sought fame in the theatre. Josie's friend, Maud Miln Farmer, who soared to stardom within the last year plays her second role in the picture. Grant Gordon, the first having been in "Come and Get It," is seen in the latter picture that she revealed herself as definitely "box office."

Toast of New York" she characterizes a girl who is lifted from Iadd's said into star of Gautama's theatrical and night life by Fisk.

Wendall Hall comes through a real fun-fest of song in the latest Vitaphone short, featured for presentation on the same program with the popular Belle News of the Day, Pathe Review and Fox Movietone comedy.

NANKING BOMBED FOR HOURS BY JAP PLANES

Japan Ignores Protests Of Britain, United States But Loss of Life Small

More Than 100 Bombs Explode in Civilian Areas

Chinese Anti-Aircraft Batteries Do Good Work

By C. Yates McDaniel

Associated Press Foreign Staff

Nanking, Sept. 22—(AP)—Japan ignored British and United States protests against unrestricted bombardment of this capital's civilian population today and her planes bombed the city for hours in an ineffectual effort to carry out its threatening mission.

During Chinese pilots in fast pursuit planes fought off three separate Japanese air fleets, numbering some 100 planes. At least four Japanese bombers were shot crashing to earth.

Although more than 100 bombs were dropped, loss of life and damage to property were relatively small.

The casualties were believed to be not more than 40 Chinese civilians killed or wounded.

An American Press survey showed that all government and military buildings had come through the bombardments virtually unscathed.

Sudden Raid

Suddenly and surprisingly, from the southeast, an estimated 30 to 40 Japanese machines appeared at about 10,000 feet. When they were in position, the Japanese wing leader signalled and the raid began. Ist hour bombs on the southern section of the city where the government center is located.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Wind effect on sound! Other things being equal sound can be heard farther on a quiet, calm day than a windy one. Turbulence and eddies dissipate it. But when the wind is blowing, sound carries farther to leeward than to windward. This is due to the bending down of the sound waves on the leeward side of the source. The bending is due to the greater wind velocity at greater heights. The sound waves to leeward are bent downward while those to windward are bent upward and away from the hearer.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Sept. 22 (CP)—Pressure is high in eastward of the Great Lakes with a moderate disturbance over the Kenora and Red Lake River District and another centred just northwest of Hudson Bay. Fine weather has become cool in the Western Provinces and showers have fallen in parts of Saskatchewan and Alberta. Light showers have also occurred in some sections of Southern Ontario and the Maritime Provinces.

Lake Superior—Fresh southerly winds; partly cloudy; light scattered showers and some what cooler over west portion tonight, Thursday, west to northwest winds; partly cloudy and cooler; probably light showers Thursday.

Manitoba — Northwest winds; partly cloudy and cool tonight and Thursday.

Saskatchewan—Mostly cloudy and cool today and Thursday, probably light scattered showers.

'Appeal to Reason' is Made By Premier Hepburn at Tweed On Businesslike Regime

Further Cut in Taxes And Subsidy Promised in Due Time

NO ARREARS GIVEN AWAY

120,000 H.P. Option, He Says Shows No Danger Power Shortage

"An appeal to reason" on the part of businesslike administration was what Premier the Hon. Mitchell F. Hepburn termed the present campaign rather than a political election in the usual sense of the term.

With this declaration which opened his address at Tweed Memorial Park on Tuesday afternoon, the Premier spoke to a crowded hall of his supporters in the interest of "Ed" Brown, Liberal candidate in East Hastings.

He pointed out that the Government which he is the head had completely overhauled the system of taxation in the Province of Ontario.

The Premier said "I have made mistakes and am of an impetuous nature" but he believed the people would rather have an Prime Minister to Mr. Rowe with his lack of constructive ideas, as he termed them.

"You know where I stand. You know that my policies are headed in the right direction," the Prime Minister said.

Opposes St. Lawrence Development

One of the greatest mistakes the Hon. Earl Rowe had made was his strong advocacy of the St. Lawrence waterway, said Mr. Hepburn. This was against the wishes of 5,000,000. We have no need of it.

The Premier pointed to the railway construction to James Bay and Hudson Bay as one of the greatest mistakes in history, and the waterways development, he said would also be a serious mistake. He declared that Mr. Rowe's support of the St. Lawrence Waterway project could not be justified on economic or prudent grounds. Further facilities it offered nor the power developed could possibly justify this undertaking.

The Prime Minister envisioned the railways and the possibilities of the waterways with the established railways, and what this would mean in respect to the wages of railwaymen and duty to the men on the waterways during the winter season. Men would be out of work for the greater part of that period, he said.

In regard to the Hydro contracts, Mr. Hepburn stated that if Mr. Rowe were elected the negotiations with Mr. Rowe or the Province would have to find seven million dollars more a year to do so.

Says No Fewer Shortage Ahead

Mr. Hepburn said there was any sign of a power shortage in Ontario. "We have a 120,000 H.P. option from the Gatineau alone," he declared, from which the Hydro could draw at five minutes' notice.

He took to task speakers who claiming that the Hepburn administration had given away valuable timber and forest areas.

Health Dep't Provides Equipment to Prevent Crippling by Paralysis

Cost of Splints And Post-Isolation Hospitalization of Paralysis Victims, Borne For Present by Ontario Dept. of Health—Accommodation Arranged in Nine Centres Outside Toronto And at Five Hospitals in That City

Toronto, Sept. 22—(CP)— Plans for treatment of poliomyelitis victims to prevent crippling after the period of isolation were completed today by the Ontario Department of Health today.

The Department has made arrangements, Dr. R. J. McGibbon, Deputy Minister of Health announced, to see that Bradford frames and standard splints are available and to place showing evidence of paralysis or muscle weakness. Immediate accommodation is being provided in nine centres outside Toronto and five hospitals in the city for the treatment of crippled cases for three weeks after the period of isolation.

Period of Treatment

Dr. McGibbon said that it was estimated that during that in the first three week period of "first aid treatment" patients could be given a sufficient start to permit of further continued treatment in their homes under the advice of their own physicians.

Cost of the splints and post-isolation hospitalization will be borne by the province at least, by the Department. "There will be no argument about cost," Dr. McGibbon said. "This is an emergency measure and if there are families who are able to pay, any arrangements about payment will be worked out afterward."

Centres Named

The centres at which Bradford frames and splints as well as hospitalization are available:

Port William, McKellar General Hospital; Orillia, Civic Hospital; Hamilton, General Hospital; Sudbury, St. Joseph Hospital; Kingston, General Hospital; Toronto, Hospital for Sick Children; London, Victoria Hospital; Windsor, Metropolitan General Hospital; Sault Ste. Marie, General Hospital; Western Hospital, St. Michaels Hospital.

Furthermore at Toronto the Department is obtaining the old Grace Hospital building for the treatment of children. Here an orthopedic centre for the whole province is being established.

Learning to Adopt Selves

The period of from one to three weeks in hospital after isolation is being provided in order that patients may learn to adapt themselves to the proper use of the Bradford frames and necessary splints. It is or the utmost importance that not only the patient but also the family be fully impressed with the necessity for good care and adequate orthopaedic care if unnecessary crippling is to be prevented.

Admission to hospital for this purpose will not be available to patients until the termination of the usual isolation period. However, Bradford splints may be obtained for immediate treatment in all cases.

In cases in which the patient's family is unable to arrange transportation to and from hospital, and where provision for this cannot be made through local service clubs, the Department consultant for the district will be notified.

WILL NOT SUPPORT WATERWAY PLAN

Premier Hepburn at Kingston Says He Will Not be Stampeded

By (CP Staff Writer)

Kingston, Ont., Sept. 22.—(CP) The kind of "Hollywood" which loaded the people with the Hudson Bay railway and the Welland Ship Canal, or the Tumlakeming and Northern Ontario railway is not going to "stampede" Premier Mitchell Hepburn into supporting construction of the St. Lawrence Waterway, he made clear here last night.

"That development would take traffic from Canada's railways, just at a time when they were in a position to benefit," he said in every respect.

Inconsistency Charged

Here he assailed the Conservative Liquor Administration and pointed to $50,000 beer sales by the Conservative Club of Kingston as an illustration of that party's inconsistency and insincerity in its appeals to dry vote.

Mr. Hepburn repeated his challenge to Conservative Leader Earl Rowe to go to the bye-elections for four stands and children's seizure he had mentioned. Such talk, the Premier said was merely a smoke screen to cover the Henry Government's record.

Return Soldiers' Jobs

He told his audience that 25 per cent. of all appointments made by the Liberal Government had gone to returned soldiers and ex-service men in Canada. Some returned men had been laid off by the previous administration on eligible list and re-employed when vacancies occurred.

He said the present government's attitude toward labor was the antithesis of the Conservative Party of Stetson employees, he said. The company blamed insolvency to put the employees and still compete with manufacturers paying low wages.

Hydro Wage Rate Increased

The Labor and Industry Board investigated the situation and decided in a fair wage for the industry. This was applied to the whole industry under the Industrial Standards Act. Thus the employer paying the lowest wage was forced to raise condition of the sweatshop manufacturer.

Thus the legislation enacted since the Liberals took office it was possible to obtain a larger share

Says Fliers Believed Bombed Cars Contained Chinese Army Officers

If Intent on Negligence is Proven, Bombers Will be Punished

MISTAKE OVER CAR

Reply Offers Possible Explanation For Wounding

London, Sept. 22.—(AP)—Japan today expressed formal "deep regret" for the wounding of the British Ambassador in China, Sir Hughe Knatchbull-Hugessen, by Japanese airplanes, Reuters News Agency said in a Tokyo dispatch.

Sir Hughe was shot and seriously injured by machine-gun bullets from two planes Aug. 26.

The Japanese government's reply to protests by the British Government said the incident "may have been caused by Japanese airplanes which mistook the Ambassador's car" for a Chinese army car.

Two Cars Bombed

The note admitted, Reuters said, that two Japanese planes machine-gunned and bombed two motor cars believed, in all sincerity to be military lorries" containing Chinese army officers.

Of Great Britain's demand for punishment or the airmen, the Japanese note said:

"It is needless to say that the Japanese government cannot take a suitable steps, whenever it is established that Japanese aviators killed or wounded intentionally, or through negligence the nationals belonging to a third country."

The reply was the second, a previous answer having received time for further investigation.

Punishment Answer Ambiguous

Tokyo, Sept. 22.—(AP)— Japan today expressed her regret for the wounding of the British, Ambassador to China, in an attack outside Shanghai and British quarters said the note met demands for an apology and assurance such incidents would not again occur.

The British government for punishment of the aviators who machinegunned the Ambassador, Sir Hughe Knatchbull-Hugessen, Aug. 26, was however, answered ambiguously.

The note was handed to the British Ambassador to Tokyo, Sir Robert Leslie Craigie, by Minister Koki Hirota yesterday and its terms made public today.

The Note

"I now have the honor to inform Your Excellency that the inquiry in Shanghai and vicinity having been completed, the Japanese government desire to make the following reply:

"As the result of the most careful investigation it has been established that on Aug. 26, two Japanese planes machine-gunned and bombed two motorcars, which were believed in all sincerity, to be military lorries and then carrying officers or soldiers of the Chinese army in active service, namely, (about two miles) southwest of Kiating. Severa Chinese soldiers were wounded, and since Aug. 14, not only had Japanese planes made repeated flights over Nanking, but a number of aerial combats by Chinese and Japanese planes took place.

"Owing to the difficulty of conducting investigation on the spot, there has been some slight discrepancy in the wording of the facts reported to the position of the Ambassador's motorcar when he was wounded, of the Japanese planes from Nanking to Shanghai when the attack occurred."

TWEED GIRL GETS NURSING DIPLOMAS

At the annual commencement exercises of the Chambers Memorial Hospital Training School, Belleville, yesterday, Miss D. E. D. Elliott, of Tweed, was one of three girls of widely separated sections of the province to receive her diploma and pin as a member of the graduating class of 1937.

NEW DOCK ADDITION READY FOR USE

For the first time since its construction the new addition to the Government Dock will receive its first cargo early next week, it is reported by Hardy-Grindley-Tite Commissioners of Point Anne will bring the first shipment of 1500 tons to the city from Sandusky. A second shipment which will complete an order of 2,000 tons given by the local W. S. Anderson and Company, fuel dealers, will be made later in the week it is stated.

SWARMS OF FLIES SEEN ON THE BAY

Swarms of midges and black flies apparently bred overnight by the change in temperatures, plagued the tourists and caused other annoyances to waterfront residents this morning. Their numbers were observed unusually large for the present time of year.

GIRL HELPS MOUSE TO MAKE GETAWAY

A frightened brown mouse darted from nowhere, hugged the sides of the stores along the middle section of Front Street before noon today as it bobbed in beady-eyed terror, while pedestrians stared and cavorted on the pavement to the accompaniment of justified feminine screams to get out of the mouse's future's way.

Are present day Misses mouse shy? Not at all. One smartly dressed young lady, after first assessing the excitement, bravely hurried to examine the mouse's pace and calmly bent over to watch its progress with a handbag.

Just a brief and darting detour was all that was needed for the turned midget to make a clean break away through a treasury open ball door around the handbag.

FOG SETTLES OVER CITY AFTER SEVEN

One of nature's phenomena, a particularly heavy fog through which even bellringers along Front Street were veiled in a pulverizing mist descended over the city shortly after seven o'clock this morning following a lighter one which blanketed the city earlier in the morning resulting in considerable difficulty of travel on the highways.

Early morning workers hurrying to their jobs for once were unable to glimpse the city's correct time, faithfully recorded by the town clock until a half hour later.

DOG BEGS FOR PENNIES

Belleville after this can probably point and boast to the Dominion's first canine beggar. He is a big brown dog, which with a wicker basket in mouth, made a tour of Front Street between 10 and 11 this morning and approved fashion early last evening.

Several small donations were tendered the dog in the vicinity of a lower tobacco and kindly acts of which it was held appealingly up to a individual passersby. ...an evening all agrarian lines as well as the

DUCK HUNTER FINDS TIRED CARRIER PIGEON

Hunting wild ducks near one of the lakes of Grimsthorpe Township this morning, Fred J. Aynhart of Gerrish Street E., Toronto, found smaller but more unique game when he discovered a exhausted carrier pigeon in a small bush. Though unmarked, it appeared completely worn out, the finder stated. It is believed to have been one of the participants in a homing pigeon race, but became confused and exhausted in flight.

DIES AND TAPS TAKEN FROM SHOP

Arthur Wait, Foxboro blacksmith, reported the theft of two valuable dies and taps from his blacksmith shop yesterday to the O.P.P. Provincial Police. The dies and taps, valued at $20.00, are suitable for the threading of pipe. The dies and taps were taken from the blacksmith shop by Mr. Wait over the week-end, but were missing yesterday morning. Provincial Constable Wm. McBrien is investigating.

MOTOR CAR BURNS ON KING'S HIGHWAY

Igniting from the result of a short circuit an automobile occupied by two Brockville women was badly damaged on Highway No. 2 east of Shannonville this morning. The women were alone in the vehicle and practically had taken when the fire broke out. They managed to escape without injury, and saved what wearing apparel they carried in the vehicle Passing motorists eventually assisted in extinguishing the blaze, but not before the car was rendered mechanically useless. The vehicle was towed to Vivian's garage in Shannonville, while the two women continued their journey to Brockville as passengers in a car driven by a kindly motorist proceeding in that direction. Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Irvine was called to the scene, but by the time he arrived the ladies had left and their names were not ascertained. Owing to the nature of the vehicle can be ascertained through the license plate number. The vehicle was badly scorched during the blaze.

TRANSIENTS HELD ON DRUNK CHARGES

Charged with intoxication, two transients, who gave their names as Robert Johnson and Charles Williamson, were arrested by Chief Wilson, local Justice of the Peace and were remanded in custody until Monday.

Following complaints that two men were disturbing the tourists at the Belleville Tourist Camp yesterday afternoon Traffic Officer Irving Ellis arrested Johnson and Williamson in a nearby jungle. It was reported that the men had been intoxicated, panhandling and generally annoying the tourists of the Tourist Camp. Police allege that two empty native wine bottles were found in the jungle where where Williamson was apprehended.

INSECTS NAMED

Fearsome appearing as their name, though relatively small in size for insects, two strangers who visited had puzzled amateur entomologists of Prince Edward County for some time past have been identified by experts at the local Dominion Entomological Laboratory as officially classified as a "A Maple Leaf Cutting Saw Fly" and a "Maple Leaf Skeletonizer."

Both insects were taken from some maple trees in a small plot owned by J. Blakely of Picton.

They have been classified as truly destructive insects.

TRAFFIC BUTTONS BEING PUT IN PLACE

Traffic buttons, to mark crossings for pedestrians at the intersection of Bridge and Front Streets, are being placed under the Department of Public Works of the City today. The buttons, about three inches in diameter, are conveyed and rise slightly from the pavement, after being put in place. The groups are imbedded in the asphalt fully two inches below the surface of the street. The traffic buttons were deemed necessary owing to the fact the white painted lines placed to design the lanes in which the pedestrians are to cross the street become obliterated to rapidly.

CLARE INQUEST OPENED TODAY

More Definite Identification Needed Before Closing Hearing

An inquest looking into the death of one Richard Clare, 21-year-old transient, who died in the Belleville General Hospital yesterday after having been admitted to the institution following being struck by a motor car on Aug. 27th, was opened at the Martin Funeral Home this morning before Chief Coroner Dr. J. J. Roberts. Following partial identification the inquest was adjourned until Thursday next, the body of the deceased man being held for further examination.

Dr. Blackwell, of Deseronto, was the main witness heard today, "The man was brought to my residence early on Aug. 27th by an American tourist, who stated his automobile had struck the man east of Deseronto, while he was walking on the highway. I examined the injured man and only found a fractured left arm and general shock. I removed the fracture and the American motorist conveyed the man to the Belleville hospital. I did not believe the injuries to be of a critical nature," stated Dr. Blackwell.

Crown Attorney R. C. Donnan, K.C., ordered a post mortem yesterday, but the result of an autopsy was not given at today's preliminary inquest. Investigating police learned, that Mr. Clare was supposed to have a daughter, Mrs. Marion Keegan, residing in St. Catharines, Ont., but a check-up by St. Catharines police revealed no person by that name known in that community. Mr. Clare is known to have worked east of Kingston prior to his accident and is reported to have been enroute to Toronto when he was struck. Police are very possibly interrogation of his kin for definite identification, Mr. Donnan stated today.

The coroner's jury summoned by Sergeant Arthur Harman was composed of H. H. Ketcheson, foreman, Chas. Cochrane, L. F. Green, Wm. Cochrane, Jr., Clifford Allen, Tom Jefferies, Harry Abbots and Clifford Weeks.

50TH ANNIVERSARY OF CHURCH HELD

Northport United Church Congregation Hear Former Pastor

The fiftieth anniversary services of Northport United Church were observed Sunday, Sept. 19th. The Rev. R. B. Cook, of Thornhill, a former pastor was the guest preacher for the occasion. His messages were very appropriate and inspiring as he reviewed the history of the Church for the past fifty years, and presented the challenge which it offers for service in the days to come. Rev. W. H. Pointer, pastor of Northport United Church, introduced the guest speaker of the day.

The choir rendered special music in keeping with the spirit of this half century event, under the leadership of Mrs. R. G. Crothers, assisted in the morning with a cornet solo, "Open the Gates of the Temple", by R. W. Pointer; and in the evening by a duet and solo, "He Wipes The Tear From Every Eye", by Mrs. T. Hackett of Bethesda, and a vocal solo, "The Ninety and Nine", by Herbert Baldwin of Belleville.

Large congregations were present to participate in this great event in the history of the local church.

Er-Mayor M. P. Duff, who has been connected with the Canadian National Railways for the past thirty years, twenty-four of which have been spent as Chief Clerk in the Belleville offices, was retired pension, when he relinquished his duties last evening. As Mr. Duff closed his office desk for the last time, his fellow-employees convened to wish him and Mrs. Duff health and happiness in their retired life and presented him-with a handsome cigarette case as a token of their esteem from the staff of the office [illegible] Superintendent [illegible] of the Belleville Division of the C.N.R., on behalf of the staff. He served under three Superintendents, the late R. F. Doyle and J. D. McMillan and for the past few years under Mr. George A. Stokes, the present Superintendent of the Belleville Division. Mr. Duff celebrated his 65th birthday yesterday and attained the age that entitles him to retire on pension. Always the same genial official, Mr. Duff was respected by all under his supervision and leaves many friends with his resignation, not only in Belleville Division, but in the city and in all other branches of the service. He was in receipt of many congratulations yesterday, besides being honored by his fellow employees upon his retirement from active service on the Canadian National.

Retained in Civic Life

Aside from the [illegible] competent employee of the C.N.R., Mr. Duff found time to devote himself to the welfare of the City of Belleville, entering the aldermanic field in 1926, when he was elected councillor that year and again in 1927, while in 1932 Mr. Duff successfully ran for the office of Mayor of Belleville. When the Belleville Hydro Electric Commission was inaugurated in 1929, Mr. Duff retired from the Council and was elected to that board, having three times served as Chairman and having been elected to that Commission each consecutive year to date. Mr. Duff is also active in the work of the Belleville Rotary Club and for some years was connected with the executive committee of that organization. Mr. Duff is also a member of the Masonic Order.

Mr. Duff has been keenly interested in the field of sport in Belleville, especially turning his assistance to baseball during the triumphant reign of that game in this city. He was President of the old Belleville Nationals for some years ago, also served as Secretary and as Treasurer on other occasions. In 1934 Mr. Duff was elected to the high position of President of the Central Ontario Amateur Baseball League, a position he held with ability. He was also a member of the defunct Belleville Amateur Athletic Association and also is keenly interested in hockey, curling and lawn bowling. All walks of life who have come in personal contact or business contact with Morley P. Duff with him many years of sincere happiness.

Mr. Duff is a native of Barrie, Ontario, where he was employed with the Electric Light and Water Works Department of that community before entering the railway service in 1907.

New Thompson Is Promoted

Succeeding Mr. Duff, under Superintendent George A. Stokes, will be Newton Thompson, who entered the C.N.R. service at Belleville on August 28th, 1915, as a Clerk. Later Mr. Thompson was promoted to the position of secretary to the late Superintendent H. R. Coyle and also served in the same capacity under the late J. D. McMillan. Newton Thompson was promoted Assistant Divisional Accountant on Jan. 1st, 1920, and succeeded Mr. Duff as Chief Clerk today.

Newton Thompson was secretary of the Belleville Nationals for three years from 1930 to 1932, and was elected to the position of Secretary of the Central Ontario League in 1934, a position he has filled with satisfaction to all who have had dealings ever since. Mr. Thompson is also President of Y's Men's International and keenly interested and active in the work of the Y.M.O.A., Rotary Boys' Work, etc. He is also Past Master of Eureka Lodge A. F. and A. M. No 282. He served under the same superintendents as Mr. Duff in the Belleville Division. Mr. Thompson today is receiving the congratulations of his many personal friends upon his appointment to Chief Clerk of the Belleville Division of the C.N.R. He is a native of Deseronto, but has resided in Belleville since 1915.

MANY DUCKS

"I've never seen the wild ducks so thick in the bay and cove as they are this year," stated Mr. Percy O'Neil, well known boatman of the port of the city. "They're been massing lately in large flocks, but it's a poor sign for hunters; they'll probably make an early start south this year.

"A FARMER for the FARMERS"

(ADVERTISEMENT)

HON. JAS. LYONS

by Dr. Embury of Bancroft, who acted as chairman, included Reeve J. McWhirter, Reeve John Anderson, William Davis, Judson Gunter, M. Wiggins, Sam Edwards, Dr. Lamb and Messrs. Harry Rollins, Belleville, W. J. Ernest Pearson, Trenet, and the Hast Standing candidate-Dr. Harold Walsh. Intermittent cheering greeted the various points brought by the speakers, while Dr. Walsh was given a fine ovation as he rose to speak. A heckler was howled down by the excited crowd on one occasion while cries of "throw him out" forced the loquacious one to beat a hurried retreat.

Chinese Patronage Committee

In a daring expose of the alleged conditions prevailing in parts of Northern Ontario, the Hon. Mr. Lyons charged that "there was set up in each community a Liberal patronage committee. If men wanted jobs they were forced to apply to these Liberal committees to campaign on the dotted line and get a ticket before they go to work. "And they must be Liberals", declared the speaker. "It is an absolute shame, what is transpiring in the north country", he continued. "Merchants with stores selling to government department rangers, cutters and other employees are not permitted to operate if they are Conservatives. Men of the camps are not permitted to patronize them.

"It is the same in the length and breadth of the north," charged the speaker, "in the matter of trucks operating under last year's licence. Hotel keepers have to kick in with fifty per cent of the beverage room profits to the Liberal patronage chairman and hotel keepers claim they cannot operate their hotels on the other fifty per cent. These are the methods", declared the speaker, "and I can furnish names to anyone who desires them."

"Miles of our trunc roads have been shut down," said Mr. Lyons. "Traffic to Kirkland Lake has been injured, and roads are in a deplorable condition". Contracts for the roads were stopped, when the work was ninety per cent complete, and thousands of dollars have been paid the contractor for compensation of contractors of machinery, which would have more than paid for the completion of the roads.

Only Three Mills

Turning to the lumbering question, the speaker stated that "where we had 13 mills, 26 years ago we have three, because the forests of the north have been depleted.. The pulpwood industry one of the largest industries of Canada, the Dominion Government is doing greater than ever before. Under Industry, because it employed more men, has been in force and operation for a number of years before the civil service policy. Lately the present government started to fool with the American trade, and one of the first contracts to American concerns allowed them to cut and export 40c million cords from one area of Crown land. The government sold for 40c million dollars, what when converted into pulpwood is worth 120 million dollars of dollars, and this in turn is going to American markets to manufacture 85 per cent of newsprint manufactured is needed skeen.

"And after the contract got this area at $1 per cord, what did Hepburn do but build them a better waterway to export it to their own country. And the Hydro Commission will build that waterway because they think they will divert the extra water down to Niagara to make more power for Hepburn."

The unpopular aim of the Hepburn Administration", said the speaker, "is to have the allocation of 24,275 square miles of pulpwood land to nine different companies all but two of which are entirely controlled by American interests.

Lot Scored Tenders Charge

"Imagine an area one-third the size of Old Ontario, containing 72,950,000 cords of pulpwood, enough to keep the entire newsprint industry going for twenty years. And remember, only two of these nine companies carry any obligation on the part of the company to manufacture in Ontario."

Mr. Lyon sharply criticized the Premier's actions "in letting out for licences for large areas of timberland. Not a word was said, not a tender made public. He says he will continue this policy if elected, but still he doesn't state the terms of these contracts. They were signed but none outside the government knew the details, but we do know that seven of the nine companies can export pulpwood to the U.S.A."

"There is one thing basically responsible for the present conditions in Europe," continued the speaker, "and that is the nations have not the raw material they require. That is the bottom of the trouble, and if the U.S. comes in here and exhausts our supplies of raw materials, what will become of our paper and pulp industries?"

In his criticism of the present government, the speaker stated that the Conservative Party built the greatest fire patrol system in the world, using planes and other modern equipment for the control of forest fires. "There has been a vast difference in the loss of timber since the fire in 1924 to 1934 and from 1934 to 1937," he charged. "This would not have occurred had the government not reduced the efficiency of the Fire Rangers by the wholesale discharge of competent rangers."

Removed Game Wardens

"Another phase of Hepburn's actions in the north is seen by the removal of game-wardens. Today there is no protection for the game preserves and anyone can shoot at a tremendous rate. Along the Temiskaming Railway between there are hordes of American hunters flying in and out of waters and taking the fish to America and taking thousands of dollars worth of net and hooks and lines, some cases destroying the nets of our fishermen and the government sent a boat capable of eight miles per hour to compete with the fast craft of the American fishers. That is the kind of protection we have in the north."

Briefly summarizing his criticisms of the various phases of the present administration, the speaker stated that the "School System in the north country was a disgrace to able condition."

This is because the government has fallen down in its care of the schools of Ontario. Hepburn might better have used that $50-called nine million dollar surplus for the care of the children of the north country than saved it to boast about."

"He collected more than forty millions in taxes from the pockets of the people to balance his budget by cutting the health services with the municipalities paying the shot in increased revenue to balance his budget. With all his reductions in grants and with what he collected from you he should have had forty millions over and above the people who balanced the budget."

"The one mill subsidy to municipalities is a joke. He is only giving you back a portion of what he took from you. He is like a Santa Claus who leaves a bag of candy in your stocking then pinches your two hundred dollar racio as he is going out. It is all bluff and buffoonery and he hopes to pull the wool over your eyes. Ask him for a Public Accounts. You won't get one, and you won't get one until after election."

"People want a change and they will get one, and the outstanding reason is because Ontario at heart is Conservative, just as Quebec is Liberal. Why should we be downhearted in this grand old province. There is optimism and enthusiasm over the outcome of the election, that has never before been witnessed," concluded the speaker.

Criticized Appeal

"East Hastings proved on Dec. 9th," said Dr. Harold Welsh, East Hastings candidate, "that no government can face a vicious mandate on the people without first committing them." Loud applause greeted the speaker as he criticized the repeal of the Assessment Act by Mr. Hepburn. Since, as Lyons charged, he betrayed the Public School supporters in '34, and the Separate School supporters in '36, he asked Hepburn pronounced as to do if elected. "If he does nothing more than merely betraying the Separate School supporters and if he intends to do something. It is our right to know. I challenge Hepburn, Faulkner and Brown to answer if the issue is a dead one. My stand is the same as in the by-election. I am 100% behind the Public School system of Ontario."

"He comes to you because he is forced to," Dr. Welsh stated, referring to the Premier. "After three years of unemployment, taxation and increased debt, he has started a 26 million dollar highways program, which must be paid for after election, and he takes 25 millions from the separate school fund to bribe the electors of the provinces to return him to power."

"I suggest he will increase the gasoline tax to make up for the five cents he is giving you in auto licence reductions" stated the speaker. "It must be made up somewhere. He is giving you a saving of $5.00 and charging you $30.00. He balanced the budget at the expense of the ill and underprivileged people of Ontario, and I challenge Dr. Faulkner to deny it."

Mr. Reeve will get an end to this Tammany Hall political racket, that has corrupted every Ontario election campaign for the past three years. The Civil Service will be reorganized and promotions made according to efficiency. Returned soldiers will get the preference. Mr. Reeve will establish a Tourist Bureau, which formerly was a department with the Department of Highways. A progressive highways program will be immediately started on the flin nances of the province. The Tourist Bureau will be set up to attract people from all angles to make it the best province in the Dominion."

Health Minister Criticised

"I challenge the Premier for calling an election in the face of an epidemic of infantile paralysis and disease. Infantile paralysis created a crisis in Ontario, and where is the Minister of Health? Why is he not at his desk assisting in combatting this disease instead of running around West Hastings in a political attempt to defeat Dick Welsh?

"British institutions must be considered," concluded Dr. Welsh, "and I feel that on Oct. 6th Ontario will emerge from the dark dictatorship into one of the foremost provinces in the British Empire."

The speakers were introduced by Mr. W. Ernest Tummon, ex-M.P., Tweed. Brief speeches were given by Messrs J. L. Churcher, who stated that the recent victorie achieved in the Hastings County Council, which has always gone its best in the interests of the people, should be beneath the influence of a Cabinet minister; Judson Gunter said "Hepburn might better place export tax on nickel to belligerent countries, instead of running around trying to worm succeeden duties out of wilson."

Other Speakers

Other speakers were Harry Rollins, president of the Belleville Conservative Association, who represented Mayor Richard Arnott who was unable to be present through municipal duties and the Chairman, Dr. Embury.

The statement said to have been made by Dr. Faulkner at a recent meeting to the effect that the main street of Bancroft was not paved because the village council objected to it was referred to by Dr. Lamb, Reeve of Bancroft.

"Here are the facts," he said. "The Council drew a petition to this effect to send to the Minister of Mines. We submitted it to the Liberal candidate for recommendation and they did absolutely nothing about it. So we took it upon ourselves to send it. Nothing was done. And that and that alone is the reason the street has not been paved," emphatically concluded Dr. Lamb.

Mr. Joseph Humphries, Toronto electrician, delighted his audience with a splendid rendition of "107 Diseases." He was heartily applauded.

1938 MOTOR PERMITS NOW AVAILABLE

NO SPECIAL NUMBERS FOR 1938

Toronto, September 22, 1937—Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Minister of Highways, has announced that 1938 Motor Vehicle Permits and Operators' Licenses will go on sale throughout the Province immediately. Agents in the larger centres are already supplied, and shipments of supplies are being made daily to the smaller points.

The Highways Department is making 1938 Permits available at this time so that purchasers of new 1938 cars and trucks will not be obliged to pay for 1937 registration, and so that the large number of autumn purchasers of used cars and trucks will not have to pay the usual transfer fee for only three months of the year remaining.

The advance sale of 1938 Permits is also designed to alleviate the usual last minute rush when 1937 Permits expire at the end of the year.

The new plates are of an exceptionally attractive design this year, with green and orange figures on Blue background. There will be no special numbers. The series letter will come in the second, third or fourth place between numerals, and each plate will have only one series letter.

Reduction in Rates

A substantial reduction in rates is announced, which will be welcome news to motorists and owners of commercial vehicles.

The Department having decided to change the license year to coincide with the fiscal year, permits and licenses will be valid until March 31st, 1939.

In announcing the advance sale of 1938 Permits Mr. McQuesten stated that the Department will be unable to consider requests for special arrangements of numbers or special serial letters. This has occasioned considerable extra work in the past and he has been forced by its discontinuance, to save the expense of this extra clerical work and at the same time increase the efficiency of the service given to motorists.

Over one hundred issuing offices are located at convenient points throughout the Province. As formerly, these Motor Vehicle Branch issuing offices can procure their permits and licenses by mail direct from the Department of Highways, Motor Vehicles Branch, Queen's Park, Toronto.

FOURTEEN NEW CASES

Toronto, Sept. 21 (CP)—An overnight death brought Toronto's toll of infantile paralysis cases to 26 today, as the Ontario Department of Health ordered preparations to construct two more "iron lungs." Fourteen new cases were reported in the past 24 hours.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Ravin' to go.

The liver should pour two pints of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food just decays in the stomach. Gas rises, you feel sour and the world looks punk. You need the bile to digest the fats in your food. Without bile, fats just can't be digested. Laxatives merely move the bowels. They don't make you feel right. To get these two pints of bile flowing freely and make you feel like a million, get from your druggist a few cents worth of Carter's Little Liver Pills. They do the work gently but surely, like Nature. Don't accept a substitute. Insist on Carter's Little Liver Pills. Use only as directed. 25c.

Boston, Sept. 21—(AP)—The United States Coast Guard today terminated its search for the British yacht Endeavour I, convinced she either had sunk, or was on her way to England.

The search ended after four Coast Guard craft scoured several thousand square miles of the North Atlantic in a search covering an area 450 miles east of Boston to Sable Island, off the Nova Scotia coast.

Endeavour I, in tow of the British Viva, broke her tow line during a gale a week ago, 200 miles east of Nantucket Lightship.

CHURCH FIRM AGAINST DICTATORS

Persecution of religious universities under European dictatorships and the readiness of Christians to suffer were cited in sermons of three New York ministers, two of them just returned from abroad.

That German Christians are ready to suffer martyrdom rather than lose hold upon their faith was the comment of Rev. Dr. Samuel Trexter.

"Wherever I worshipped during my stay in Germany," said Dr. Trexter, "I found the churches served by confessional pastors—pastors with convictions—crowded to the doors. When week-day services of intercession are held, although they can be announced only privately by word of mouth, immense throngs of prayerful people gather. They are again coming to know the value of intercession."

Dr. Trexter said that's leading German pastor told him if he had been asked ten years ago what percentage of the Protestant population of Germany was possessed of a living faith he should have said ten per cent. Today he would answer 25 per cent. "What it is again being proved that the blood of the martyrs is the seed of the church." He referred to the fact that one preacher read a list of 120 pastors now in prison for their faith.

The days of the Hitler regime were numbered when he began to dictate to Christianity and tried to take away its God-given freedom, said Rev. E. M. Wylie. He added "when Hitler could make the universities, labor organizations and fraternal bodies submit to him, he could not subdue the church where spiritual laws had greater force than his own." Christianity is resisting Hitler.

Speaking of the opposing forces at work today, Rev. Dr. A. K. Chalmers said: "There standing opposite the unrighteousness of our times is the goal and so on down the lines side by side are powers that remain completely antagonistic toward one another, while by the side of Christianity is marching a power fundamentally and totally different. He had the belief that there is something in the heart of the world that is meant for the good of every one of us. "The finer things in life will continue to go on not so much because it is necessary for them to go on, but because men will always find a need in their hearts to have them go on," Dr. Chalmers said.

The church today is "transitional" and the church of tomorrow will be "philanthropical," said Rev. Dr. Frank Oliver Hall who declared its chaotic state marks the growing pains of its readjustment to society. He said that some believed the church was making an exit, but "because the church is built on the same foundation as the home—the deepest instincts of the human soul—both will endure. There will be changes in the church just as there have been in the home. Caves became tents, tents cabins, cabins houses and houses apartment hotels. But the principle of the home remains, despite these changes in atmosphere." He insisted the church of the future must have a doctrine, not of controversy but of brotherhood and must have a divine service that will be fashioned along new concepts, a divine service of the strong toward the weak, the wise toward the ignorant, and the rich toward the poor.

Existing apathy of the people to the church would end when the church began to join hands with the school and the state, aiding them in their plans to institue social reforms.

2 VETERAN BRITISHERS

While the nations are shaking news of intense interest and while events are of the kind which cannot pass without notice, there is still the literary world which possesses something of interest to everyone. The New York Times for instance looks with pleasure on the words of Bernard Shaw and the work of H. G. Wells, admiring their interest in the life of man, of nations and of society. The Times says: "Bernard Shaw is back in the news, and himself again. He is again making funny remarks on subjects which most people find it difficult to joke about. He has just told a reporter that the present world situation embodies a life and death struggle between communism and bolshevism.

"This is no slip of the tongue or the pen. It is a struggle, said Mr. Shaw, between communism in Soviet Russia and bolshevism in Italy and Germany, and the battlefield is in Spain. What with Spanish holocausts and Soviet purges and Nuremberg field days and Italian radio barrages, one cannot but admire Mr. Shaw's genius for good, clean fun. His older readers will remember how gayly he summed up the case of Roger Casement after the execution.

"All in all, we prefer England's second Grand Old Man of literature, also characteristically engaged. H. G. Wells continues to pour out books and to retain confidence in the triumph of man's reason—some day."

A POLITICAL BATTLE IS ALWAYS AN INTERESTING ONE and the field of politics holds interesting and instructive possibilities for young Canadians. To be proficient in politics one must be conversant with the history of Canada, before and after Confederation, its various parliaments, federal and provincial, and the various great issues which were fought out on the political field, besides the party chieftains who helped to make Canadian history. Taking active part in politics makes for control of temper, tolerance, perhaps, generated by the views behind the scene which reveal that there is a good deal of good in both parties, getting away from the bitter strife and political hatred of early days. Young men can learn a lot by becoming interested in politics, listening to speakers and reading up on the politics of the day. Sifting exaggerations down to bed rock of truth is good and fruitful exercise—and learning always to stand for truth and righteousness in whatever party it may be found. In this regard Kipling's poem "If" should prove helpful to professional and amateur politicians in the heat of battle, as a morning prayer perhaps:

If you can keep your head while all about you are losing their's and blaming it on you;
If you can trust yourself when all men doubt you, but make allowance for their doubting too;
If you can wait and not be tired by waiting, or being lied about don't deal in lies,
Or being hated don't give way to hating, and yet don't look too good nor talk too wise.

If you can walk with crowds and keep your virtue, or walk with Kings nor lose the common touch,
If neither foes nor loving friends can hurt you, if all men count with you but none too much;
If you can fill the unforgiving minute with sixty seconds worth of distance run,
Yours is the earth and everything that's in it, and—which is more you'll be a MAN, my son.

DEATH OF ROBERT W. MARKS AT HIS HOME IN PERTH

inspired many editorial writers and columnists to expatiate on the romance of the ten, twenty, thirty days in Canada theatre annals. Marks Bros. were known from coast to coast as purveyors of cheap and wholesome entertainment, using the Laura Jean Libby brand of love stories which made a big hit in the hinterland. Marks Bros. could play anywhere there was a roof and room enough to turn around without bumping into something. Harry Lindley was another outstanding figure of early repertoire days and in his company Little Annie Bird, child actress, charmed theatregoers in Brockville, Kingston, Belleville and other good week stands (often longer). Little Annie Bird became Gladys Wallace, Broadway favorite, and afterwards Mrs. Samuel Insull, wife of the Chicago multi-millionaire who sought to control all the electric light and power companies of the West, succeeded, and then turned his eyes eastward, but tangled with the Wall Street crowd, and came a cropper — his kingdom being wrecked and himself a fugitive from justice—finally landing in Greece to be surrendered and brought back to this country. Now trying a comeback. Through all Samuel Insull's troubles his wife remained steadfast and true, and now she is helping him on the comeback road. Other repertoire companies travelled Canada but Harry Lindley was perhaps the favorite while Marks Bros. went on forever. However, the Marks Brothers are not all dead, by a good deal. There is a real live wire in Ernie Marks, one-time Mayor of Oshawa, and owner and operator of a theatre in the motor city. His wife, Kitty Marks, formerly Kitty Reynolds of Brockville, is still as bright and charming and youthful as in the days she trod the boards and delineated life, love and the pursuit of happiness—and there is still another Ernie Marks; their son; just graduated in law—and so as the saga of the Marks Bros. actors, fades into the distance, a new generation of Marks Bros. are arising to carry on the Marks tradition—for all the world's a stage.

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK

By R. J. SCOTT

APPEAL

We have not given away any timber areas. We have given away cutting rights on the limited acreage," he said in stating that these privileges carried obligations to erect mills and employ labor. He stated that the twelve mills now under construction would mean much one of the new industries. Thirty thousand are at work in the timber and newsprint industry now and will probably be fifty thousand at work, he stated.

Warm Welcome to Premier

It was a singularly warm welcome extended the Hon. Premier Mitchell Hepburn as he ended the close packed Tweed Pavilion where an estimated seven hundred persons of all ages had been given comfortable seating arrangements and until he mounting the prettily flower-decorated platform, the unsalaried warmth followed. Though not boisterous, it showed a definite feeling of expectancy, the satisfaction of which was not long miles to bear. Men in overalls and men in expensive tailored suits made up the attendance through which a generous sprinkling of women showed in the part. Many in cars listening to the loud speakers.

Previous to the opening of the meeting, Tweed Band, under the direction of Reg. Wilson, rendered several selections. And to the outside where a crowd of several hundred ranks of cars the sound of the musical notes carried clear and perfectly by an amplifying system.

On the Platform

Premier Hepburn was followed to the platform closely by Colin Campbell, candidate for Provincial Addington; "Mel" Brown, candidate for the Riding of Hastings-Peterboro; C. F. Neeb'an, Liberal executive organizer; Dr. Ross Hall, candidate for South Hastings; W. J. Gies, President of the Tweed Liberal Association; Dr. Ross Hall, President of the Hungerford Liberal Association; Reeve Bush, Tweed; and Collins, K.C.

J. D. Corcoran, Tweed, chairman of the meeting, voiced the welcome that was evident in the hall by again calling on the Premier to give the Premier to show it visibly.

"Your welcome comes from many distant points," declared Chairman Corcoran. "Though the Prime Minister is no stranger to Tweed, many here are welcoming you for the first time in a decade.

The acceptance of the nomination for the riding of Hastings at the coming election by F. Mel Brown was declared by Mr. Corcoran to be the most visible sign of friends that could be paid the Premier. "Now that you are visits," declared the chairman amidst a sustained outbreak of applause.

Richer and Poorer

The Prime Minister of Ontario took a few minutes to survey the island, which would set up a government which would have the same privileges as a result of which one section would grow rich, the other poor. Surplus would have to be supplied and money borrowed. As some of the people had not money, the government would borrow and start a national debt. The money would be borrowed from those who had means. This would explain the succeeding debt in Ontario until the Liberals took power.

"This is the condition in which I found the province in 1934," the Premier said. "It was in this province poverty and misery stalking up and down the land in 1934, I recognized we had to change the policies of the government. We have gone the hard way. After three years we have been able to pass back something to you in the form of tax reductions and grants.

Reopened Revenue, Lower Taxes

"Mr. Howe calls us a taxing government. We have increased the revenue, but not the taxes. As far as Hastings is concerned we have not looked for increased revenue, but we have been able to pass back tax reductions."

Mr. Hepburn detailed some of the reductions. He pointed out that the twenty per cent tax removal on gasoline would be expended when over $250,000. In the last session we increased the grants to rural roads. Now we are not only matching up the cost of highways to the people," the Premier said.

He turned to the Old Age pensions, which he termed the most humane of measures. Under the present government the county of Hastings had been saved $72,000 a year and from Mothers' Allowances the saving was $20,000. For the county, it was pointed out.

Not all this was accomplished by the government under the present system, he said.

Grants to the People

The one mill subsidy was explained by Mr. Hepburn who pointed out that whereas Hastings was collecting only $1115 in income taxes, in the form of grants the county was giving the County the amount of $20,000. "We have increased the net aside for this purpose. Your share is $20,900. It must be some satisfaction to you to know that you have a government which gives you back more than it collects," the 266 greater than the amount this county was collecting.

Mr. Hepburn pointed out that the assessment tax removal meant a saving to Hastings of approximately $43. He then turned to the school examinations for which the government had removed. "I believe in the reform school of thought by which believed in responsible government and free schools," the Premier said. "In that connection C. Henry, saw fit to impose a tax on the people to carry school and put each examination paper, this the government removed, thereby relieving on school children. As a consequence of its abolition by the Hepburn Government the parents of Ontario have been saved many thousands of dollars.

No Election Dodge, Premier Says

"We have reduced fees on motor-car licenses. This is not an election dodge," the Prime Minister said. He told that back in last winter he had promised a substantial reduction this year in the automobile tax if the condition warranted it. This was rightly in line with the government policy, he declared. That five dollars' reduction on passenger cars and the other reductions on motors will be a benefit to industry as well as individuals. As a result of the passing to the people of a total of over $20,000,000 in reduced taxes and subsidy he saw great benefits to trade.

Courageous Government

Mr. Hepburn stated that the people of Ontario ought to be grateful to the Hydro and the government that Ontario possessed a government which had the courage to take such action as meant such savings to the people. In 1934 he had found, he said huge debts when he went into office.

"At that time we were paying $22,000,000 yearly for direct relief alone. It took a lot of backbone to try to straighten out the situation caused by this mass of debt.

Administration Costs Cut

"We decided on a course of action to cut down the cost of administration. We started right at the top cutting our salaries two thousand dollars apiece. We gathered in 84 cars used by Mr. Henry's government and had them properly instigated and put all the money we got from them back into the hands of the people."

"Hon. Dr. Reburn" and all the members and myself have driven less than 20,000 miles per year and not a cent has been charged to the province," he said.

"I wonder if the Hon. Mr. Howe is aware we abolished the Trenton motion picture industry. There were 46 salaried officials in the work associated with this branch of government. We let them go. I was criticized for that action.

Ontario House in London

The closing of the Ontario House in London was dealt with. It was found he said that in the years 1923-1934 there had been brought through this agency to Ontario one man. "We have not been able to find that man," the Premier remarked. Since then every province in Canada has followed Ontario's example.

Mr. Howe says he will reopen it. "I can't see for the life of me why he wants it for." Hepburn commented.

He referred to Mr. Howe's statement that farmers of Ontario had lost ten million dollars by the closing of the Ontario House. As a farmer Mr. Hepburn said he found exports of Ontario to Britain had jumped from $128,000,000 to $256,000,000. If that is the result it is unfortunate, he said, that Ontario did not have three or four such offices.

There was only one way to stop the accumulation of the huge sums money in the hands of few and scattered people. "The world finds even the Conservatives would have some kind of sympathy for the people," the Premier declared, "instead of decrying disparagingly of the Tories." When I found the manner in which tario becoming poorer, I decided on drastic steps to meet it in the depth of the greatest of depressions known.

Lands And Forests "Out of Red"

The Lands and Forests Department was discussed briefly. "I found when the Liberals took over the Lands and Forests in the administration of the province government, said Mr. Hepburn. Many properties had been sold under the Crown and had gone into the hands of speculators. Twelve huge mills were incorporated and are being built with international capital. Now the newsprint industry was in a depleted condition. We deficit with 27,000 men. Today we have 30,000 men employed in the industry. In the U.S. was likely to cause removal of mills to the U.S. Ontario has the largest newsprint mills and there was little doing in the building of this necessary mill.

Mr. Hepburn said: "So we introduced the Timber Conservation Bill. This provided the means by which the government could recover allegations to Hastings was given to the result was that inside of three months 4,000,000 acres were taken up. Now the newsprint industry is the greatest debt ever handed down to any incoming government.

"You have to choose between two political parties and two political ideals.

"I have made mistakes and am of an human nature," he said, in remarking that he believed the people of Ontario would prefer him to Mr. Henry's "Conservatism" and lack of constructive ideas.

Where Hepburn Stands

"You know where I stand."

Mr. Hepburn has always been one of business administration.

"Our friend Ed Brown understands the needs of the farmers.

"I know we suffered defeat in this riding and I appreciate my friends, I come back and tell you I am not ashamed of the campaign I have carried on."

Mr. Hepburn predicted victory in East Hastings for Colin Campbell, the greatest majority ever accorded any candidate in this riding.

The East Hastings candidate was the first speaker to be introduced to the audience and as he arose the handicapping welcome was no less than that extended the Premier.

"I assure you it is a pleasure to be here," simply thanked Mr. Brown, the candidate.

He would not, he told his hearers go into detail on the many subjects which he explained would be given in detail by following speakers.

"I am only here to try and support Mr. Hepburn," he declared, "for which I think has done a great deal for the country during their short term of office, and I respectfully ask other way of helping than by offering my services in any manner you saw fit to ask.

Taxes Reduced Says' Brown.

Mr. Hepburn has done all he could to reduce taxes, and in this he has succeeded. That is why we have expected him to do. There is no further need to explain the different phases by which this was accomplished, because it has the deserved tribute by the manner in which they have been carried out.

"If you don't need me in Tweed again before this election date give serious consideration to the fact that by giving me your vote, Mr. Hepburn and party will be elected here, at least. Just say it is a ballot for "Mel" Brown, the Liberal supporter," concluded the candidate.

Mr. Brown Praised

Mr. Colin Campbell, M.P., for Frontenac Addington, declared his feelings had always been friendly toward Tweed and district because it was where he had called on business for many years. "I am back now" only to renew those friendships made, but to come as a neighbor and just speak a few words for Mr Brown, another neighbor whom you have selected as candidate in East Hastings. You are privileged to have him in this riding, one which is always a rural one. Ed didn't seek this nomination. He has never been active in politics. He accepted merely because he thought he could best serve this way."

It was pointed out by the speaker that of the three members in this section only one genuine farmer has been named candidate by a party, which should have good representation of men from the farm.

"Legislation should represent a full cross section of the Province."

Choosing Sides

Carrying the matter further, it was added by Mr. Campbell that an election was not a contest between two parties, it is the selection of a party best fitted for the job, he said.

"You don't have to look very far to know the Hon. Mr. Hepburn's feelings in his dealings with the citizens of Ontario and the neighbors of his own riding. He has always used the motto of never doing a mean thing, be it opposition or anyone else.

Mr. Hepburn told you before the last election he could and would reduce the taxation rate, and cut down the heavy mounting debt. You know he has done it, and now he comes again to ask you to reelect him to office so that he can finish out those things he has started and carried out so well. He has been criticized for calling this election at this time. But, his opponents politically and he worried, because they are going down to defeat on October 6th. He has known his work and now he is back again take office if you believe in his principles. Vote for Hepburn," Mr. Campbell said vociferous applause.

Soil Scientist Dies of Snake Bite

Rapid City, S.D., Sept. 21.—(AP) Dr. Paul D. Emerson, 50, Senior Soil Conservation Service, died in a local surgery eight miles from here while attempting to stem the poison of a rattlesnake bite.

Dr. Emerson's left leg and body slumped against his machine yesterday. Arming the left leg below the knee was a tourniquet Dr. Emerson had applied in an effort to prevent the poison from spreading from the bite on his ankle.

The victim also had cut a razor blade to make an incision. In his hand was a suction pump, part of the equipment he carried in a new snake-bite kit.

EX-DOUGHBOYS IN LIMELIGHT

American Legion Holds Monster Convention at New York

New York, Sept. 21—(OP)—The 600,000-member Veterans of Foreign Wars—a non-political legendary of ex-doughboys—will join the rest of New York got the week, today from a Thousand Legionnaires and Auxiliaries who set the town on wheels for the American Legion's annual convention.

The visitors, crowding close to the 500,000-mark reached the peak of their celebrations with a mammoth parade down Fifth Avenue starting about the time ordinary city dwellers were hitting the subways.

When the last trumpet has been blown and the legionnaires "dismiss" they should be as tired as they were eager at the start of the line.

Old madmuzzell and the quaint little spot that is Manhattan virtually reeled from the long and jubilating parade which carried not so musical salute from the doughboys of '17 and '18.

The "40 and eight" section, the world-in-itself Legion hundred-spot hundreds of thousands of New Yorkers, pop-eyed with amazement. They gazed about in models of accessories pulling miniature french, 75 millimeter guns, caissons and cherans.

West Fifth Avenue shops were solidly boarded up as protection against the witnessed invasion. Soksamiths and tireless paraders, some of them palama-clad, held the traffic lights at Fifth Avenue corner and support trenches within a half mile of Times Square and more. They had outposts in the financial district itself.

The noise of bands, fife and drum corps, toy cannons, cowbells and the ululations of the Shriners' Mystic visitors were in town rather than a mere 500,000.

Stirling and District

St. Paul's W. A. Held Open Meeting and Tea

Stirling—Ladies from all parts of Hastings County gathered at St. Paul's United Church on Thursday afternoon, representing the Women's organizations of all three main Protestant denominations, they were guests at an open meeting sponsored by St. Paul's Women's Association. Mrs. Cecil Maddick, President of the local Association, presided over the meeting and introduced the various musical numbers and speakers which assisted in the presentation of one of the most interesting and helpful programs presented in Stirling for some time. The meeting opened with the singing of a theme song "Let the Beauty of Jesus be Seen in Me," Rev. W. J. Scott, pastor of St. Paul's Church led in prayer and the address of welcome to the visitors was made by Mrs. (Rev.) W. J. Scott. The first musical number on the program was an instrumental solo by Mrs. Arthur Pyear of Carmel Church organization was expected to contribute one number to the program and St. John's Anglican Women's Guild's share was a vocal solo by Mrs. H. J. Wills with Mrs. H. H. Alger at the piano. Mrs. McKeown of the Springstrow W. A. offered an interesting reading on this time, and Mrs. Sine of Scott's United Church W. A. contributed the program with solo on the auto harp, "Will Your Anchor Hold."

Mrs. Maddick read communications which had been received from several societies expressing their regret at being unable to have representation present but which mentioned phone calls that had been received expressing greetings. Speaker of Afternoon is Mrs. Lord Lott, Past President of the District Association and at present time District Representative. Speaking with authority gained on four years of activity in the work the speaker stressed the need for unity of purpose among the members with their leaders in any enterprise undertaken. "Dependability is Characteristic of a good Women's Association," she concluded as she pointed to the life of Ruth as a biblical example of what a woman did in the real sense natural way. There is still great need for win women who have courage to stand firm for right, if we do our best for the Master He will do His best for us. The aim of W. A. workers must ever be to lead the people to "Live the life Christ-like He, leaving all sin out.

This was a most inspiring address and the expression of gratitude by all those present was very ably extended by Mrs. Macklin as she rose to thank the speaker.

Greetings were brought by Mrs. Gould, Mrs. Ketcheson and Mrs. Lazier of the Methodist Church W. A. and Mrs. Aid gave an interesting reading entitled "Mother's Day." The closing number of the meeting was brought to a close with the singing of a hymn the Mizpah Benediction. The ladies of the Stirling organization were then invited to a delightful tea served in the Church parlour with a large number of visitors from other parts present to attend and hear J. W. Edmison, Secretary-Manager of the Downs Coulter Textile Company.

TRENTON

Trenton, Sept. 21 (Special)—The Trenton Rotary Club gave a banquet last night in honour of the C.N.R. Officials from Toronto and Belleville were present along with a number of Trenton C.N.R. employees. The guest speaker of the evening was F. J. Raymond, Commissioner of Industry for the C.N.R. in Toronto. Mr. Raymond started his railroading in Trenton. He could drive along the highway between Trenton and Toronto and never meet a transport if trucking companies only received the business they provided he said.

In the neighbourhood of $60.-000,000 worth of Canadian raw materials are purchased by railroads each year he said and 130,-000 men are employed by both railway companies who show a combined payroll of $180,000,000 annually. GOOD MANNERS

by MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Invitable Acknowledgment

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Please tell me how to acknowledge a wedding invitation? I used to go to school with the bride-to-be and I have met the bride-to-be just four times, and have never met her parents. The invitation is to the church and to the reception following the ceremony. Needless to say, I will be in a distant state and I will be unable to attend . . . but I am most anxious to acknowledge the invitation correctly.

E.

It's important indeed that we show our very best manners in acknowledging this important invitation. First we must use nice-looking letter-paper, preferably white or gray or light blue, double-sheeted; and of as good a quality as we can afford.

The answer should be written on the first page of the paper, and it should be spaced as near as possible like the spacing of the invitation. And written in our "best brand" of handwriting.

It is not necessary to answer the church invitation . . . it is the reception invitation that must be acknowledged. And like this:

Miss Mary Wells Allen
regrets that she is unable to accept Mr. and Mrs. . . . .'s kind invitation for their daughter's wedding reception on Tuesday, the first of October at four o'clock

Since your answer is a "regret" it is unnecessary to mention the place and hour of the invitation.

The envelope should be address-ed to Mr. and Mrs. . . . . the bride's parents.

Small Home Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am planning to be married this fall. I would like to have a quiet home wedding with only a few friends attending. I don't want anyone to give me away. I want to have the wedding just as simple as it would be if I went to a judge, only I want it at home.

Should the groom's gift be sealed as soon as they arrive, or would it be correct for them to open them and call out the music starts?

2—Is it necessary to have music? I have a friend who has and a groom just walk in together and have their attendant follow them, or should the best man and the groom come in one way and the bride and her attendant come from the other door?

3—Would it be in good taste for the bride to carry a bouquet of flowers?

A Friend.

1—It isn't necessary for the guests to be seated. There would be a few chairs for those who wish to be seated, say a few elderly guests. But there are only a few minutes to wait, and usually the guests as a whole wedding, are delighted standing, until it is apparent that the ceremony is about to begin.

2—No, it is not necessary to have music at such an informal and small home wedding.

3.—Even at such an informal wedding the bride and groom should not come into the room together. It is not necessary that they come from separate entrances. But the minister enters first, and takes his place at the head of the ceremony, facing the guests. Following him come the groom and his best man. Then the bride and her father at the head of the ceremony-place. Then comes the bride's attendant, and last the bride. Since you are to have no one give you in marriage, you and your attendant should walk together.

Your attendant stands at the left of the prospective groom, and the best man stands at the right. You and the groom face the minister, you as the left of the groom. After the ceremony the minister offers you best wishes and congratulates the groom. Then you turn in your places and receive the felicitations of the guests.

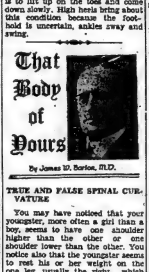
4—Yes.

Tall Woman Should Study Lines, Colors

Athletic Figure Means She Cannot Wear Fluff Stuff

KAY FRANCIS
She has made a study of line and color in dressing to suit her figure.

(By Helen Follett)



In her element now is the woman with long legs and long body. She is the tall, lily-like type. The bouffant skirts of evening frocks are her social fashion dish. Her first beauty duty is to her arms since too thin ones get no prizes. A pair of Indian clubs will turn the trick. Ten minutes of club swinging night and morning for her.

The athletic woman with firm muscles, like the woman with too much figure—broad shoulders, narrow hips and heavy thighs—can't go in for romantic swathing attire. She must avoid the lovely fluff stuff, stick to plain "dress" and simple lines. Madame Fashion has much to offer for her in the way of sartorial splendor.

Dress is so large an item in good looks that it's up to every woman to make a study of line and color, find out just what suits her type and her figure.

When ankles are weak, fatigue should be avoided, especially fatigue caused by long periods of standing. Shoes must be carefully selected; sometimes it is necessary to have heels that slope slightly lifted at the inner side.

One way to make ankles strong is to lift up on the toes and come down slowly. High heels bring about this condition because the foot-hold is uncertain, ankles sway and swing.

TRUE AND FALSE SPINAL CURVATURE

You may have noticed that your youngster, more often a girl than a boy, seems to have one shoulder higher than the other or one hip protruding more than the other. You notice also that the youngster seems to rest his or her weight on the one leg, and that the child also lowers the shoulder on that side as does the shoulder on the opposite side.

You may or may not be surprised then when the family physician reports that there is a spinal curvature present and that treatment is necessary.

Most school physicians are fortunately quite familiar with true and with false curvature and can give the necessary instructions as to what is necessary.

When there is just one long curve present in the spine causing it to be left, it is because the youngster has the habit of standing on the right foot. This puts left shoulder high and right shoulder low as mentioned and also causes left shoulder or raising right shoulder as the spine can be straightened into straight line, with the tops or bottoms of the shoulder blades (the wings) even on the same level and the youngster is instructed to bend forward, with hands well above the head, the "curve" sideways disappears, as the spine becomes perfectly straight. Repeating a few times morning and evening on a pair of rings with the spine on the low shoulder side higher than the other, and turning the youngster and stand on the opposite side may be thinks about it, this "false" type of spinal curvature can be corrected in a few months; the younger the child the sooner the time necessary to obtain the correction.

If, however, there are two curves in the spine, one to the left and the other to the right, this is true lateral spinal curvature—scoliosis, and the spine cannot be brought straight by the method used in false curvature. An orthopedic specialists should be consulted.

While the false type can be corrected by gymnastics and corrective exercises, the true type requires more severe measures—plaster cast,

MOTHER OF FIVE WHO WAS ALWAYS TIRED

Now Awakes as Fresh as a Daisy

A mother of five has a lot to do. Especially a country mother. And this one was "always tired". Mrs. Kruschen ended all that—now she gets up, feeling fresh, at five o'clock in the morning! She writes: "I find Kruschen Salts the best thing money can buy for my health. I am the mother of five children, and before taking Kruschen I was always feeling tired and run down. Now, I am glad to say that I get up feeling fresh—and I get up at five o'clock in the morning. I do my housework; look after my children, and leave the house at 8:30 to start my daily work."—(Mrs.) B.

Tiredness and that run-down feeling can be traced to one root cause. That cause is internal sluggishness; failure to keep the inside free from poisonous, waste matter. Kruschen Salts is an excellent recipe for maintaining a condition of internal cleanliness. The numerous salts in Kruschen stimulate your internal organs to smooth, regular action. Your inside is thus kept clear of those impurities which, when allowed to accumulate, lower the whole tone of the system.

brace, exercise, and massage. If the youngster is to have a straight spin in the days to come. And, if he or she is spared to grow into a lusty youngster to go through life with an unsightly spinal curvature.

CARMEL W.M.S.

The September meeting of Carmel W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. Frank Howes with the President, Mrs. Cornelius, in charge of the Worship Service. Miss Pearle Patterson was called upon to speak to the Sectional Rally to be held in Trenton on Oct. 1st.

Mrs. Mitchell told the story of the book which she had just read which was very interesting a reading by Mrs. Hinton and one by Mrs. Howes. Mrs. Howes and Olive Howes completed the program. Lunch was served by the hostess and the group in charge and a social time spent together.

AT THE BELLE

"Between Two Women"
Dramatic Eternal Triangle in Great Metropolitan Hospital Tens and Maureen O'Sullivan.

A dramatic story of love and tense emotion in the life of a great metropolitan hospital, entitled "Between Two Women" is announced as the feature-length picture at the Capitol now (Thursday) and Friday, matinee daily. It was produced by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and features Virginia Bruce, Lewis Stone and Jessie Ralph.

The story is an original, based on actual observations by Erich Von Stroheim, one of the most colorful characters in Hollywood, formerly a noted director.

Tone is excellent in the role of an ambitious young interne, while Bruce is an heiress who goes to the hospital as a patient and falls in love with him. Miss O'Sullivan appears as a nurse, unhappily married, who secretly loves the interne herself.

Doctor and heiress marry and their future is threatened when he contracts of another man, also a doctor. Complications arise and the nurse. Then her husband is brought in, an emergency case. If he lives then he will be cured for ever. Should he die the way is open for the nurse and doctor. How and what follow will be found gripping and to reveal here would be to spoil the tense suspense enjoyment of a dramatic climax.

The cast is strengthened by effective backgrounds, and realistic hospital scenes. Stone plays in their best without exception. In the supporting cast are Cliff Edwards, as a radio announcer who is a telephone operator, Janet Beecher, Monty Woolley, Ted Healy, head nurse, Leonard Penn, actor-husband of Gladys George, as a diabetic surgeon; Ted Pearson, Henry Grazewin, Grace Ford, June Clayworth, Edward Brophy, Anthony Nace and Hugh Marlowe.

Jean Chalburn, Gregory Gaye, Bill Constanzo, and Arthur Auerbach will be seen in another of those popular Leon Belasco Symphonic Rhythm-Mayer miniature musical comedies this one appropriately titled "Sometime Orchestra."

Joe Cunningham, Kathleen Lockhart and Robert Middlemass will be seen in an amusing and entertaining human story entitled "Heart Courage", that proves that "Courage is not another word for Success". Fox.

Josie Mansfield, charmer of the Jazz-Civil War period, is brought to lower her loyalty to Jim Fisk, picturesque railroad baron, who gives her an extravagant stage opportunity and her love for Fisk's best friend and business partner in "The Toast of New York". Josie Mansfield is played by lovely Frances Farmer, co-starred with Edward Arnold, Cary Grant and Jack Oakie. Also interesting News of the Day and Wendall Hall in a new community sing will also be presented. Performance starts at 7.00 and 9.10.

Let's Go! TO THE MOVIES

Here are Ways To Improve Walking

GAIL PATRICK
She knows the importance of walking properly

(By Helen Follett)

What do you do with your knees when you walk? How you use them is important. If they are held too rigid, the step is jerky and ungraceful. If they plunge forward, posture is bad, and the tummy becomes prominent and shoulders are out of alignment.

When feet are not comfortable, it is difficult to use the knees properly. With shoes easy, properly fitted, the step is light. High heels send the upper portion of the body out of balance, and there is a strain on knees as well as the lower portion of the legs.

When the knees are kept tightly bent, there is tension of the entire body. You can limber them by standing on one foot, holding to a chair back to steady yourself, swinging the other foot in wide circles. Then the limb swing and the foot up in the air as high as you can fling it. Keep leg and foot relaxed.

Walk on a low chair, have the toes on the floor, life and lower the heels slowly.

Don't curl up your nose at exercise. It is of boundless benefit in the case of beauty.

The Popular Girl

Has Poise and Personality

If you are fidgety and irritable,
And have developed the worry habit,
Your company will not be much sought after.
But you can develop poise and personality,
Which are prime essentials of popularity.
The foundation of charm is health and vitality.
Plain healthful foods, a reasonable amount of exercise,
Deep breathing and erect carriage,
All these are conducive to health.
If you are thin and bloodless and irritable,

And restore vigor to the nervous system.

You will have the vitality and vivacity,
Which above all else give a girl charming personality.

Time to Let Up on the Poor Mother-in-law

It seems to me high time that the jokesmith stopped hammering at the mother-in-law, for a daily stunt.

She has filled the comic strips and been the target for bitter humor since "the memory of man runneth not to the contrary."

Before declaring a plea for this often domestic martyr, please let me say that I am a mother-in-law. I do not have I ever had one. There is nothing personal in my plea. And I have known countless women in that capacity, who have been veritable angels of mercy to the homes of sons and daughters.

They have shared home with the children, when their parents were out gadding and dancing. They have told long bedtime stories, seen to their meals and clothes. And in these days, when marriage seems to have the effect of speeding up pleasure-mad young married people right and left, it is a blessing to settle down, it is well that somebody in the home should be safe and sane.

Scores of letters have come to this column from young married women who write to me for suggestions as to the best methods of disloding their husbands' mothers from their own homes. The mother-in-law has come to stay and stay home, may have helped to buy it through her thrift and savings, but her son's wife thinks it's quite all right for her mother-in-law to step down and out, and the mother-in-law leaves the coast clear for the bride.

I'm aware that not all mothers-in-law are easy to deal with. Sometimes their interference is a maddlesome. But against the day when the young wife will no longer be young, and owing to some unfavorable turn in the wheel of fortune she may find herself a dependent child in the house of a son or daughter—let her stop and be kind.

Nearly all older women, including mothers-in-law, have a propensity the days when they tried to keep around them, it's a hangover from to regulate the lives of those the young veil and civilized by reminding them to overturn mirdiers, spinach for dinner and to "grow up" to be somebody.

I'm willing to be mothered and mind—if when you're so sure of your own ideas that you can and think that all of this worrying and fussing on the part of an older woman is nothing more than misplaced devotion.

Older women are, of course, foolish to let their affections run away, and in their way, Mothers-in-law with the wisdom of greater experience may see the pit yawning, but it's well to keep quiet and let the shock of tumbling in to the pit do the disillusioning.

A wifely influence over her husband is never more strongly illustrated than in the ways and means her jealousy takes to make him forget the mother who bore him. There are then—and not bad men and women who never go to see their mothers, never write them letters, or remember them at Christmas or on birthdays. Women are seldom so insensible.

And even if the wife's mother has no welcome at her son-in-laws fireside—her daughter never quite forgets MOTHER.

Children who have never known the companionship of that faithful of allies—a grandmother—have missed a good deal.

What is Underlying Cause If Child Cheats in School?

(By Lisa Grenelle)

Marie hadn't been doing very well in spelling, or in arithmetic, either. Not since Miss Reynolds started dictating so fast. Miss Reynolds always assumed that every child knew a thing, if you couldn't answer immediately. And Marie could never answer anything immediately. She always had to have time to think. She had a good mind, but it was slow, like her father's.

Nobody, however, neither teacher nor parent, took him into account. Everybody was down on Marie.

Miss Reynolds said she didn't know her lessons properly, and kept her after school. Mother and father shook their heads and scolded her over the reports. If things didn't improve, they said, a new home would have to be found for Marie's puppy.

All of which made life very miserable for Marie. Nobody, she felt, liked her. Nobody appreciated the fact of her anymore. And the more she tried to be quick, the worse it was. Frightened and confused, she always gave the wrong answer.

Then Marie found a way out. Frances Black, who sat next her in spelling, had a steel-trap mind. She never made a mistake, she wrote down every word Miss Reynolds dictated, clearly, correctly, and then had time left over to draw faces on the blotter.

Marie found that by leaning over a little she could see Frances' mind's paper, and check up her own words from it.

And in arithmetic Marie had a friend who was willing for the price of a chocolate bar to show the correct answers.

Have Despair

All of which worked out very well until Marie was caught. Then she was disgraced.

Did that teach Marie anything? It taught her that the world was against her. It taught her shame and despair, and gave her a deeper sense of inferiority. But it didn't teach her to take dictation quickly, because Marie was not faced with that kind of mental equipment.

If you have discovered that your Jimmie or Jane cheats at school, don't jump on them with both feet—not immediately, at any rate. Don't be severe until you have asked yourself, and them, a few tactful questions.

Why did they do it? Were their lessons properly prepared? What is their home study hour regular and uninterrupted? Have they learned to check by example of a classmate or of a parent? Have they caught you cheating, or perhaps hearing one of the little white lies you use to avoid a row?

Are you demanding too much of them? Would they be happier in a lower class?

Finally, do you praise them for sincere and independent endeavor, or only for completed accomplishment?

Little Benny's Note Book

I was around at the barber shop having my hair cut and the little barber was cutting it and talking to the big barber, saying, I see by the paper, Fred, where some good is working out a machine for cutting hair. Why where all a man will have to do is put it on his face and turn the crank and it will get it nice ahead and give him a shave while he is at home and ready for the morning paper.

I knew it was coming, Joe, the little barber said. The machine age is catching up to the barber shops. Pretty soon they will have a machine for shaving and then the machine for cutting hair and then the thing will be complete. Just the universal machine for the barber shop. One number of machines and the smallest number of help. Yes, the unequal distribution, Joe, he said.

Just Fred, a machine is stronger than an hour, any day, the little barber said and the big barber said, O I dont know, a lot can be done to the biggest machine in existence, but there is a little something of that. I was thinking there's only 24 hours in a day, and I need a little sleep, but there's millions of machines ready to be turned loose, so let's suppose there's so little work left for us barbers that the union finds quite our working time down to one hour a day, what's the next step that'll be said.

A half an hour, that's an easy one, the little barber said, and the big barber said, Yes, but after that?

After that we can all go on relief at the public expense and practice using the unfortunate shaving machines on ourselfs. I dont see what you're worrying about, Fred, the little barber said, and the big barber said, Your brain is working overtime. You'll get a headake, Joe.

Being the last I heard on account of the little barber giving me a shave just then to prove he was finished.

Interrupted Romance

By Billie Carne Thom

"Angus!" She looked down at him, laughing. "Do I like Angus?" "Oh, I saw you on the beach this morning." Tod said, soberly. "You went for a walk together. But I don't mind. I like him, too." They were near the house and the men were coming down the steps. Army officers.

Tod said in lowered voice, "The tall, jolly one is Lieutenant Jerry. He's nice." And looking up at the men, Judy saw that Jerry was tall, jolly, but not in the least jolly-looking at the moment. Polly regarded with a start that she had looked the man full in the face and had recognized Jerry Bell.

Since he had told her on the ferry he worked on Fort Moultrie she had thought of him as everything from a civilian clerical employee to an enlisted man who may have been anything from a cook to a top sergeant—but no once had she pictured him as the tall, good-looking officer who now came down the steps and suddenly, as Polly's heart sank, gave her a quick, military salute. The other officers touched their caps and passed on in a moment Polly and Lieutenant Jerry had gone off alone.

Tod said, wistfully, "Ile wasn't even looking at me. He only looked at you, Polly—and smiling."

Polly stared after Jerry Bell's tall figure.

Fordell came out on the porch. He looked very handsome. He held himself over, slipped between his father's long legs and disappeared into the house. Fordell said, "Sit down, Miss Markey. I need a little advice. We'll just have a few minutes."

But the chat stretched into half an hour before Fordell opened the screen door. "We have a few minutes more, Polly," he said. "Before you want to come in, I'll show you the combination to the safe. I don't want to put my little prize package into strange anyway. And," he added, smiling, "you'll want to know something about your original and unique system of filing."

Entering the study, Polly's eyes first immediately on the bronze figure on the mantel that had been the door. The "Frog Baby" had been pulled around on her small base so that she faced the door, whereas yesterday, Polly remembered distinctly, she had faced Fordell's desk. Polly switched the figure to its original position.

Fordell had stopped to turn on the radio. "Now, you see," he said, "the early market report begins at 10:30 a.m. Eastern Standard Time. Well leave the door open until it does." He started to leave, then turned back. "There's no reason why we shouldn't put the time to good use, Polly," he said. "I'm one blundered in. We should be finished before the radio is ready, one than examining some very dry books."

He stepped behind the door, pointed to the lowest shelf and said, "Count up from the bottom one, two, three, four . . . and ran his finger across a book called 'Green's History of the English People.' He said "Volume Six—remember?" Polly, who had nodded, he removed Volume Six and inserted a small key in the back of the shelf Polly saw a simple little safe combination of a small knob of metal with a nook on the end. The tongue was fastened to the door. Fordell took stopped over a tiny catch fastened to the shelf, and the door swung gently open. Fordell said, "But it works. All you do is release it by this little latch and pull on the shelves. Like to try it?"

Polly went through the formula. "Excellent!" Fordell laughed. The radio announcer's voice announced, "Mr. Coleruce, financial editor of The Charleston Courier-Gazette will now give the early market report. . . Mr. Coleruce . . ."

Fordell closed the living room and sat near the radio. A moment later Polly heard the big barber's voice on the porch.

Polly could not hear what was said, but the sound of Garbrook's pleasant voice accelerated her heartbeat. She was sitting primly in Through a crack in the door Polly saw the screen door bang open, and had a racquet under his arm. A smile quivered on her lips and then vanished as the living room—then suddenly she halted in her tracks. The "Frog Baby" had caught the sun's rays and in the absence of the little figure commanded her complete attention. Polly's heart thumped wildly on the file. The base with its upright peg that fitted into the hole in the figure was here, but the "Frog Baby" was missing, absent. Fordell moved it? No one else had been in the room—but why should he? Polly choked as she heard the door quickly, spoke to Fordell.

"Mr. Bell," Fordell said, frowning. "I haven't touched it."

"Polly said, "It was there five minutes ago. I—"

Fordell smiled his incredulity. "The thing couldn't have walked off, Miss Markey." Then he leaned over and picked up the "Frog Baby" and was instantly on his feet, hurrying into the hall.

INSTALMENT 3

Polly stepped into the room. Her self-control was tottering between her. They were both watching Fordell's distorted features.

"It was here," Fordell said at last, and put a finger on a corner of his desk. "There's no possibility of a mistake. When the Army officers let a short time ago, I left it up—just as it was when you and Miss Markey—and put it here." Polly remembered that slight little roll of note paper tied with red string as vividly as if she were seeing it this moment.

Angus came into the room. "I don't want to intrude," he said, "but I should be of service."

Fordell looked at him. "Angus, I don't know. Garbrook. There were some notes, purely technical data, of mine in my safe one else, but of great value to me. I had a delegation of Army men here this morning and took the notes out. When the men left, I tied the notes with a red string and put them on my desk. I went out to the porch and found Miss Markey there and we sat on the porch for a time talking. Then we came in and we spent a few minutes looking over some of my books. When Miss Markey came to the door and said the bronze figure was missing, I thought of course of you. He fitted his big hands in a gesture of utter bewilderment.

"But about this bronze figure?" Angus said. "Here—you said, Polly——"

Polly faced him. "It was on the desk when we came in from the porch," she declared. "Some one must have come in a moment Tod and I were in the hall and stopped to center it on its base." Polly after Angus had left the room. Fordell protested, "can't you see how impossible it would be for me to remove the bronze figure when we were standing less than three feet away?"

"Now just a moment." Angus said, smiling. "I'm going to speak. Is the base where it was when you last saw it?"

"Yes," Polly said.

"Then I suggest you and Mr. Fordell standing when you were looking at his books?"

"Yes," said Fordell. "What's that?" he said, abruptly. "Oh, yes." He went to the window. "Miss Markey——"

Polly quickly joined beside him. "And the door was closed, of course?" Angus said.

"As a matter of fact, it wasn't," Fordell replied. "I was waiting for the 10:30 report to come in on the radio and——"

"Then the door was open—about six?" Angus opened the door until it was at right angles to the wall. "Just about like that." And realized suddenly that the base on which the bronze piece had rested was hidden from view by the open door.

Angus came and stood beside Polly. "What was to prevent some one coming in from the hall or the living room, taking the figure from the base, slipping out into the hall, closed the door, replacing the figure from here, and with the radio going, couldn't possibly have heard anything."

"Oh, but——" Polly began, and was silent as Fordell's voice cut across her own.

"Why bother our heads about the bronze piece?" he demanded. His impatience. "The thing was of no value. But my notes—surely, Garbrook, you can't believe that thief walked across this room, picked up my notes and left without our hearing him?"

Angus looked at the desk, frowned his eyes down to the door. "No, I'm afraid not. The only plausible explanation is that the thief made his two visits to this room, taking the notes when no one was in the room or on the porch, and coming back for the bronze figure when you two were standing behind the door. Unless, of course, the notes are still here."

Fordell insisted on a systematic search. Finally he urged Fordell to empty his pockets—which the latter did, grumblingly.

"I tell you," Fordell declared, "that I put the notes in the center of the desk when I left the room, Garbrook. Certainly not in my pocket. I may as well admit that now."

Angus nodded, slowly. "I suppose you will want to call in a professional operator to try to trace the thief. I'll give a hand, too. I'll be glad to do it, of course."

Polly stared at the figure on the floor then his head came up. "I suppose you wouldn't like to call in the police, Mr. Bell—the devil to stir up more fuss than about——" Fordell interrupted her. "Don't be your own fee."

"I'll say what I can," Angus said, smiling, "but not for a fee."

The mellow notes of a gong sounded, then all three of them said, "Luncheon." Fordell said, "Come along, Garbrook."

But Angus declined the invitation. "If you have no objection, I'll get my mind clear on the layout here." His eyes were probing every corner of the room. "In this way, what's beyond that?" He went to the door to Mr. Bell's—Miss Markey's bedroom. Fordell gave him that information. "It is locked, of course?"

"Naturally," Fordell smiled. Angus stared at the door. "No harm in checking, I suppose?" He turned the knob and gave an experimental push. Simultaneously, the door flew open and a scream pealed out from room beyond. Angus almost fell back into the room as Polly tried to pull the door to, but in that moment before the latch clicked into place Polly saw Mp Williams sprawled on the floor in a pair of black crepe de chine pajamas and a fine pink brassiere.

Fordell grinned. "Your error, Garbrook. Polly was taking her daily doses."

Angus nodded, then said quietly, "Not altogether an error, however. The door, if you observed, was not locked."

That afternoon Fordell taught Polly the combination to the small hidden safe and for four hours they went over the materials in his files. Fordell explained very carefully what he wanted and Polly asked many questions. Later Fordell gave her several letters, among them one to the Secretary of War in which he said, in part:

"I am having this data prepared for filing in your department by Miss Pauline Markey, a thoroughly competent young woman who understands perfectly my desires. She is now engaged in the work in my office and I will advise you when she has completed the product of her labors."

Polly typed that letter and four others and at Fordell's suggestion walked down to the post office with them. As she was strolling back past the fort when Lieutenant Jerry Bell called out and came hurrying building and called to her.

Wonder-if you'd give Fordell a message for me, Miss Markey. I forgot——"

Polly said, icily, "So you work at the fort and you think I shouldn't have anything to do with the Fordells. Why didn't you say you were Lieutenant Bell and take part in the having conferences with Mr. Fordell about the safe—and you didn't say a word—cluttering up the place?"

He seemed to find this highly amusing. "Sorry I can't fight," he grinned. "But—I'm running for Congress, don't you know? I'm not on time." He said then, "I was to send a message to Mr. Fordell. Will you tell him I'll bring it over after dinner. Thanks and I'll be over to see you then."

Polly walked on with feigned delight, "will be something to look forward to. And of course I can't help seeing you in a social engagement. She turned then, this highly flirtatious young Army officer and left him standing there, and walked away with her chin a little high—wanting terribly to look back, but letting herself do it.

She had dinner with the family that night. It was a silent, uncongenial proceeding, and Polly couldn't wait to get away. She could leave the table and slip out of the house. She left the house and walked down the beach and sat on the dry ripples. Dusk was slowly blowing in from the sea. The low rumble of distant thunder came rolling in.

For a long while she sat there, letting her thoughts wander, wondering if Jerry Bell had come with his package, or walk out and look for her—and if, after all, she wouldn't prefer that Angus come out instead.

But neither Jerry Bell nor Angus Garbrook came and before she realized the dark, wind-swept figure of Fordell was striding.

Jumping toward the house, she almost ran over Tod on the lee side of the house. Tod was sitting on the dripping sand from his feet and his looked up and saw her and was instantly on his feet.

"I dug up the pirate treasure, Polly. Want to see it?"

She took his hand and pulled him along. "Later, darling—but it's past your bedtime."

Crossing the porch, she looked at her watch. It was a quarter after nine.

Fordell was sitting in the living room with a newspaper open before him. His face was blank, but when he arose and looked down, he was smiling as if he had known who it was. He stood there with a playful spank and watched them disappear.

When they were in Tod's room, Tod took a much folded letter from his pocket and held it out to Polly's hand. "There," he said. "It's from Jerry Bell. He was out on the beach and no one found it, I have been more interested, too. Sometime. I'll show you, Polly."

Polly stared at the letter. It was addressed to Fordell, and before she was aware of what she was doing, she had turned it over and read the signature: "Yours, devotedly, Angus." Tod was looking over her as she tore the letter into small bits. But because she knew it well, she did not scold. She said, quietly, "You must never touch any one's correspondence again, Tod. Now, darling, . . ."

Polly tucked him in and went downstairs. Fordell was not in the living room, but she had just heard him leaded reading folded in the chair which was still facing the door. Polly usually faced the opposite direction. She was wondering then, why he had turned it around when she heard Tod calling her. She climbed the stairs again.

Polly, there's something I want to tell Father. May I go?"

I'm sorry, darling, but your father has an appointment with Lieutenant Brell and they're probably in the study now. Come along. I'll tell you a story."

It may have been five minutes before, perhaps less, when the sharp report came to their ears.

"That was a gun, wasn't it, Polly?" Tod said.

"Yes, dear. Go to sleep now. That, it's awfully late."

She did not hurry until she had tucked him over his own room and closed the hall door. Then she ran down the stairs.

Julian was just coming in from the porch. He veered sharply and went into the library.

Fordell's study door was closed. She went on out to the porch. It was still raining. She heard some one whistling at no short time and a dark figure came out of the shadows with a dog on leash and disappeared. Polly knew that Angus was his name and a song in the heart. She thought, "I'll ask Angus if he heard it." But she didn't. She said, didn't well. Something about that closed study door drew her inside.

BEGGS OF BEARS STOPS ORIOLES

Allows Only One Hit in Winning First of Final Series 2-0

Newark, N. J., Sept. 22—(AP)—Joe Beggs of Newark Bears is a Yankee at heart. The World Champions say 'always at their best in the clutch and Joe who aspires to a position on Marse Joe McCarthy's mound staff is pretty handy that way himself.

He turned in a one-hitter to trim Baltimore Orioles 2-0 last night and give the Bears the first game of the final International League playoffs.

Beggs' effort stopped the thundering Baltimore bats that eliminated Montreal to enter the finals. It was his second brilliant effort of the playoffs.

Chubb Wilburn, the Orioles' shortstop, got the Flock's only hit and spoiled Beggs' bid for a no-hitter.

Beggs, a 23-year-old righthander who entered the Yankee farm system via their Norfolk establishment, fanned eight. Baltimore fanned three times. It was his only one ball out of the infield, Wilburn's fly to centre in the fourth.

GABBY HARTNETT IS WHOLE SHOW AS CHICAGO WINS

Defeat Giants 7-5 to Cut Their Lead by a Full Game

TIGERS NEARLY OUT

Yanks Can Cinch Flag By Winning Double Bill Today

(By Bill Bonl)
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

The Giants, having been given a dose of Dr. Charley Grimm's pet patent medicine—he hopes to call it "the pennant wheat"—woke up today with a bitter taste in their mouths, a determination to do better and a National Baseball League lead that was whittled down to a game and a half.

Dr. Grimm's pet patent medicine is the one that has done such wonders for the Cocky Cubs on past afternoons, is a well-adjusted mixture of garrulous Gabby Hartnett's ways and smooth-flowing relief pitching by Veteran Charley Root.

The Giants got both yesterday, to the delight of 14,307 Chicago customers and the dismay of Dotty Dan's rooters for a nickle World Series.

Garrulous Gabby, he of the waggling tongue and the flailing Stillwell, was in his best form. Missing only a homer on his triumphant tour, he batted in three runners, set out a triple with the bases loaded, a single that put him in position to score, and a double that drove home the final nail in the Giants' coffin and kept the lead for the Cubs' 7-5 victory.

The Hartnett heroics were here to ignore, especially so for the Terrymen. And Mace Rood, keeping his record of 13 as a relief pitcher intact and running his string of first-ball triumphs to eight, was equally effective.

Giants Still In

While Gabby's performance was positive, Charley was negative. Gabby laid the pay-off runs on the line, Root came in with the tying run across the plate and what might have been the winning run on base to stop the Giants cold.

A clean sweep of the remaining two games—the Cubs already have attained undisputed title to city series with the White Sox this year—will bring the Grimm-men half a game out in front and run their winning streak to five straight. But the Giants, a 6-5 Hyperale over the ninth killed off by a fast double play yesterday, are still in there.

While the Cubs and Giants battle tooth and nail in what is the pennant issue, the Yanks sit still and ease in that way. When the Bombers lost to the Red Sox in Boston yesterday, losing the first 12-7 to a home run from Joe Cronin and winning the second 4-1, that made it so much simpler for the Rupp-ert squad.

Tigers Nearly Out

By winning both games from the Browns today, they can eliminate Detroit from the competition.

The Yanks and Browns were kept idle by the American League parks, but the Bengals performed something else in New York. The rest of the Elks' pennant hopes rested on the Dodgers drop two in St. Louis, by 5-3 and 6-5 scores. Pirates sting the Bees 9-7; The Phils lose the first, 6-3 and win the night-cap from the Reds 10-1; Wally Moon's pinch hitting homer with a man on beat in the 10th inning gave the Cincy Nine and Johnny Allen of the Indians win his 12th straight—he hasn't been defeated since a 6-3 subjection of the Senators.

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press)

Gabby Hartnett and Charley Root, Cubs—Former's pinch double and triple figured in all Cub scoring in 7-5 victory over Giants; latter's relief pitching choked off enemy rally.

Hal Trosky, Indians— Home run with bases loaded provided winning margin in 6-3 trimming of Senators.

Lefty Gomez, White Sox, and George Gill, Tigers—Former's homer with three on started 10-run rally that beat Boston Red Sox 12-7; latter held Sox to eight hits and limited Bosox to 4-1 nightcap win.

Jim Tobin, Pirates— Pitched seven-hitter to take Bees 9-2 and led 10-hitting winning attack with two doubles and single.

Harry Craft, Reds and Wayne Lamaster, Phillies—Craft drove home two runs with double and single as Reds won first game 6-3; Lamaster gave eight hits and no bases on balls and fanned five to win nightcap 10-1.

Members of Kiwanis Juniors And Coach Woodley Honored At Banquet by Local Club

Personnel of Team Presented With Windbreakers

COACH GIVEN SILVER

Thanks of Club is Extended to Team For Fine Showing

Honoring the members of the Belleville Kiwanis junior baseball club, the Belleville Kiwanis Club were hosts at the annual banquet tives in the O.B.A.A. at their weekly luncheon held in the new Queens Hotel last evening. During the course of the evening's programme which was lively, besting the Kiwanis crest and the year of competition, were presented with individual players and management as a kingly honor from the Kiwanis Club, while Coach H. G. "Twig" Woodley was recipient of a handsome silver service, a salad platter from the personnel of the team.

In the absence of G. E. Gibbard, First Vice President of the Ontario Baseball Amateur Association, who was to have been the speaker of the evening, but was absent on account of pressing business, the members of the Kiwanis Club's sports committee individually spoke lauding the efforts of the local junior baseball club for their fine showing during the past season.

F. C. Macklaurin Appointed

President Eddie Logan announced during the evening that Kiwanian F. C. MacLaurin, who is at present canning his local club at the new Central Division district meeting in Hamilton, has been appointed Lieutenant Governor of the Central Ontario District of Kiwanis Kiwanis in Canada. The announcement was received amid much applause in favor of Kiwanian Laurin.

President Logan welcomed the Kiwanis junior ball club "Kiwans are always glad to welcome good clean sport and on behalf of our club I wish to thank the boys for their fine showing in the championship series this season, but more especially for the co-operation given Manager Bill Cook and Coach "Twig" Woodley. Kiwanis is proud of the boys, being a group of boys and we only hope to be able to assist you in success more vigorously next season" he stated President Logan as he introduced Kiwanian Jack Fluney, chairman of the entertainment committee for their assistance and expressed to Coach Woodley personal feelings for the unselfish manner in which he devoted his time in order to develop local baseball talent. "It was a pleasure to work with you Twig and all the boys," concluded Manager Fluney. Kiwanian Jack Pearson, chief windbreakers, bearing the Kiwanis insignia, then made possible through the co-operation of the Deacon Shirt Company. The players to receive the windbreakers were: Chapelle, mascot, John Ronan, Reds Hodgins, Wally Moon, Russ Collins, Stan Ano, Kevin Weeks, Pat Shea, Norman Pearson, Bert Noakes, Joe Kelleher, S. MacDonald, B. McQuaide, Joe Doherty, Vince Gaudette, Fred Medi- Whalen, Coach Woodley and Manager Bill Cook.

Coach Gets Gift

On behalf of the players Mascot Chappelle presented Coach Woodley with a box of cigars and a wallet-ide, as a token of their appreciation for the efforts in tutoring them the fundamentals of baseball during this season. In reply Coach Woodley also showed deeply emotion at coming from his players, thanked them for their co-operation during the season, "I might say, that the boys always conducted themselves as gentlemen on and off the field in the Kiwanis Club, which sponsored them," stated Mr. Woodley.

The sports committee of the club, Kiwanians Jack Fluney, Chairman, George Lee and Jack McVeigh all responded with two minute speeches. Kiwanian McVeigh stated he hoped the Kiwanis Club would be in a position to sponsor juvenile baseball as well as junior next year, while Kiwanian Lee asked the teenaged boys of Belleville to turn out for baseball in lieu of softball and cited as a concrete example Vince Guay, who starred in the playdowns for the Kiwanis Club.

During the evening Harold Davidson made the programme more pleasing with several solos. Kiwanian Joe Imlach acted as song leader and Ab Boynton as sergeant-at-arms.

LIGHTWEIGHTS IN FEATURED SPOT

Ambers And Montanez to Provide Fireworks of Night

New York, Sept. 22—(AP)—The Lou Ambers-Pedro Montanez lightweight championship fight is the feature attraction of the Carnival of Champions tomorrow night appears to be the best card of the season.

Lou Ambers and his dangerous challenger, Pedro Montanez, the San Juan Puerto Rican.

That, at least, is the fight the fans talked about today, and it is the only one of the 3½ championship bouts on the program that is getting an important play from the gamblers. Promoter Mike Jacobs, too, has dropped it in the "hot" spot of the evening, the third act.

Expectations are it will be a real rough-house for 15 rounds if it lasts that long.

Their previous 10-round overweight battle, in which Montanez had the champion on the floor in an early round, whetted the fans' appetites. Ambers on that occasion came back to plaster Pedro toward the last, and there are those that think he would have won in 15 rounds.

Fred Apostoli is favored to trim Marcel Thil, European middleweight, in the night's first feature bout. Incidentally, is the spot usually occupied by the tumblers in any vaudeville programs.

Barney Ross is Doyle's choice in the second duel over the challenger Maxie Garcia from the Philippines.

"Mr. Orpen is not making the strenuous efforts, so noted that he did six months ago," the night's morning bulletin said. The 72-year-old sportsman, for several months, took a turn for the worse yesterday.

COLTS ALL SQUARE WITH GLOVERS

Ogdensburg Wins Sixth Game in 11 Innings 6-5

(By The Canadian Press)

Fifty three pure Gloversville pitchers when Maurice Van Roboys gets to work. He's got them feeling mighty blue today and worried about how to put a stop to all this home run hitting by the Ogdensburg Colt Stars.

If the Glovers intend to win the Canada Baseball League championship it's a cinch they've got to pitch like big bat Van Roboys' has carried so far in the series. Gloversville fans thought it was all over but the shouting when their team moved to Ogdensburg with a three game lead in the best-of-seven pennant series.

But that's all changed now. The determined Colts, fighting desperately against these overwhelming odds, pulled this eye from the hat trick by defeating the Glovers by winning three straight games by single runs and by the same score 6-5.

Final Today

The team which took the seventh and final game of the series at Gloversville today will have to hold Ogdensburg to all their home contests. Glovers are slight favorites to do this.

Van Roboys, hero of all Colts' triumphs, grabbed the spot-light again yesterday when he singled in the winning counter in the 11th inning with two men on. But it was in the eighth frame he really saved the game, slapping out a double with two men on, to cut down Glovers' Four run lead. It was his fifth circuit clout of the season.

Bill Hurley rescued a faltering teammate on the Ogdensburg mound for the second successive day, relieving Jack Dunnigan Monday he pitched three-hit ball in 8 1-3 innings when he relieved Smith in the sixth frame yesterday.

"I believe Tommy Farr has the smallest hands of any man his size I ever saw; why, even his feet are much smaller than one would imagine for a man of his build," Crown Attorney Byron C. Doucas, K.C., related to us after having visited Farr in his private suite in the Royal York Hotel over the week-end. Mr. and Mrs. Doucas were in the Queen City over the week-end and fortunately Mr. Doucas's guide was right next to Farr. "We were invited into Tommy's suite by his manager and spent a full hour talking with him. He is a quiet, unassuming young fellow and, really good company. I asked him what he thought of Louis, and Farr stated he was a good boy, but that the next time he believed he (Farr) would lick him," continued Mr. Doucas.

"Farr has a distinct sore under his right eye. He told me he had blow received when in training and again opened by Louis. I believe there will be a permanent scar there. I asked him what he thought of Louis and he replied he was 'agreeably' surprised, but his manager added that Montreal was just about 'dope' right for Louis' next fight. There was any truth to the rumor that he would purchase a farm in Ameliasburg, with Mr. Farr," added Mr. Doucas. "Why I have a splendid Farm at the head of Wales and I enjoy farming, why should I come to America, when I'm satisfied I might be a real farmer" replied Farr. Mr. Doucas stated that Farr's hands were exceedingly small for a prize fighter. "Why his hands were not much larger than mine, but his upper arm was actually two large for his size. Farr has both my hands, so perhaps that is where he got his astonishing power," stated Mr. Donnan.

Farr has a distinct sense of humor, when working in the mines in Wales, as he confidentially told me he was saving his money to retire with in the next two years, but only after he had won the world's championship. If you think you can beat Louis for the title the next time you meet him, I asked Farr," said Mr. Donnan. "I mean to beat Louis the next time we meet, and am boasting when I say that. Last night I fought him with one eye closed practically all of the fight. It won't be that way next time," stated Farr to me.

Hazen (Kiki) Cuyler, veteran Cincinnati outfielder announced his intention to retire from baseball at the conclusion of the current season, yesterday. Cuyler, at one time, was considered just about the cream of the crop in National League outfield circles. He saw service with Pittsburg, the Cubs and finally the Reds.

Glad to see Leo "Stub" Barrett, general manager of the Recreation Bowling Alleys, is able to be around following a major operation and lengthy period of convalescing.

There is some talk about town relative to Jo-Jo Grabosi remaining in Canada this winter and turning out with the R. C. A. F. "Flyers" Jo-Jo got a trial with the Weekday Lions last winter and has a standing offer to return to the Old Country for the opening of the puck-chasing season there. He spent his summer vacation in Belleville

When the Belleville Panthers take to the field versus the R. C. A. F. "Flyers" this Saturday Gandy Yanger will direct play from the bench in the absence of Coach Duffield who is out of town.

It's boxing at the Arena tonight, sponsored by the R.C.A.F. Sports Club. Nine bouts are on the card, featuring many camp champions, interspersed with three outside bouts from Trenton, who meet Airport scrappers. The Trenton mitt-slingers are well known, locally, Bobby Vieau, Al Brodder and Harry Schroeder. Boxing is one of the outstanding features in the R.C.A.F. sports programme and the Airmen scrappers are ring generals of many battles and from all parts of the Dominion. The show should prove popular.

A splendid gesture was afforded at the local Kiwanis junior ball club when their sponsors, the Belleville Kiwanis Club, tendered the kids' ball club to the former lefty position in the realm of sport in Belleville. Each member of the team received a sealy windbreaker, while many words of praise were directed by President Eddie Logan and his executive cohorts. When the players' mascot Chubb Twig Woodley with a handsome horn d'Olive silver-plated ball, Skipper Woodley was forcefully at a loss for words to express his thanks. It was an occasion in a fitting manner and thanked all for their co-operation.

One thing marred the banquet, the inability of Ernie Gibbard, first vice-president of the O.B.A.A. to be present. He was to have been the speaker of the evening and his presence would have meant much to the diamond game locally, but the Kiwanis boys are going to branch out and sponsor baseball next year, making the future of the game more illuminous for the future than has been the case for many years.

There were those faithful few who said early last August—"Don't quit those Cubs short." Maybe they knew what they were talking about because they are. Cubs now are just 1½ games behind the Giants and have been travelling on the credit of a victory wave ever since Ripper Collins replaced Grimm. The Cubs increased the Giants 7-5 yesterday in a wild ninth-inning game which was no less than 20 hits ring out and each team left the baseball game in a frantic effort to win. We always were of the opinion that better ball and more exciting games was actually seen throughout the regular schedule than in the world's series and if yesterday's game wasn't a honey, we'll—but our guess.

We wonder if the Oshawa' series has read rule 46, section four, par 1

TORONTO STOCK EXCHANGE (Close)

Toronto, Sept. 22 (CP)—Displaying moderate strength after slow trading during the early session, listings of the Toronto Exchange were inclined to ease off in the late proceedings. Industrials and base metals had a slight margin on the up side at the close and the golds were irregularly lower. Trade in the junior oils was quiet and steady.

In the industrial section, Brazilian was a feature on the rumor that the stock would be placed on a regular quarterly dividend basis. The price firmed to 22 1-4 for a gain of a full point here. C.P.R. and Ford A also were quite active and both showed the highest International Nickel stood out in the base metals with an advance of a point to 54 1-2 while fractions were added by Noranda, Hudson Bay and Consolidated Smelters.

WALL ST. CLOSE

New York, Sept. 22 (AP)—The Stock Market retrieved some more of its lost ground today, many leaders posting gains of fractions to 3 points.

The comeback trail was cluttered with profit-selling obstacles, however, and near the hour of the extreme upturns were buyed in many instances. Transfers were about 800,000 shares.

Carload Ore Yields $40.60 per Ton at Southern Golds

Shipment of sixty tons of ore to smelter a few weeks ago by Southern Golds, operating in South Carolina, yielded an average of $40.60 per ton, officials advise. Ore was taken from drift on No. 2 vein which has been opened for approximately 200 feet on the first level. Regarding underground developments raise on No. 2 vein on the 125 foot level has been driven for some 100 feet, with recent sinking operations taken over 60ft. of six feet yielding $60 per ton. Correspondingly favorable results are obtained at other points. Diamond drilling from underground has revealed favorable conditions with one hole intersecting No. 4 vein at depth of 185 feet showing width of about 30 feet. Sludge assays indicate a good commercial grade of ore. Exploration work will probably be started on several surface showings this season.

MARKET COMMENT

Every sharp reaction is followed by a fair-sized rally, but over the last few weeks, the market has been selling off and prices today are under those prevailing a month ago. Nimble traders favor this kind of a market but the average investor has had to sit back and see his holdings depreciate in value and no one can tell him exactly why stocks should be selling off so sharply.

The earnings of Brazilian Traction should be made public in the next day or two, for the month of August. The improvement of recent months he expected to be again recorded which would assure shareholders that the full year's results would be about the best since 1931 when $1.39 a share was reported. The stock is generally regarded as having a $1.00 annual dividend basis, indicating that another 60 cent payment is expected in the present year.

Reaffirmed evidence that the government bounties of Canada's two industrial provinces are determined to prevent development in extreme low tariffs in Canada has been a highly constructive development in the price structure without intervention in the textile strike situation. Textiles showed a firm trend in settling a strike in one of the Quebec newsprint mills, which threatened for a time to spread to other plants.

Leading Stocks Under Accumulation

Following a sharp break early in the week which carried the Dow-Jones Industrial Index to its lowest level since last March, also to new low levels for the year, better buying appeared in the majority of stocks from Wednesday on, with the close on the week showing a recovery to the level of a week ago. Many traders who had held stocks heavily were also reported as covering in anticipation of higher prices this week. There was no sign of a final sell-out, with the result that shares passed into strong hands and the July-August decline left the market the best for many months. Sales are not a reliable guide when the market is by no means general, certain favorites are under accumulation while the general run of stocks orders difficult to fill.

Gains of a point or more metal stocks has passed through a severe test during the past week and the rail group is showing a most satisfactory rallying power. The immediate outlook for gains in the metal industry is set by the Eastern mining and industrial shares. Chief, Holland & Co. Ltd., 9-17-1937.)

On The Street

The earnings of Massey Harris & Paper are improving so rapidly that the banking group seem indifferent bondholders is that they would 'sooner wait for another year before taking any action which the market values at 80 for a debenture issue—but should be paid off in cash. . . . As business stands now the evidence indicates that stocks are due for a rise. . . . The next issue of several good common stocks are to be offered at less than par. . . . Doubtful if the price of newsprint will be advanced above the $58 of a ton level for last half of 1938. . . .

NON-POLITICAL

three-man Liquor Board in place of the present one-man commission. "We will appoint a chairman and two commissioners who will command respect" he said.

Mahoneminister Charged

Under the proposal the commission would revert to the type in operation before Premier Hepburn named E. K. Cole a one-man commission. The Conservative policy would be to restore public confidence in the present Liquor Act, Mr. Rowe said.

He charged the Government with "maladministration" of the Liquor Act. His government, said Mr. Rowe, would give the Act "its first take trial for a period of 12 months". In this 12-months period beverage room operators must get their house in order.

"During that period we will request the co-operation of the Honor holders to restore public confidence in this Act, which I believe is possible," said Mr. Rowe, after beverage rooms of this province must be closed up or closed up."

Non-Political Centralized Control

Conservatives would establish a system of direct responsibility centralized control with the co-operation of the municipal law enforcement system of local non-politcal boards. The Board would make recommendations to the provincial commission.

Asked at any cost was the keynote of the present government's liquor control, Mr. Rowe claimed. "Over 40 per cent. of the places now licensed as beverage rooms were not licensed as Model Taverns in 1934 when the Act was amended," he maintained.

"After October 6, we shall investigate this whole mal-administration. It shall lay before a committee of investigation the affidavits now in my possession, even under the Canada Evidence Act, of toll gates demanded, levied and paid. We lay these facts before the committee the Photostat copies of cheques received and cashed, as toll gates fees."

Former Power Shortage

Mr. Rowe has also spoken at Collingwood reiterated his charge a power shortage faced the government which, he claimed, warranted commitments "totalling some $40,000,000" to provide for small power plants in effort to offset "an imminent power shortage".

"As further evidence of an impending power shortage the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario has ordered all municipalities to cut domestic water heaters off at peak load periods (day), charged Conservative leader.

In reference to the govern-ment's Northern Ontario activities, Mr. Rowe declared a 1936 Act mere-ly changed the name of a previous dictator over the North. Without doubt the 23,000 square miles of Ontario timber went to United States Interests, he said.

"In keeping with this policy of selling out our birthright to American interests, Premier Hep-burn, spectacle of a member of the Cabinet going through his cowgard a 3,500 cords of raw pulpwood off Crown lands during a 12-month period," he said.

ABRAM M. ORPEN

three fortunes for the contractor, gambler and director of race-tracks. Although Orpen never suffered a stroke, he had been in a coma since Saturday.

Ill Since Spring

Thought ill since Spring. "Honest Abe" and innumerable of his followers knew him, recovered sufficiently to be moved yesterday to the offices of the Metropolitan Racing Association as late as three months ago.

It was from a back room in those offices—a gambling pool room and place of business—that Orpen's booming voice directed operations of the Dorval, Blue Bonnets, Kemble-worth, Queen's Park and the light of Cedar Grove, Thistle Park and Saratoga" of Canadian racing He owned Kemilworth at Windsor, Long Branch, Dorval and Cedar Grove, and erated London's Queen's Park.

Orpen Was Gambler

Orpen, a native of Toronto, had been in the racing game generously to the poor as for his gambling. He mingled alike with the city's "400" and with the "push" behind the "push" behind the "push" for many months.

There were countless stories of Orpen's generosity. A tall, white-moustached, bald-headed gambler, and his life ebbed away after one of the strangest incidents in his full career.

Orpen, reported to police three men had kidnapped him as he entered his Rosedale home early in the the lakefront. He bargained with the men and obtained his release on the promise of $1,000 payment to the kidnappers, and his word he would not report them to police. But he did not reveal its hiding place.

Orpen refused to tell his wife or police never did hear a description of the men.

Gave Away Thousands

Orpen gave away thousands of dollars. Know-ing the needy, "good fortune" he has retained few know, but in 1930 he estimated anywhere from $300,000 to a few millions.

Time after time, directors of the Sporting Club reported men had lost more than they could afford, sometimes money that was not theirs to lose. And each time Orpen would have the case investigated. If some good could be done, he would refund the amount lost.

Orpen, possessed of keen humor, was called before the police commissioners for questioning on complaints gambling house owners were lipped in advance of police raids. He was asked if it was true.

His answer, "the police always give me warning," created a furore among the commissioners until Orpen added: "All my Club members have been."

The police are the only ones that use the doorbell.

He is survived by his widow, two sons, Fred in Arizona and Jack, and a daughter, Mrs. T. Ambrose Wood.

PLAN TO INVOKE PACT OF 1922 TO STOP WAR

Geneva Believes Japan Would Scarcely Refuse 9 - Power Consultation

Treaty in 1922 Signed by Japan Guaranteed China's Integrity

BRING IN U. S.

Plan is to Bring Japan to International Conference

Geneva, Sept. 23—(AP)— Great Britain was understood today to be planning to invoke the Washington Pact guaranteeing China's territorial integrity as a basis upon which to bring Japan to an international conference to stop the Sino-Japanese hostilities.

Such a move would have additional advantage of bringing the United States into full co-operation on measures to halt the far eastern conflict—a step considered essential if the peace efforts are to meet with success.

Japan Signatory

Geneva circles considered that Japan, while ignoring League of Nations initiative, would scarcely refuse a nine-power consultation under the nine-power treaty signed in Washington in 1922 with China, Great Britain, the United States, France, Italy, the Netherlands, Portugal and Belgium.

The signatories agreed to respect the sovereignty, independence, and the administrative and territorial integrity of China. These things, China has charged before the League of Nations, Japan is violating.

"Not Yet Too Late"

London, Sept. 23—(CP Cable)—The News-Chronicle, Liberal newspaper, in a leading editorial on the Japanese invasion of China, today said that although governments and peoples can still be found in those days of "splendid isolation" aside and talked to talk with their friends and neighbors, "it is not the action, even now it may not be too late for Japan to draw back from the fatal path of blowing itself to pieces from the air."

"What we can or does China seem such a long way away you can't be bothered?" the paper answers. "Turn back a page and if the terrible picture reported there is not about to you and turns you sick, write now to your M. P. and to the Secretary of British government to take immediate action among the powers to stop the fighting in China."

Why the Weather?

By Major A. E. Thiessen

Synoptic Storm! Today or at 9.13 a.m., the sun having stayed north with us since March 20, and, therefore, has increased its journey south on Sept. 23, crossed the line. Then the sailors call it "crossing the Equator. The sailors call it "crossing the line." Today, then, is the autumn equinox; day and night are equal in length. It is about this time that cyclonic storms begin to take on characteristics of winter commotion. But if you have a storm today, do not look for it on the sun's crossing the Line. Rather bet that it is a signpost for the entire world, and storms do not occur everywhere at once.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Sept. 23—(CP)—Synopsis—Pressure is high on the Atlantic and Pacific Coasts, and relatively low over the prairies with a trough of disturbance passing eastward across Dakota. Weather has been mostly fair from the Great Lakes eastward and cool with showers in the Western Provinces.

Spy System Changed, Dictatorship Forecast

"Calgary, Sept. 23 (CP)—John W. Hugill, K.C., Social Credit Member of the Alberta Legislature for Edmonton who resigned as Attorney-General last month at Premier Aberhart's request, charged the Aberhart Government is pointing toward a dictatorship that "will surpass even the dictatorships of Hitler and Mussolini."

"This is the time for the press dictatorships," Mr. Hugill told Canadian Club members yesterday, and promise to take off my coat and, with other citizens, fight against the dictatorship which is fast developing within the borders of Alberta."

The former Attorney-General charged Alberta fairs are dictated from London by the Scottish economists, Major C. H. Douglas and Mr. Aberhart is a "de facto Premier."

The Government is developing a system of espionage, he claimed. "Spies, carrying out instructions, report the doings and saying of Government officials direct to the Premier."

Earl Rowe and the elected candidates of the various ridings, great hare of the evening.

It was Mrs. Van Koughnet's first appearance in this city of a professional nature, but an enjoyable one, she declared, following the introduction by Mrs. (Dr.) Kinnear, president of the Belleville club, when that organization was first formed in the city.

In her introductory remarks, Mrs. Kinnear pointed out that West Hastings had always been and will continue to be traditionally Conservative.

"We Conservatives of this riding can look back with pride on having an even greater optimism over this election," she added and again applause.

"I have been told that," affirmed the speaker, "but I am optimistic. I'm fact the two ridings of Hastings have always been one of great interest among the members of the Conservative Party.

The speaker agreed heartily with remarks that "Dick" Arnott, candidate in this riding, was "a gentleman" with a large majority. "He is a fighter," she said, "and I am pleased with Meads, a keen sense of the realization of the situation and courage. He is a friend of old and young alike. I can see a splendid team between Mr. Arnott and the Hon. Earl Rowe because each has and retain these essential qualities."

Ruthless Domination Charge

The Hon. Mr. Hepburn, "through his ruthless domination of the scene, a policy of aggression, he has adopted and carried out since he was elected to office is one that will send him down to defeat if no other question will," stated Mrs. Van Koughnet, speaking from provincial matters. "His record of maladministration is one that should make every taxpayer think well and should blow him away. That he is a detested man through this very cause."

UNITED CANADA APPEAL OF 'AMPS'

Canadians must oppose all forces of dissension and sectionalism, Hon. C. G. Power, Minister of Pensions and National Health, said in a banquet last night.

"You have shown by your example that whatever may eventually occur this country or ours will present a solid and united front," he told the ex-service veterans.

EIGHT GET DUCKING IN NIAGARA RIVER

Buffalo, N.Y., Sept. 23 (AP)—Four Roman Catholic clergymen and as many lay passengers on a moonlight cruise dried out their clothes today after a ducking in the Niagara River late last night.

Rev. W. F. Forose of Williamsville, owner of the cabin cruiser Argo IV, reported his 30-foot craft something that store in her bottom.

The Argo IV sank to the gunwales, he said, and the passengers men and a lay commander by were taken off by passing fisher- Captain Murray Mahee.

JAMES T. WALDEN GETS MEDAL

James T. Walden, 4 Ashley Street, Belleville, Vice President of the Ontario Provincial Command of the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada, today received notification that the King's Coronation Medal had been bestowed upon him. The information came through the head office of the Provincial Command of the A. & N.V. in Canada, Mr. Walden, aside from being a Provincial officer in the Veterans, previously served as President of the Belleville Post No. 36.

LICENCE BUTTONS MUST BE WORN

"While the new buttons given away with hunting licenses this year are being made the bulk of the work, quarters, the Department emphasizes the fact that they must be worn," stated George Finch, local issuer today.

"People that ignore this warning may find themselves in hot water," he added. "They not only facilitate the work of inspectors but save embarrassment on the part of hunters in some cases".

Local hunters are showing keen interest in their favorite sport this year with licenses selling at a steady rate. One enthusiast telephoned at five o'clock yesterday morning to make sure that a licence would be held in reserve for him.

Car Driver Mistakes Skunk for a Rabbit

Ambling along the Belleville-Bancroft road in the bright moonlight on Tuesday night, one of those striped kitties with a high-powered sense of advertising was not the least bit alarmed at the lights of an approaching automobile.

Seated in the front seat of the car were a former cabinet minister and his chauffeur, in the rear seat three residents of Belleville. Closer the car approached on the skunk showed no sign of leaving the narrow roadway. A warning cry from the back seat brought a hurried application of brakes. What's wrong queried the chauffeur, "whaw" elucidated one of the hapless riders. "Don't you see that animal ahead of you?"

"Why that is only a rabbit," laughed the driver. When told the identity of the animal which by this time had left the road in disgust and in the brush nearby, he emitted an audible sigh of relief.

HEAD OF QUEEN'S VISITS COLLEGE

Principal Dr. R. C. Wallace Addresses Student Body

Students of Bert College were addressed on Wednesday afternoon by Principal Robert C. Wallace, M.A., D.Sc., Ph.D., LL.D., F.G.S., F.R.S.C., of Queen's University, Kingston, on the occasion of his first visit to Belleville and Albert College since his appointment as the Queen's post. Dr. Howard, principal of Albert College and faculty of the school welcomed Dr. Wallace.

The visit of the head of Queen's University was a great interest not only because of the high place he holds in science in Canada and as an educationist but because of the close relationship which binds Queen's University and Albert College since the appointment as the Queen's post. Dr. Howard, principal of Albert College and faculty of the school welcomed Dr. Wallace.

The visit of the head of Queen's University was a great interest not only because of the high place he holds in science in Canada and as an educationist but because of the close relationship which binds Queen's University and Albert College since the latter, taking first and second year university work in association with Queen's.

Introduced to the students by Principal Rev. Bert Howard, Dr. Wallace spoke on some all-important factors in education, which are necessary for the development of a fine personality. Dr. Wallace showed the students why they were at college—to learn worthwhile facts. The importance of knowledge was indicated by Principal Wallace who said that much harm was done in the world by persons not equipped with knowledge and the facts to do the task they undertook.

The second reason for attending college was to develop judgment for no matter how much knowledge a man may possess, facts are of little use without judgment.

The third factor in education is the training of appreciation of the finer things in life, such as art, music, painting and religious education.

After the address Dr. Wallace and Mrs. Wallace and the faculty were entertained at afternoon tea in Ackerman Hall.

APPLE CROP DAMAGED BY RECENT WINDS

Approximately five per cent. of the total apple crop of the surrounding districts will be a total loss as a result of the near-gale which swept over the countryside last week-end, Mr. C. T. Stevenson, Provincial Fruit Inspector, stated this morning. Serious damage was done to trees and orchards, reports Mr. Stevenson's report. Heavily-laden trees were mostly effected with the strong six speed laws would allow.

By three o'clock this morning.

Just a Busy Family Doctor As Liberal Member Performs Emergent Operation on Boy

Evidence, that the Hon. Dr. J. A. Faulkner, Ontario Minister of Health, is still "just a busy family physician" was shown last night and then in Coe Hill and this city.

At a Liberal meeting held in Coe Hill last evening at which the local member was chief speaker, Mrs. Wm. Campbell of Peterborough County edged into the rear of the crowded hall as the meeting neared its conclusion. A small son, 11 years accompany, showed signs of distress and illness. The local member's attention was attracted to the mother and son and he made his way through the crowd to investigate.

A hasty diagnosis of the child's condition confirmed first beliefs.

"This boy has appendicitis. He needs instant treatment. Prepare as quickly as you can and follow me into Belleville, where there are facilities for an immediate operation," he told the anxious parents.

Bundling the child into the car, mother and father followed the automobile of Dr. Faulkner, as fast

GIRL INJURES THUMB IN CANNING FACTORY

The first serious accident of the canning season occurred yesterday, at Milford, when Della Cooper, an employee of the Johnson plant, severed the cords in one of her thumbs when a knife slipped, while she was preparing corn for canning. Slipping to the floor in a faint, Miss Cooper was rushed to the office of the plant where the flow of blood was staunched, and consciousness restored. Later the injured girl was rushed to the office of Dr. M. Currie, Picton, where the injury was dressed.

preparation had been made for the operation. By six o'clock, the Hon. Dr. Faulkner, assisted by Dr. Morgan and Dr. Kennedy of this city, had performed the operation successfully. The small patient was reported from the hospital, as being on the road to recovery, today.

"Still just the family physician, eh, doctor", fellow physicians congratulated today.

Championship Fair Held in Conjunction With Stirling Fair

Stirling, Sept. 23 (Special).—Held in conjunction with the Stirling Fall Fair was the Championship School Fair for the district. The record, spoken of which has been the cause of closing schools, etc. throughout the Province prevented the regular schedule school fairs from being held in their regular way but provision had been made by Mr. Jos. Wilson under who's direction the school fairs are held each year to hold the Championship Fair in Stirling with special consideration being given to the exhibitions under which the children have been. Because of the general upset in the original plans the entry in the local classes was cut as large as previous years. NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

Halifax, Sept. 23 (CP)—Something new in the export of frozen fish will be experimented with here during the next few days, according to E. H. Vessy, Federal government official who arrived in Halifax last night. Eight freight cars will leave the halifax railway terminals, loaded with the frozen food, for Chicago, he said.

The cars will be equipped with ice latticks. There was no room on the gala the other afternoon and the ban on children under 16 didn't mean a thing, for the kids swarmed all over the midway in the morning and afternoon. At night, however, a police officer did his best to send as many as possible home.

Fort Erie, Ont., Sept. 23 (CP)—Caddies were scarce for the annual golf tournament of the International Railway Transportation Club the other day. So the Fort Erie school boys received a holiday from school to enable them to carry golf bags.

Vancouver, Sept. 23 (CP)—Mrs. Josephine Dreyer, 64-year-old resident of Burnaby, adjacent municipality, was found last night in an exhausted condition in a brush-filled ravine where she collapsed after wandering for three days without food or water. From her bed in hospital, Mrs. Dreyer said she became lost in dense brush Sunday night.

Windsor, Ont., Sept. 23 (CP)—The Windsor post office is having some animal trouble. Five snakes have wriggled into sight during the past five months, while stenographers screamed and strong men fled. The reptiles had escaped from carnival cases.

All the snakes were recaptured, but the alarm was raised again yesterday. A black bat appeared before startled postal clerks and eluded capture by riding a freight elevator.

Guelph, Ont., Sept. 23 (CP)—Sammy, Elmira's pet crow which knew everybody in the village, is dead. Sammy, as the village folk say, died from worry because he was confined indoors after being hit by a motor car. The collision broke one of Sammy's wings.

Old castle, Ont., Sept. 23 (CP)—A challenge to defeat Ontario election issues was issued by Dr. Ernest A. Polsson, conservative candidate in North Essex, last night to his Liberal opponent, Dr. A. H. Trottier, sitting member. Old-castle is just a few kilometres from Windsor. Dr. Polsson said he hoped to meet Dr. Trottier on the platform at the official nomination meeting Sept. 27.

Fremont, Neb., Sept. 23 (AP)—A bird with a taste for tobacco caused the fire department several busy moments. Firemen hurried to Earl Grant's home, ready to battle a blaze. Instead they found a burning bird's nest 35 feet up in a tree.

Fireman Willis Lind climbed the tree and doused the flaming nest.

He reported the bird apparently carried a lighted cigarette butt to its nest.

Kearney, Neb., Sept. 22 (AP)—Casesie is by no means an ordinary cow.

Delos Wilkins, her owner, says she eats gingersnaps off a plate at a table, smokes a pipe, lies down and snores, imitates chickens on a see-saw and generally behaves as no other cow ever does.

Los Angeles, Sept. 22 (AP) — Frederick's parents were relieved when Jack Moody, 11, and his "favorite girl," Betty Webb, 9, returned home to explain a two-day absence. Jack said they had camped on a mountainside until they got tired of it.

"We didn't catch any rabbits with my cap pistol," he added.

"BEAUTY IS TRUTH!"

At Niagara Falls, Ontario, has been opened the Oakes Garden Theatre on the site donated to the Niagara Falls Parks Commission by Col. Harry Oakes. The property has been developed by the Commission to be a scene of unusual beauty.

Here is one of the most impressive sights in all nature with the mighty Niagara pouring its water over the escarpment which is one of the wonders of the world.

Here the hand of nature and the hand of man have joined to make a shrine of beauty which cannot be excelled. Here if anywhere man feels how closely beauty and the mighty forces of nature approach the inner spirit of man and the spirit of worship. Here one ceases to wonder at the aborigines of Canada and the United States who worshipped nature and saw divinity in the woods and in the waterfall.

Here two great nations with similar ideals and the same tongue come together in a place of calm beauty. Nature and destiny have been kind in making this binding link between the two peoples. It gives a sense of serenity in the midst of workings of nature and man before which the children of man as we see them enacted in the Orient, blasting wondrous natural works and the temples of man make him shrink in shame at the thought. Here Niagara exerts a spell which elevates the soul of man as he seeks to peer beneath the veil so thin that it barely hides the Being at the source of this great manifestation of power and beauty. Here the sense of eternity comes very close to man who forgets the things of time in the sense of power which flows from timelessness.

Man, led by an unfailing instinct, which only divine inspiration can explain has adorned in his moments of brilliant genius the world he feels 'beauty is truth, truth beauty, that is all we know on earth and all we need to know," for beauty exists in the outward form and in power as it does in man's soul.

AUTUMN USHERED IN

Summer leaves with the passage of the sun across the equator this week and the reign of autumn comes with its richness of coloring to be in natural scenery, its sense of plenty garnered in from the harvest fields and spread on countless tables at rural festivals and in harvest thanksgiving services in man's greatest temples and mansions and in the smallest mission houses and the humble homes.

This season which is being ushered in with warmth of sun by day and by cool nights is one of the richest of all the year. It tells the story of a year largely rounded out, work finished in great measure in the fields. It begins to paint a canvas which no man can duplicate with its priceless tinting in foliage. It should be a season of enjoyment as man begins to tap the wealth which is stored up in granaries.

But there is a glorious remnant of the summer still remaining—the green which has not yet turned to red, purple, russet and brown which are just beginning to make their mark on all flora. Grass still reminds of summer, the leaves are green, though in the fields there are the ripening signs in the rinds of fruits and vegetables.

Though frost may be near, winter is after off, man feels, and to many this season is in consequence one of the happiest of all the year. From September to November it is long way and if enjoyment enriches the time then it is a long spell until winter starts its reign.

Many societies which organize to entertain would be fortunate if they could secure an actor which would act the role of entertainer as well as did the greasy pig at the Shannonville Fair on the one hundredth anniversary of the institution of the show. This animal put more than the ordinary entertainment into the part it had to play and the spectators were naturally given the thrill spectators always desire.

Toil and pleasure, in their nature opposite, are yet linked together in a kind of necessary connection.—Livy.

Alexander the Great, reflecting on his friends degenerating into sloth and luxury, told them it was a most slavish thing to luxuriate and a most royal thing to labor.—Barrow.

It is only by labor that thought can be made healthy, and only by thought that labor can be made happy and the two cannot be separated with impunity.—John Ruskin.

ON A RAINY NIGHT

Now distant voices whisper,
Forgotten dreams awake,
And memory is weeping
As if her heart would break,
For mirth and jest and violins,
That were a song for me
In days when love and laughter
Were not sweet symphony.

But night must cease her weeping
And memory must fade,
And bear with them these longings,
These thoughts that fret and jade.
And with the wild storm's passing
And drying of her tears,
A taper in the heavens,
One lustrous star appears!

WHEN ARMIES ATTAINED THE MILLION MARK IN THE GREAT WAR the world looked on in wonder and awe, visioning the prophetic Armageddon, the "war to end all wars", which it wasn't. Now one can vision an army of school children totalling over one million who trooped back to school recently in greater New York City. Try and imagine 1,145,000 pupils after ten weeks vacation, trudging back to school—also 40,000 teachers and workers waiting to instruct this juvenile army in the three R's and other things. The school army, large as it is, is 6,400 smaller than last year. Improvements to the metropolitan school system includes 27 new buildings seating 50,000 pupils, which will materially alleviate overcrowding conditions prevailing in the past. With this youthful army marching on the metropolitan schools, and after—entering the world of work seeking jobs—where they can be useful and win fitting reward for their efforts, looks as if the old uns would not have to worry about relief workers, when the day grows dim and the night grows long.

TIMMINS PRESS CELEBRATES ITS FIFTH BIRTHDAY AS A DAILY this month, and is surely a lusty infant, ambitious, resourceful and optimistic, for the difficulties of operating a daily newspaper so far north of North Bay are known only to those who have experience in this field. For one thing it is difficult to secure and retain skilled help so far from bright lights of Toronto and the pay roll reacts to this difficulty Telegraph tolls are much heavier and all materials cost more because of the longer haul and being out of the beaten path. That was the way it was in the old Cobalt Daily Nugget days when the cost of operating a daily in the Cobalt camp became too great a burden and that newspaper was moved down to the main line at North Bay. The Timmins Press started as a weekly, the first issue being September 18, 1933. From a weekly the Press graduated to a semi-weekly, and five years ago blossomed out as a daily. Now the Timmins Press boasts a working staff of fifty, a complete modern equipment of machinery—transplanting as it were Times Square to Timmins, a mining camp town where a few years ago there was little but bush and muskeg, followed by Golden City, South Porcupine, and the modern city of Timmins enthroned upon a golden foundation—a Midas miracle which proves the saying that "truth is more stranger than fiction."

A STRING OF FIRST AID STATIONS ACROSS CANADA ARE ENVISIONED BY THE RED CROSS. In the United States a similar movement is on foot, utilizing service stations on main highways. Belleville City Council has added force to this movement by arranging for first aid training for members of the fire department and police force. Alderman Jesse Barlow, chairman of the Fire and Light Committee, who sponsored this movement, has the full backing of his colleagues in the council, and whole-hearted co-operation from the heads of the fire and police department. Many lives are lost through improper handling after an accident and much suffering needlessly caused. The first aid corps will be materially strengthened also if an inhalator is secured, this machine having saved many livess since its invention, particularly in the case of victims of fire and electric shocks. It is expected that instruction in first aid will begin in the very near future.

A deputation representing mining interests in this district is waiting upon the Government at Ottawa. It is claimed that Government publications dealing with the mineral resources and development of local mining fields are much out of date, so much so, that inquiries is done to those interested in the business. The delegation includes the following: Warden Peter MacLaren of Hastings County; Reeve Thompson of Madoc; Reeve Coulter of Stirling; Reeve Embury of Bancroft; Simeon Fox of Madoc; Robert Cooke, M. P. P.; Charles Ross of Madoc; Judge Wills and Judge Pralock of Belleville.

Rev. Rev. Dr. Biggsye, Rector of Christ Church, is attending a meeting of the Sunday School Commission of the General Synod of the Church of England, at Ottawa.

A trim sailing yacht with a history familiar to many of the older residents of Belleville, is in port. The yacht is the Kate Grey, owned by Capt. Dougherty of this city. She was at one time the fleetest craft of her class on Lake Ontario and won many prizes. Capt. Cuthbert, who learned out unsurvived cup defenders, was her builder.

The speeding event at the Belleville Fair in the afternoon which was of outstanding interest was the three minute class. Considerable interest was taken in the swing in the fact that the two horses were entered between the owners of which there is considerable rivalry, namely Jim K. owned by Mr. L. Ketchenson of Belleville and Major Hamburg owned by Mr. H. Ashley of Foxboro. The result was, as the majority of the spectators anticipated, a win for Jim K. The other horse entered was Minnie R. owned by Mr. J. Weese of Ameliasburg, Prince Edward County. In the first heat Major Hamburg won by a slight margin, but in the three succeeding heats Jim K. proved to be an easy winner. The heats were half-mile and $75.00 were divided between the contestants. Minnie R. was never a dangerous competitor. Time—1.06; 1.04½; 1.09; 1.08.

The city carters are doing business at the same old stand in Victoria Avenue today notwithstanding that the city council passed a bylaw to send them over the river. The carters told a reporter today that they will not go over the river, as no one wanting their services would go over there for them. They claim that the carters are the only driving constantly on Front St. would get all the work by Dundonald and Kingston, they state, carters are allowed to stand on the streets and not over the river.

Miss Downes, the instructor of the principal prizes at the Belleville Fair for white cheese and the second prize for colored cheese, came to the competition officially entitled a friend. Her chances were belittling by other exhibitors, as the factory at which she factory is owned by rock" smuggled, had a poor reputation. But her colored cheese girl succeeded; her product was perfect in the opinion of noted critics, although the contest was close Miss Downes has worked and didn't hard, and now, as ever, "Knowledge is Power."

Mr. McCracken, living near Roslin, in digging for water recently, struck a vein of what is said to be crude petroleum. It burns freely and there is said to be a great abundance of it. There is great excitement in the neighborhood over the discovery.

Little Benny's Note Book

Why, Willyum, for goodness sake, what's matter? ma said, and pop said, O, let's forget it.

Now Willyum I insist on being told, ma said, and pop said, Well, I have a feeling it may be unreasonable, but I have a depressing feeling that if you were to say to me now, Willyum, shall we have liver and onions for dinner tonite, I wouldn't get the slightest spark of pleasure from the once magic words, not the slightest flicker of what the French call Joy de veever. I know my teeth are useless but I'm worried just the same. Maybe you'd better fry it on me and see, he said.

Willyum Potts we had liver and onions the day before yesterday and you ate enough for 3 weeks to come, so let's change the subject for land sakes, ma said, and pop said, Maybe I ate too much, maybe that's just it, maybe I've gone stale on the best of all possible dishes, yes gods what a thought. Maybe you'd better ask me fast to find out my reaction, You can cross your fingers while you're asking me, he said.

Now Willyum, I'll do nothing of the kind, I'm not going to sit here and deliberately pull the wool over my own eyes and step into a yawning quicksand, ma said, and I said, I'll ask you, pop, do you want me to?

No, it wouldn't be the same thing, you haven't the authority, the question would be meaningless, pop said. Well, I guess I'll just have to let the thing pray on my mind all day, after all maybe it's just an idle fancy, dont give it another thought, he said, and ma said, I won't, thank you.

The result being we had fried chicken and one slice of liver and onions for pop.

Chicago, Sept. 22 (AP)—Summer by the unofficial calendar made its official departure this morning but it left a lot of high temperatures behind.

Fair and warmer was the forecast for a broad expanse of the United States which yesterday supported a record heat that hit the 100 degree mark.

The mercury today was a boon to owners of bathing resorts. It mounted unseasonably at dawn before the arrival of the first biting frost.

LABOR MINISTER

answer to questions and otherwise included the following:

He does not believe in the licensing of trade unions. He will encourage trade unions.

He would not coerce any minority and as could not promise legislation to compel employers to bargain with a union comprising a majority of their workers.

All measures possible have been and will be taken by the Liberal Government to improve conditions of the workers. Measures already taken are cancellation of Quebec power contracts, reclamation of timber limits from speculators, provincial income tax, collection of succession duties, Industrial Standard Act, Labor and Industry Board. Measure for the immediate future is unemployment insurance.

Labor's Peace Essential

Any complaints regarding workmen's compensation will receive consideration and changes necessary will be made.

Decision of wages and working conditions in the textile industry by the Labor and Industry Board will be expedited but cannot be promised before the election.

Textile workers have the government's sympathetic support and are entitled to every help in their fight in the recent strike. The government warned the company if it did not negotiate on a fair basis relief would be provided the strikers —the first time such a step was contemplated.

Industrial peace is essential to both workers and industry. Workers should never place industry in a position where it could not compete on export markets.

Blames Delay on Bennett

Mr. Hepburn told the meeting on taking office in 1934 the Liberal government realized the depression was going to end and that the workers were entitled to a larger return for their labor. At that time it decided on unemployment insurance and the Industrial Standard Act. But the Bennett government at Ottawa, for political reasons enacted unemployment insurance and minimum wage laws—which were ultimately held by the Privy Council to be within provincial jurisdiction.

"I admit we are about a year and a half behind in our program, but that is because of Mr. Bennett," he said.

He lauded Arthur Laverty, head of the Textile Workers' Union, as the type of leader he wished every union had. Then industrial disputes would be settled in an orderly way, without such conditions as prevailed in the United States.

Claims Help is All Canada

In collecting overdue succession duties from old estates, Mr. Hepburn claimed he had helped taxpayers of all Canada as well as of Ontario. Information obtained in estate investigations was turned over to federal income tax officers and it was often found income taxes as well as succession duties had been evaded.

From one estate on which Ontario had collected millions in succession duties, he understood the Dominion had also collected about $4,000,000 in income taxes, he said.

At Alexandria in an earlier speech, Premier Hepburn stated action would shortly be started against a second large Ottawa estate to collect $1,300,000 claimed due the province. Already steps have been taken to collect $3,500,000 alleged due by the Aikins $5,000,000 estate there.

Mr. Hepburn speaks this afternoon at Kemptville, home town of former Premier G. Howard Ferguson. Tonight he speaks in Brockville.

Thanksgiving Dinner Features 2nd Day Of Cooking School

The second day of the cooking school, held in Tabernacle Sunday School rooms, met with an enthusiastic reception again as Miss Small, instructress in a charming manner demonstrated the making of tasty dishes to her audience. Mr. Vanderlip of the gas department of the Public Utilities Commission pointed out the many advantages of the gas models on display.

Yesterday a delicious Thanksgiving dinner was prepared and the savoury odours from the tender roast stuffed chickens garnished with colorful broiled peaches, baked potatoes and glazed carrots were enough to make your mouth water. This menu was completed by a particularly delicious pumpkin pie topped with whipped cream, candied ginger, Pear upsidedown cake was made too and when these were taken from the oven each woman there was hoping to be fortunate enough to take one home.

Miss Helen Moon capably assisted Miss Small in the modernly equipped kitchen arranged on the stage.

PIRATE CHASERS GET NEW TRICKS IN PEACE YEARS

Marauding Submarines Able to Dive Deeper to Escape Bombs From Destroyers

New York, Sept. 23—(CP)—Warships on anti-piracy patrol in the Mediterranean are much better equipped to detect and combat submarines than allied destroyers were during the Great War. But modern sub likewise is much better prepared to protect itself.

On the side of the pirate chasers, naval experts point out these developments since 1918:

1. Improvement of high frequency sound detectors and directive finders by which surface craft can detect and locate submarines.

2. Improvement in the accuracy of depth bomb setting.

Depth bombs—sailors call them "ash cans"—are, in fact, the one effective weapon against a submerged submarine.

Cylindrical metal cases, they look like five-gallon paint drums but are loaded with 300 or 400 pounds of TNT or other high explosive. They can be set to go off at any desired depth. Water pressure is most commonly used to set off the explosive.

Depth bombs can be either rolled overboard off the stern of a destroyer or shot from Y-guns. These are slingshot-shaped, double barrelled cannons mounted astern on the deck of the subchaser or destroyer. They shoot two bombs at a time over opposite sides.

Fights Sub

Checking the sub's location every 10 or 15 seconds by sounder devices, the destroyer plows the water directly overhead, dropping a barrage of depth bombs in her wake.

A direct hit by a depth bomb is almost certain to sink a submarine, navy men say, and a bomb exploding within 100 feet will probably put it out of control.

But submarine improvements since the war have about kept pace with the advances in sub-fighting weapons. Submarines today are much faster than the German U-boats of the Great War. And they can duck under more quickly, go deeper and stay under longer.

A modern sub can stay under water 72 hours, compared with 24 hours in 1917, and dive as deep as to 300 feet below the surface, while the Great War U-boats dared not dive below 200 feet.

The sub's big disadvantage is that in clear water her dark shadow shows on the surface even from 100 feet below.

S. A. BRIGADIER TO VISIT CITY

BELIEVES POWER

Stone and Webster engineering firm are the directors of the largest power interests in the United States—the Edison Electric Institute," said the Conservative leader. This institute succeeded the National Electric Association which, Mr. Rowe said, was "notorious as an enemy of public ownership in the United States."

Directors he referred to, he said, were George O. Mumford, vice-president of Stone and Webster and a member of the Edison Electric Board of Trustees; G. H. Clifford, also a member of the Edison Electric Institute operating committee; and David N. Debard, who besides being a Stone and Webster director was chairman of the Edison Electric Institute sales committee.

Premier For Statement on Power

The Premier refused to deliver a statement by competent engineers denying a power shortage faced the province, continuing: Mr. Rowe, because the government head was aware of the situation. He challenged the Premier to deny he was negotiating for more Quebec power after cancelling contracts with Quebec firms.

In an attempt to support his power shortage charge, Mr. Rowe read from the Ontario Public News and Engineering magazine of Aug. 16. The Conservative leader said an article in this publication claimed the Niagara System faced a shortage unless action was taken shortly.

Charges Bids For Support

In his Petrolia address, Mr. Rowe accused the government of spending large sums of money on the eve of elections as a bid for power. In advertising where a Cabinet Minister visited a hospital was being erected, he claimed, and $60,000,000 was being expended on highways.

In referring to steps a Conservative government would take to help agriculture, Mr. Rowe declared a zoning system to determine the best seed grain and livestock districts in the province would be established if his party was elected. Agriculture grants would be restored, marketing facilities increased and a system of cold storage warehouses considered.

The rooms were prettily decorated in pink and white as also was the large basket which contained the many useful gifts, which Miss Sears received. The evening was spent in singing, reciting and Scriptural quotations also Mrs. Kleinsteiber gave an interesting talk on "Seek Ye First the Kingdom of God and His Righteousness and all these things shall be added unto you". Refreshments were served and the evening closed with singing "Blest Be the Tie that Binds".

Weddings

CUMMINGS—SEARS

Evangel Temple was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Saturday evening, when Miss Myrtle Sears of Belleville, became the bride of Mr. Wesley Cummings also of this city. The bride entered the church, attended by Mrs. J. C. Kleinsteiber, who gave her away also little cousin, Miss Hazel Dent, bridesmaid, to the strains of a wedding march played by Miss Dorothy Morgan. The bride looked very dainty dressed in white and carrying pink and white asters. The church was prettily decorated with ferns and flowers. Pastor J. C. Kleinsteiber performed the ceremony. Miss Noreen Sears sang "Keep in Touch with Jesus" during the signing of the register. The groom was attended by his brother, Mr. Harry Cummings of Point Anne. The happy couple will reside in Belleville.

COOKE—SULLIVAN

A lovely autumn wedding was solemnized in St. Michael's Church this morning, at six-thirty o'clock, when Mary Madeline, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. Sullivan, George Street, this city became the bride of Mr. Ernest George Cooke, also of Belleville and son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Cooke. The ceremony was performed by Right Rev. Monsignor J. F. Nicholson.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of navy blue triple sheer, navy off-the-face style hat and a shoulder bouquet of ophelia roses and lilies-of-the-valley.

Miss Marjorie Quinn, as bridesmaid, was becomingly attired in navy and white figured sheer with a bouquet of Talisman roses.

Mr. William Quinn attended the groom as best man.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, where Mrs. Sullivan assisted in receiving wearing black sheer with black hat and deep red roses. Mrs. Cooke, mother of the groom, who also received wore a gown of grey triple sheer.

The bridal couple left on a trip to Watertown, Rochester, Buffalo and Niagara Falls, the bride travelling in an ensemble of grey with navy accessories. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Cooke will reside in Belleville.

HAINES—ALLORE

A pretty autumn wedding was solemnized at the Rectory of St. Michael's Church of the Archangel on Tuesday morning by the Rev. Monsignor J. F. Nicholson, V.G., officiating when Doris Veronica, daughter of Mrs. Felix Allore and the late Mr. F. Allore, became the bride of Elmer John "Jack" Haines, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Haines of this city.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Walter Allore, was charmingly gowned in a floor-length dress of Bedford cord satin with silver shoes and carried Butterfly roses. The bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. Frank Munroe of Napanee, who wore Midnight Blue chiffon velvet, and carried a bouquet of American Beauty roses. The groom was attended by Mr. Frank Munroe, of Napanee.

Following the ceremony the bridal party were tendered a wedding breakfast at the Belvidere Hotel. Mrs. F. Allore, mother of the bride being hostess. A number of intimate friends and relatives were present.

The happy couple left on a wedding trip to Cleveland, Ohio. For travelling the bride wore a charming ensemble of navy and mint, her coat being green with accessories to match. Upon their return they will take up residence in Belleville, both the bride and groom being well known locally and popular members of their set. Many beautiful bridal gifts were attested the bride and displayed at the wedding breakfast.

Curb Figure Faults When You're Young

Jean Muir
Posture, she knows, is closely related to beauty

By Helen Follett

Remember this, you girl soldiers who are marching for beauty glories, the figure is in the making in youth, and, unless it is carried beautifully, it is in the remaking in later years. According to the habits of movement the way the body is carried, it keeps its youthful outline or it devulges into what is known as the meal bag shape.

Some day more attention will be paid to physical education. We won't see so many little slimps going round with shoulders slumped, heads farther forward than chests, and backs showing unlovely lines. There will be pride of carriage. Muscles will be strong and resilient.

You will see middle-aged women who are as graceful as saplings. They have made it a habit to stand beautifully, to keep the backbone on the job, stretched full length. The fibres of the abdomen have kept strong and those of the back healthy. These women look vibrant and spirited; they inspire admiration. It is worth thinking about, this posture topic. You may get tired hearing about it, but it is the making of a woman.

No woman is entitled to use perfume unless she has a body that is kept clean by a daily scouring with soap and water and doesn't care how big the laundry bill may be. Soiled undies pick up perspiration and carry a foul odor in fast a few days.

Pay no attention to what your friend tells you about perfumes. Buy the scent that makes an appeal to your nose, which is the best guide. You'll have to live with the perfume, and that's what matters most.

Collect Carload Of Goods for West

On September 30th a carload of provisions and clothing for the drought area sufferers in Western Canada will be collected under the auspices of the Belleville Ministerial Association, acting for Belleville and the immediate district.

It is expected that a full carload of goods will be secured then. The collection of provisions and clothing will be interdenominational.

Ministers of the city and intermediate environs and the Salvation Army adjutant will on Sunday make an appeal for goods and cash for this purpose. Donations are being taken through these organizations.

Those who wish to contribute to the cause are asked to get in touch with the ministers and the Salvation Army officer.

CALLING 'EM
Between the Lines
with
Ken J. Colling

The Belleville Panthers may have lost their initial football game of the season, but they were far from vanquished by their opponents, the highly heralded R.C.A.F. 'Flyers', in the matter of fact the Panthers' line held up remarkably well and with one exception stopped the Airmen and matched them at every turn. The Panthers were led and inspired by Mac "Farmer" Rigby, who stood out as the star of the game despite the fact he has been unable to attend pre-season practices to any degree of regularity. In the early stages the Panthers were fumbling the ball with one exception but they improved as the game progressed. Yesterday's crowd of sixteen hundred and fans was the largest attendance ever to witness the fall classic in Belleville, but the success was largely due to the number of followers of the Flyers, fully 600 in all. Following Rigby was Ziffle, of the Flyers, his plunges were always dangerous.

Laurie Gibson, ace punter of the Flyers, was out in northern Ontario, Gibson having just returned from a month's holidays in Quebec. He will be out the next game, however. The Panthers were greatly strengthened in line and power in their backfield if they expect to win the local league title, and Coach Duffield is looking to see the splendid manner in which they functioned in this game repeated. The Panthers, especially the work of the youngster and gave-up-for-lost prospect. The addition of a couple of veterans we know is only what is needed to make a powerful lot of difference in the Panthers' chances of success. Both blokers receiving plenty of protection, with only short two yard gains to show for it, but then they would be well advised to open up a little more of the forward passes, as their lack of attempted passes in this department often proves costly. A more open play's necessary, but Coach Duffield has worked marvels with the boys and I think they have their first game over, much improvement is looked for.

Coach Billie Hughes trotting out a new team for the Flyers and being equally as good as the regulars which is at least no cause for team. Regardless as to what replacements were made the Flyers remained the same in the way of strength, such not always being the case with the Panthers. The Flyers possessed more speed in the backfield, with Ziffle and Hudson two successful ball carriers.

Coach Archie Duffield made it quite clear with the local football followers that they cannot turn out regularly to practice were the players they would get the preference when the league games are being played. "No matter how good a player is he must practice. I would not take a chance in sending in a man who is an unconditioned player, the responsibility would be great. If a boy is interested enough to attend the majority of practices he should be given consideration over others who attend at their hearts' desires," stated Coach Duffield recently. He entirely agrees with the above statement and would like to see some of the local veteran players out to scrimmage practice as early as possible.

Ordinarily the wrestling fans can be assured of at least one good match when Lou Daniel, the mediaeval Dan, Peterff comes to town, but on Friday night double trouble will be the order and good as the wrestlers know full well that they are in for a battle and that the so-called amateurs, who have been performing locally under the Midway A. C. colors lately. Incidentally this boy Peterff can please the fans. Maple Leaf Gardens just the same as he can Maple Leaf Gardens' favorite Mickie Guyetty, another old favourite.

Boxing received its greatest boost in recent years at the Armouries evening when the R.C.A.F. sports club presented eight bouts, four of which were really high-class. It is quite evident from the result of the eight bouts that saw outsiders in competition, that the Airport boys are in the pink, their bouts being well matched, although in a couple of incidents the outsiders put up a strong argument and provided plenty of opposition. They always the sailors at last night's card will surely bring the boxing in the popular eye of the local sports fans.

There were five outstanding scrappers on last night's card who we believe would prove popular favourites if matched with suitable opponents at some future date. We refer to Pilot Officer Lieff, the golden-haired Flying Officer who beat F. O. Sheffield and Pilot Officer Fee, former R. M. C. boxer. Both of these boys are clever boxers and they were what is commonly known as "scientific scrappers." Lieff, who possesses two good hands, is a fine left hand hitter. Then there is S. Stoney, the Scrub, who Matt Stormer, the local boxing authority says will be a star show. Storms came to us and stated he would like a bout with the former sailor. All in all last night's card did more to revive boxing in Belleville than any show of its kind ever, loyalty in some considerable time.

Frank Sedore's Point Anne "Dementoner" had a tough old battle of it before they located over the Orillia Wasps in the provincial semi-finals. First the Orillia point spread was cut down, then were ironed out at Orillia and on Tuesday started for Orillia. They stepped off to Dementoner by pain again. Yesterday, however, the Dementoners made the journey and ideal weather conditions prevailed, so did the playing of the fields Anne stand on their sandy made their hits count into runs to defeat the Dementoner's back. Dementoner scattered the homesters' hits well.

Two surprises were seen in the provincial sporting realm Yesterday—the former by the defeat by the Cobalt ball club over Hamilton and the defeat of the Orillia Terriers at Lakefield by the Orillia Indians in the home bar last night.

COLUMBUS 2 UP ON MILWAUKEE

Four Wins Required to Capture American Association Title

Columbus, O., Sept. 23 (AP)—The American Association championship was in the hands of Red Birds of Columbus today as they travelled the easier half of the journey today to the Little World Series.

Taking their second game last night, 3 to 2, left them two up and two to go on Milwaukee but they remained unperturbed after their night before feeling confident or the final championship playoff series.

With four wins required to place either team in the Little World Series against the International League winner, the scene shifts Friday to Milwaukee where the Brewers have a decided advantage on the Red Birds on the basis of the season's record against each other.

day. In so far as the Japanese were concerned—they'll it was only for 10 minutes. At dawn 250,000 Japanese troops, led by 200 tanks, crossed Shanghai fronts paused to pay homage to the memory of the late president of the Sun Yat-sen Dynasty.

Peiping, Sept. 23.—(AP)—Japanese military forces announced today they had shattered the Chinese defenses in the Taierchwang area of Tsingtu and had driven the Chinese back in hand-to-hand fighting to within a mile of that strategic base 90 miles south of Tsingtu.

Japanese said Kuochuang village, three quarters of a mile north of Taierchwang, fell to their attack and the capture of the city itself was imminent.

The offensive against the Chinese defence cities began as soon as darkness fell last night, the Japanese said, when they forced the crossing of the Tuo river eight miles above Hsuchiapu and the trunk railroad to Hankow and then assaulted the concrete Chinese redoubts that form a virtually unbroken wall across central Onpo, Province.

The Japanese storm troops fought hand-to-hand with the Chinese in the darkness, the Japanese announcement said, and broke through the Chinese line.

Flyers Show Punch in Pinches To Win Opening Rugby Game From Panthers by Score of 8-3

Carried More Power in Backfield And Heavier on Line

FUMBLES COSTLY

Ostrom, Baker And McCreary Hurt While Rigby Star

A scarlet clad avalanche of gridders from the Trenton R.C.A.F. rolled over the Belleville Panthers to win the opening game of the Eastern Ontario intermediate rugby series of the O.R.F.U. by the score of 8 to 3 at the Belleville Exhibition Park before 1,000 fans yesterday afternoon. The game was interesting but suitable for rugby football. The intense heat taking its toll upon the finally conditioned players. The Panthers suffered considerable as the result of injuries in the first half which saw quarterback Hatlieu, however, threw injuries mitigating the locals in some attempts. The halfback line of scrimmage equalled the visitors, in every respect, with Ross Cole, especially, outstanding. The locals fiercely continued fumbling of the ball once they had gained repeated yardage. The "Flyers" from the R. C. A. F. airbase were fast and overpowered into the game and undeserved to rip and tear their valorous way through the Panther line, that held miraculously well.

The Flyers carried more speed behind the line, however.

The heavier in the art of the game, going either way, went to Mass "Tarzan" Rigby, who could not help but impress by his blocking and tackling and also in carrying the ball. He played himself into critical exhaustion and never quit trying. Biffle, of the Flyers, followed in line, his repeated plunges for gains being one of the features.

Punting Honors Divided

The punting honors were divided about evenly between "Red" Johnston, punting for the Panthers, and his rival Rigerty of the Flyers. Despite the fact the Flyers tried repeatedly to take advantage of the smaller Belleville, in the first half, the visitors were unsuccessful and at the half the score was 3 to 0 for the Flyers at the half way mark. The third quarter saw the R.C.A.F. successfully completed a major score and Rigerty added the extra placement for the locals, saw the greatest amount of fumbling, however. Continued fumbling around the ends marred the pastime from being more open.

Belleville attempted six forward passes during the game while the Flyers tried only three; all being incomplete. The longest run of the day was made by the Panthers as Schreider and Ostrom raced for as a Flyer punt at the Belleville safety. Bonnouff, Faulkner, Johnson, Bradford and Kaley played well for the locals with Rigby starring. Led by Biffle, Leonard, Huston, Blanchard, Crawford, Spratson and Beatty carried well for the Trenton-ites while Spencer handled the Flyers well at quarter.

The Play

The Panthers kicked off facing the sun and the wind to return punt, fumbled on their own 43 yard line, but got back the ball. Johnston was injured in a scrimmage and replaced by Hatlieu. Johnston kicked and after Biffle brought the ball up ten, Rigerty kicked to the deadline for a point—R.C.A.F. 1, Panthers 0. Biffle and Leonard carried the ball to give the Flyers a first down in the second quarter but they were offside and penalized ten yards. Blanchard carried for a gain of seven yards, but on the next play Belleville gained on their own 42 yard line and Rigerty again punted to have Ostrom run back to the Panther 20 yard line. Ostrom carried the ball around the Flyers for a ten yard loss and as Rigerty kicked out of danger, Ostrom caught the ball, ran 15 yards to the deadline to take Hatlieu's place. Hatlieu who carried to midfield where Schreider carried to the deadline. Schreider carried on 15 yards more for a gain of 40 yards to the deadline and a gain of 80 yards in the drive. Rigerty kicked out of danger. The ball ended 3-0 for the Flyers. Ostrom carried a crushed shoulder in that last play, while Morley Baker injured his knee.

Touch Scored

With Rigby in the backfield and Storey calling the plays at quarter, Ostrom and Baker being unable to play, the Panthers tried to penetrate the Flyers' line but failed. Results ended on a third down, with Biffle moved the yard marker to the nine plunges to have Huston carry the ball over the line for a touchdown. The Flyers failed to attempted convert making the score 5-0. In their kick-off Belleville kicked severely unsuccessful forward passes, when Storey finally found a flat pass to Kelly for a gain and Rigby crashed through the Flyer line on two consecutive plunges for a gain of 26 yards in all, bringing the ball to the Flyers 14 five yard plays, when Schreider booted a splendid placement for three points to make the count 7-3 as the last quarter opened.

The last quarter was rather listless as both squads showed the lack of condition and substitutions were frequent. It developed into two attempted plunges and a kick, although Ireland missed a perfect forward pass from Storey, when in the clear, to end what chances Belleville might have had to win. Cowville might have had to win. Cowville might have had to win. Cow

GOOD RACING

Novelty Features And Midway Offer Most Attractions

Stirling, Sept. 21 (Special)—A light breeze fanned away the hazy early morning mist and a bright warm sun beamed forth to make weather conditions ideal as over two thousand people gathered on the Stirling Fair grounds for the annual Fall Fair sponsored and directed by the Stirling Agricultural Society. The first day Tuesday was spent in arranging the exhibits in the Agricultural hall where grain, fruit, flowers and the articles entered in the Hastings County championship fair were placed on exhibition. With the date of the Stirling Fair conflicting with Kingston Fair, there was a smaller exhibit in the entries for poultry, cattle, sheep and swine, but the entry in the various classes of the horse sheds made up for the shortage in point of good horse flesh, were given a real treat a midway of the usual games of chance, and vendors of fruit chiefly grapes and peaches harboured most of the crowd throughout the afternoon. But even the fruit vendors complained on the decrease of sales as compared to last year. Great interest was shown in the trials of speed on a track, which according to the driver was in excellent condition.

Much Keen Wie

Baseball fans also came into their own, when Springbrook and Minto met in a double header fixture, which they split each scoring a win.

A new feature of the fair was the display of manual training and household science for competition and open only to pupils of the Stirling school. Besides coveries by the Stirling Boy Scout Oubs under the leadership of Mr. C. O. Wells and St. Andrew's Presbyterian Ladies' Association reported good patronage of those in attendance. Farmers were greatly interested in the display of tractors and mechanized farm implements exhibited. While the ladies turned their attention to the modern electric kitchen on wheels. .

Throughout the day excellent music was provided by the Stirling Citizens' Band under the leadership of band leader Maurice Bell. Gaily dressed in the bright uniforms of the band displayed both smartness of appearance and splendid musical knowledge in the presentation of many fine selections. Another added feature was the installation of a public address system through the medium of which everyone on the ground was kept posted on coming events of the day's programme by periodical announcements from the grandstand.

praise, his trail of "broken promises to the farmers," the liquor question, the unemployed war veterans' matter, even the matter of education for the growing children of the province will be all factors that will send him down the losing road, a man who may learn, it is hoped, through the bravery action predicted Mrs. Van Koughnet.

"Women in the homes are the ones who know whether this province has enough electric energy or not. We are in the very heart of it in our various appliances. We have found out and know that the story of excess electricity is not that at all. In fact, Ontario could do with a lot more, and will need it long before that ten year contract is up. And when that contract is up, then the Province is certainly going to pay a very handsome price for renewal of contract, if it gets a renewal at all. Then this shortage does not come, 5 year or so, where are we going to be then?"

THE ADS ARE Part of THE NEWS

Mrs. Van Koughnet's speech was an informal one, delivered with only brief help from the printed page, but in another question which she revived, through reference in a small leaflet, she listed just a few items which were not carried on to the benefit of the rural residents of the province, in spite of promises declared by the speaker, to have been made by Mr. Hepburn, that he would do everything in his power to further their lot.

"What has he done—he promised relief in June, 1934, what happened? When he came in, livestock grants were taken away, farmers' grants also; also he abolished the Farm Loan Board and another system of mortgages was introduced. How did he help them?"

Electors Betrayed By Sale

Through the sale of Ontario Hydro Electric Power, the electors of the Province were betrayed and country sold out, it was formally or firmly asserted. The large building, one of the showiest and most impressive and known throughout the whole Empire, had produced its worth and more to the residents of this country. It had spurred trade, it had advertised Canada. It stood for some of the dignity and the ruggedness not found in other countries. It was a symbol of Canadians and their art of living and mode of work.

Mr. Hepburn when he sold that just created himself a political hero, but the people's claimed of the matter.

Speaking as brief was she with "one of the most important reforms on the calendar of any party elected to power," the Hepburn Liquor bill "Hepburn"; was Mrs. Koukhnet quoted the Liquor Legislation.

"Two Girls", conveyed her scorn at the manner in which young girls, Ontario's most precious, and the manner in general in which the whole matter is being handled. Don't know and I know that many, many more licenses have been issued than should be issued by law than under the old bar system, particularly for standard hotels. She has a right to have them, and have proper supervision over them, which, maybe, have not inspectors in the warehouses. Mr. Rowe is going to adjust the matter after a year's trial to better conditions, but the damage is done and raw chaos two girls in another city last evening, staggering along the street, not knowing, or caring perhaps where they were going. It was then where Ontario-Hirry at night."

Appeals For Organization

Women are the majority vote in this Province, and it is up to us to take over for a while and see for ourselves, what they have to see, for example why 353 returned war veterans were fired from their jobs just after Mitchell Hepburn took over, this alone is a disgrace to the country, and a disgrace to those who lie over there and did not come back, and it is unbelievable to be ousted around in the same style as many are. We should see why millions of acres of our Crown lands, a heritage for which we have fought, may be disposed of to outside interests. That is a trust which should be protected for the trust to those whom we elect.

"But after all, Mr. Hepburn isn't a Liberal. He admits it himself when he once said 'I am not a Mackenzie King Liberal'."

Again appealing to women of Belleville to organize, and to take more of the opportunity in managing affairs of their state than they have done, Mrs. Van Koughnet cited the record of Belleville in the words of Mayor Ellis, "Richard Arnold in this city will get just as much support in his riding as the Hon. Earl Rowe" and urged electors of the country, who are at least seeking "sound and safer government."

A vote of thanks for her excellent address was tendered by Mrs. Hyde and seconded by Mrs. McGinnis.

Previous to the chief speaker's address, Mr. Harry Rollins, president of the Men's organization? again urged and emphasized the need for heavy work during the next week. "Get on the telephone, get on the street, anyway, as long as you can get them to the polls on the 29th", he pleaded.

Mr. Geo. A. Reid, in a brief resume of the past actions of the present government told his hearers that he had been making a tour of the northeast section of Hastings and in to Lennox and Addington where a strong anti-Liberal feeling "exists everywhere".

"Conditions in that country have been appalling under the present rule. People there want work of direction or instruction, to anything as long as they can make a beer living . . . that how can they when things are carried on as they are?"

Variety Entertainment

"Pay Envelope" had heard of some dissatisfaction among road workers near Denbigh. They had a reason to be dissatisfied. A stretch of road is being laid there, and the men were getting their pay of twenty-five cents per hour. That contract was changed over and another contractor came in. He carried with him two road making machines, which can take the place of eighty men each in a day. What is going to happen to about fifty contracts out like that in a land where unemployed?

"One man I met had always been a good Liberal. That he had told me. He told me why. He showed me that though others getting it, he had just fourteen days work for the whole of last year" that was in Provincial. Addington the district in which I have been engaged speaking for Mr. Black the candidate there."

During the evening a variety of entertainment by tap dancers, singers and others was offered. The feature offering was a duet by Mrs. Morley Duff also pianist, and Mrs. (Dr.) Kinnear, with several encores.

Refreshments were served at the close.

TORONTO - 240 JARVIS STREET

She thrust the study door open. Norris Fordell was at his desk, lying forward on it, his head hidden by the double-deck files he took. She spoke his name. There was no answer. Then, suddenly, she screamed.

INSTALMENT 8.

Polly's one involuntary scream brought Angus bounding up the steps and into the house. But he did not draw Julian from the library across the hall. When she thought of this, later, and went to the library to tell Julian his stepfather had been murdered, Julian was not there.

But now Angus was beside her, an arm about her shoulders. "Don't let go, Polly," he said, gently. "Try to save yourself for the ordeal ahead. The police will be here soon. Get ahold of your mind."

Polly said, "I'm all right, Angus. Just rattled a little. I don't know why I shrieked that way. I've never been a screamer."

He moved away from her, stood within a few feet of the desk and leaned down at the inert figure that had been Norris Fordell.

Polly said, trying to will sense and order into her disordered and kindled thoughts, "I heard the shot, Angus. Tod heard it, too. We were in his room."

He turned and looked at her, puzzled. "Then why didn't you—"

"Just a few minutes ago. That's why I came down. I don't know why, but I thought of Mr. Fordell at once."

"A shot," Angus said, thoughtfully. "That's a sticker." He did not say why it was a sticker.

He faced the desk once more and because she knew he was now the detective and was fixing all that he saw indelibly in memory, she was suddenly viewing the unnerving scene through his eyes. For the first time she noted the exact position of the body. It was as if Norris Fordell had started to rise and fallen forward on the desk. She saw the red splashes on the desk, the papers on the floor where they had been pushed from the desk by Fordell's own hand.

She saw, too, the blue-black automatic in the upper of the double-deck letter baskets, and on the floor, at Fordell's right, the curiously twisted newspaper.

Angus circled the desk, slowly. He gave the automatic in the letter basket no more than a casual glance; but the crumpled newspaper on the floor he seemed to find of uncommon interest. He sat on his heels and moved around it, viewing it from every possible angle. But he was careful not to touch it.

The newspaper looked as if it had been opened wide, caught in the middle and twisted into the shape of a closed umbrella. It was smeared with blood and there was a sharp tear in that portion of it visible to Polly.

At last Angus pulled his gaze from the twisted paper and went behind the desk, facing the window at Fordell's back. He took a handkerchief from his pocket, wrapped it around his right hand and bent over. A moment later he gave a little grunt of surprise.

"The screen is unlocked," he said without turning, "and there's a two-inch gap in the wire above the lock. That calls for a look outside." He came around from behind the desk and stood for a time staring at the door to Nip Williams' room. His eyes swung from the door to Polly's tense features. Then he looked at the door again and suddenly went to it and cautiously turned the knob—and was obviously surprised to find it locked. He came across the room.

He said, "When we were looking around here this morning, the screen was locked and Nips' door was unlocked. Now Nip's door is locked and the screen is unlocked. . . . I think I'll use the living room extension. It might not be wise to leave my fingerprints on Fordell's phone."

He took the key from the inside of the door, inserted it from the outside and when Polly moved into the living room, he closed the door, locked it and put the key in his pocket.

Polly went out and leaned against the porch banister. Presently Angus came to her there.

"Now the real starts," he said. "If you've never been through a murder investigation before, you're in for a memorable experience. Come along, we have one more job to do before they get here."

She followed him down the steps. It was no longer raining. They went around the house until they stood almost directly under the study window at Fordell's back. The little light that filtered through the drawn shade threw an eerie glow on the front of the servants' house, but none on the ground beneath the window.

Angus struck a match and bent down—and suddenly pointed a finger. The grass he indicated lay back like the open petals of a flower and even at Polly stared there at it the glistening shine seemed to be lifting.

"Some one stood there," Angus said. "Before the rain, obviously. But it may have been ten minutes or two hours before. That first will go on rising half the night, until it stands as dead as it did before it was stepped on." And then, while she saw the two identical depressions in the sand trench between the cleanly edged lawn and the battered wall, "Step-ladder," Angus said, laconically.

Polly thought, "I saw a step-ladder today, somewhere in this yard—" and was taking over her memory when she happened to raise her eyes to the study window and saw, just across the drawn shade, she clawed at Angus's arm and pointed at the window. But the shadow was no longer there and it did not appear again.

Angus pulled her arm, said gently, "The door is locked and the key is my pocket, Polly. Don't let our imagination play tricks on you."

Once more he doubled up and studied the little rectangular marks in that long, sandy strip made by rainwater dropping from the eaves. "If that's a step-ladder, and that ladder, they'll be on the trail of something," he said.

Suddenly Polly remembered. "I saw a step-ladder on the porch of the servants' cottage this afternoon, Angus."

Instantly he was moving off. A few moments later he scrabbled a match into flame. "It's there, all right," he said. "Was that where you saw it?"

"No," Polly replied, quickly. "It was standing up, leaning against the wall."

He leaned over to examine the ladder in the flickering light. It was the common type of step-ladder, a section of steps hinged to a less sturdy supporting section with an X brace. Angus looked at the bottoms of the supporting section and grunted.

"Sand," he said. "This is the ladder, without a doubt."

"But——" Polly said, hesitantly, "you can't really prove anything by that, can you? I mean——"

"That depends," Angus said, "on whether there are finger-prints on it. The mere fact that we have found a ladder doesn't mean anything, of course." He sounded a trifle impatient.

They began to retrace their steps and had reached the corner of the house when Angus caught Polly's arm.

"Maid!" he whispered, hoarsely. "Passing the oleander bush in the corner of the yard. Outside the fence—going toward my place."

Polly looked in the direction of the oleander bush, which lay half in shadow, half in the angle of light from the front doorway; but she could see nothing resembling a human form, nothing moving. She knew that if Tony Marco had been walking by the oleander bush when Angus first spoke, he had immediately passed out of the light for the area between that side of the yard and Angus's house was utter blackness.

Genuinely disappointed, she said, "I wish you had spotted him ten seconds earlier, Angus. Marco is the one member of the menage I've never seen close. Of course, suppose," she began, and checked herself. But the question was implicit in her mood: Had she been Marco's shadow on the shade? He had been reading, earlier, something more reasonable than that he had a dagger secreted in his room.

"I've a notion," Angus said, "that he found Fordell's door locked and decided to go over and drag me out. Marco is one of the few persons who never lets himself forget I was once a detective. I think I'll follow him over and see what he has to say. Want to come with me, Polly?"

"I think I should stay here," Polly said. "The police——"

"That's right," Angus agreed. "Better not let them find the place deserted. Here's the key to the study, though I'll probably be back before they arrive." He put the key in her hand. "And if I were you, I'd let the delegated authorities inform the family of what's happened. Evelyn is likely to put on a show. Darned unpleasant business, anyway. I'll be back in a shake."
